Morgenthau Tells Of Five-Point Plan 'For Drafting Money As Well as Men'

By George Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday announced that the Administration proposes to finance the Nation's huge defense bill by "drafting money as well as men" in an effort to put what he called "slacker" dollars to work.

He advanced a five-point financing plan, which he said was "the Treasury's contribution to national unity."

1. Tomorrow the Treasury will issue $500,000,000 of fully taxable five-year defense notes, the first fully taxable note issued in the Treasury's history.

2. As soon as the new Congress meets, the Treasury will ask for discretionary authority to end the tax-exemption privilege in all future issues of bonds, including United States Savings bonds and Government-guaranteed obligations. (The Treasury now has this discretion over notes.)

3. If Congress assents, the Government will then launch a Nation-wide campaign, like the World War Liberty Loan drives, to sell "baby bonds" in amounts as low as $5 and even to sell bond stamps for as little as 25 cents.

4. Congress will also be asked to raise the national debt limit to $65,000,000,000 (it is now $45,000,000,000) and to remove the "partition" that gives Morgenthau authority to issue $4,000,000,000 of a special class of 5-year defense notes, outside the debt limit.

5. The Administration will urge States and municipalities to follow the Federal lead by abolishing the tax exemption privilege for their obligations.

Draft of Money

Telling his press conference that he spoke for President Roosevelt, the Treasury Secretary said his program has already met an "encouraging reception" on Capitol Hill.

"People who have the money should be delighted to pay taxes when the money goes for National defense," he said.

"We feel that we should draft all money—that is—that all money should pay taxes toward the defense program.

"At present it is possible for a man with a million dollars to buy tax-exempt Government bonds and live at Palm Beach in the winter, while the soldiers are doing eight hours of work a day for $30 a month.

"I don't think that helps toward national unity. We are going to try to put what I call 'slacker money' to work. We talked this over with

'Almost Criminal'

First Lady Assails D. C. Housing Lack

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared last night that Washington's housing shortage makes it "almost criminal" to bring people to the Capital to "work for their country."

She told the Washington Housing Association's annual public meeting that she could recall the devastating flu epidemic that ravaged this overcrowded city in the World War, and stated:

"I hope very much that in this coming year we are going to bend our energies to keeping constantly before Congress and before our various officers of the government the need for decent housing, primarily as a measure of defense.

"It seems to me almost criminal to ask young people and older people to come to Washington and work for their country and have so little thought about what happens to them in their private lives."

More than 700 persons attended the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce, forcing the associatoin to move to a larger auditorium in the same building to accommodate the crowd.

They heard a report from Rear Admiral George Pettingill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, which stated that at least 3,444 new housing units are needed immediately to care for civilian and enlisted personnel in the metropolitan area.

The report, which was read by Commander David H. Stuart in the admiral's absence, warned that the defense program is being obstructed by the housing shortage. Unable to find suitable quarters, a "great many" skilled workers have quit

Huge Nazi Store Of Aviation Gas Blows Up; Blaze Still Spreading

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 9.—A huge reservoir of airplane gasoline for Germany exploded and spread a serious fire over Rumanian oil fields near Ploesti today.

First reports said a workman's cigaret caused the blast in the grounds of the Standard (Rumanian-owned) Co.

German fire-fighters and Rumanian soldiers joined in efforts to extinguish the fires but late tonight they were reported still rapidly spreading.

Damaged in Quake

[The Rumanian oil fields, one of Germany's main sources of supply for the petroleum she needs to operate her air fleets and mechanized armies, suffered an undisclosed amount of damage a month ago when severe earthquakes struck the harassed Balkan kingdom. First reports of the earthquake told of widespread fires in the fields, but later official statements minimized the damage, saying only that some production equipment had been wrecked.

[Only Sunday official circles in Bucharest reported that Rumania has promised to deliver 3,000,000 tons of oil to Germany in 1941. That would be double the total 1939 exports, and twice the total sales to Germany in the record year of 1938.

[Rumania has already taken steps to control foreign-owned oil properties—largely British and American—and last week took similar steps designed to assure control of oil transport facilities, such as pipelines and Danube barge fleets. Transportation difficulties have hampered the delivery of oil to the Reich for months, despite constant pressure by the Germans.

[Not only has the supply of oil from Rumania failed to reach German hopes, but according to British official statements, Royal Air Force bombers have considerably reduced the output of Germany's synthetic petroleum plants, most important of which is at Leuna, one of the most frequently mentioned objectives in British air communiques.]

Union Leader Ends Strike At War Dept.

Carpenters Ordered Back to Jobs Today Pending A.F.L. Ruling

Frank Howard, union business agent, last night ordered back to work today 115 carpenters called out in a jurisdictional strike at the new War Department Building yesterday.

Union representatives and United States Conciliation Service mediators said swift conclusion of the strike was effected through the intercession of William L. Hutcheson, general president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

It was explained the carpenters would continue at work pending a decision "as to competent jurisdiction between the carpenters and lathers regarding certain phases of the job."

The strike, called by Howard in protest to installation of metal baseboards by metal lathers rather than by carpenters, attracted attention on Capitol Hill as an impediment to the defense program.

In announcing the strike, a local carpenters' union official charged the lathers had "jumped in on work that has been ours for centuries."

Notice of the strike was taken in the House by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, who said work on the $4,500,000 building was being held up "because the union cannot decide who of their number is to do the work. They are all union men and they are holding up our defense while they quarrel among themselves who is to do a particular job."

Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, earlier had told the House his committee intended watching strikes in defense projects during the next few weeks to determine what legislative steps should be taken.

Envoy From Cuba Resigns; Reasons Personal, He Says

Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, since 1937 Cuban Ambassador to Washington and a leading figure in the diplomatic set, last night announced his resignation.

In a statement made public by the embassy less than a month after it had announced the Cuban government's rejection of an earlier offer to quit Washington, Martinez Fraga declared:

"My resignation is based on reasons of a personal order." He added that the resignation had been accepted by President Fulgencio Batista.

Hitler to Give Speech Today, World Awaits New Surprise

Timing of Address Augurs Momentous Pronouncement; No Indication Given Of Subject or Motive Prompting Talk

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Dec. 9.—It was announced tonight that Adolf Hitler will give an important speech at noon tomorrow (5 a. m. E.S.T.), "from an arms factory" somewhere in Germany.

No indications were forthcoming as to the subject or the occasion motivating the speech which will be broadcast on a German hookup.

Considerable speculation attaches to the timing of this speech which followed on heels of the latest devastating German attack on London as well as the Vatican's rejected proposal for a Christmas truce.

It is suggested here that the Fuehrer, in these days, does not feel himself obliged to call in a formal forum of the Reichstag before making an announcement of far-reaching importance, as he did last year when he made his famous "appeal to reason," but will avail himself of far less formal speaker's stands and audiences.

The early morning editions of the press did not carry the news which will presumably be sprung on the nation with dramatic suddenness in the forenoon.

It will be Hitler's first speech since November 8, when, speaking before the Nazi "old fighters" in the Munich Loewenbrau cellar on the eve of the seventeenth anniversary of his beer cellar putsch, he expressed "absolute conviction" of Germany's ultimate victory.

At that time he said, "Today I [illegible] any compromise."

[The three major American networks said they would not rebroadcast Hitler's speech, but the Mutual Broadcasting System intended to record it and carry it later.]

R. A. F. Attacks Bordeaux Nest Of Submarines

Dusseldorf Pounded A Third Time; French Harbors Bombed

By David Anderson
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 9.—Royal Air Force bombers carried out dual missions of offense and defense last night when they attacked the industrial city of Dusseldorf for the third time in five days and struck hard at Bordeaux, from where German sea and air raiders gnaw Britain's life-line.

Air ministry reports indicate that the attacks were spirited and that extensive damage was done to industrial and military targets, U-boat bases, shipping facilities and enemy airfields. Both British and German official sources agree that two British planes were shot down during the night's operations.

There is a wide divergence of opinion, however, on where the bombs fell. The communiques issued here stress the "accuracy" and the "pilots' certainty" regarding their aim.

It was said that raiding conditions over Dusseldorf were ideal. As on Saturday the Press and Walzwerke blast furnaces and steel works, specializing in railway equipment and war materials, were the British target. Three large fires, encircled by many smaller ones, set the stage. At this point the British "crowded

800 Tons of Bombs Fall on Metropolis, High Command Says

Berlin, Dec. 9.—Last night's attack on London, German quarters state, was the heaviest night raid ever launched by the German air force. It was comparable, in fury and destruction, only to the series of raids on London which initiated the campaign of "retaliatory" attacks against England three months ago.

It is authoritatively stated here that over 700 tons of high-explosive bombs and 100 tons of incendiary bombs were dropped on the English capital in the course of the all-night attack.

[The Germans, however, failed to follow up the terrific Sunday night assault, London dispatches said, despite ideal flying weather. Britain's skies were clear of raiders all day Monday and all Monday night, London reported.]

German pilots returning from last night's raids were quoted by the official news agency today as saying at least two score major fires were started in the early hours of Sunday evening, and the high command asserted a "sea of fire" engulfed whole blocks of the British capital before the attack

Neediest Families

Belongings Lost in House Fire, 12 Face Christmas Apart

By Lucia Giddens
Post Staff Writer

The M. family huddled on the sidewalk, homeless, as their little rented house burned. The 10 children were safe, but all the family's belongings were gone.

As quickly as the fire burned, they became one of the neediest families in Washington.

How to Help

Make out check to The Washington Post's Neediest Families Fund. In corner of check, you may designate by number the family you wish to help. Cash contributions may be dropped into a box on the counter near the entrance of The Post, 1337 E Street Northwest.

The children are now scattered in the already overcrowded homes of neighbors, and Mr. M.'s small wages, hardly enough to pay for the barest needs of such a large family, fall far short of being sufficient to reestablish the home.

The opportunity of Post readers to help this family and the other neediest was summed up in a letter from one of the contributors to The Post fund yesterday:

"It is a privilege to lend a helping hand to these families that are doing all they can to help themselves," wrote Carl I. Wilson, of the Roosevelt Hotel, with his contribution of $25.

One of the gifts in yesterday's mail was from one little boy to another. Tommy Powell, son of the Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral, sent $1.25 with a note: "I would like for this to be given to some little boy my age—

Following Marian Anderson

Cinderella Girl of WPA Sings Way to Fame at White House

Virginia Lewis, of Philadelphia, 26-year-old colored Work Projects Administration employe and sensational soprano who has been compared to Marian Anderson, sang yesterday for Mrs. Roosevelt and guests at the White House and, as result, her career took a Cinderella turn.

Brought here by Mrs. Roosevelt and appearing at the White House musicale with Mieckyslav Munz, Polish pianist, Miss Lewis gained enough recognition to be assured a musical career and further tutelage under an outstanding voice instructor.

An orphaned daughter of a teamster, she is a protege of Samuel R. Rosenbaum, president of the Philadelphia Robin Hood Dell summer concerts. She did domestic work until last February when a job was given her teaching music for the WPA. The pay was $45 a month.

Rosenbaum heard of her voice and it was through him that Mrs. Roosevelt learned of the singer. At the White House yesterday she sang a group of spirituals and a program of Italian and German songs.

After her White House appearance, Miss Lewis was a guest of Dr. Virginia Alexander, a fellow Philadelphian and health supervisor of the District National Youth Administration.

Windsors Leave Nassau, Due In Miami Today

Nassau, Bahamas, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor left Nassau aboard the yacht Southern Cross this afternoon, bound for Miami, where the duchess will undergo a major dental operation for an ailment that has caused her increasing pain and has undermined her health generally.

The Windsors hope the brief, private visit won't interfere with their plans for a real tour of the United States, possibly next year.

The duchess will go to St. Francis Hospital soon after arrival tomorrow about 8 a. m. She and the duke will leave Friday aboard the steamer Munargo.

Two-Way Drive Aimed at Valona; Strategic Peaks Reported Taken

By the Associated Press

Athens, Dec. 9.—The entire Italian right wing behind the Greek-occupied port of Porto Edda has been put to flight and a whole series of strategically important peaks in the northern sector of the front has been captured by the Greeks, a government spokesman declared tonight.

The spokesman said that the Italian right wing had been put to flight since yesterday noon.

The Greek warriors, with a fifth of Albania's territory behind them, were making a vast twin drive against the Italian armies between them and the port of Valona, the [illegible] they expect to be their next big prize.

"Tirana by Christmas"

Passing Argirocastro, last of Italy's southern Albanian bases, which was captured Sunday, the Greeks swiftly organized their campaign aimed from the east and south toward Valona, 40 miles northwest, an entry point for Fascist men and supplies.

Exact positions were withheld as military secrets.

"On to Valona!" the Greeks shouted, coupling this slogan with their battle cry of "Tirana by Christmas." Tirana, Albania's capital, some 60 miles above Valona, is the object of a third Greek drive from the east.

The immediate objective of both southern drives was Tepelani, a road junction, about 20 miles from Valona.

The army fighting in the south reported fierce resistance from the Italian rear guard, strongly entrenched to cover the retreat of the main Fascist body to the north and west.

Spurring the Italian withdrawal were constant charges from Greek cavalry and harassing raids by planes with machine guns and bombs.

Cheered by Roosevelt Pledge

The Valona campaign developed as all Greece joined in a three-day celebration over the capture of Argirocastro, two days after the fall of Italy's southernmost Albanian port, Porto Edda. Sharing Greek enthusiasm was news of President Roosevelt's promise to help the embattled Balkan kingdom.

"Mr. Roosevelt's message is causing joy through the entire

Columbus Letter Relating Discovery Is Sold for $1,600

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—A letter by Christopher Columbus relating his discovery of America was sold for $1,600 tonight as manuscripts and rare books went on the auction block in a Red Cross drive to raise money for Great Britain.

The letter, written in 1494 and containing the earliest woodcut views of America, went to John W. Garrett, of Baltimore.

More than 300 items, valued at $100,000, were to be sold tonight and tomorrow—all contributed by such manuscript collectors as J. P. Morgan, Thomas Lamont, Owen D. Young, Lessing J. Rosenwald and others.

President Sees British Heads Of Antigua

Residents Generally Approve U. S. Base, Governor Reports

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard U. S. S. Mayrant at Sea, Dec. 9 (By Radio).—President Roosevelt's inspection tour of defense sites in the Caribbean Sea took him today to the little British island of Antigua, where he conferred with officials for an hour.

Sir Gordon J. Lethem, Governor of the British Leeward Islands, and Administrator Herbert Boon went aboard the President's cruiser, the Tuscaloosa. They discussed defense batteries, sanitary facilities and use of Parham Sound by patrol planes.

After the conference, Sir Gordon told newsmen accompanying the President that Antiguans generally approved establishment of a United States base there and were "looking ahead to its aspects of international cooperation."

Before the Tuscaloosa and her escorts, this destroyer and the destroyer Trippe, resumed the course for an unnanounced destination, a contact was made at St. Johns with bombers from San Juan. They brought the second batch of mail the President has received on the trip, which began at Miami a week ago tomorrow. The planes took return mail.

Late Sunday, the Chief Executive halted off the French island of Martinique, potential trouble spot.

Lying hove to in full view of the French aircraft carrier Bearn at Fort de France, the Tuscaloosa was the scene of an hour's conference between Mr. Roosevelt, United States Consul Brocker and Naval Capt. Ernest J. Blankenship, American observer on the island.

Great Battle Still Going On South Of Sidi Barrani; Duce's Aide Slain

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Forces in Egypt, Dec. 9.—Britain's armored desert fighters, striking at dawn against Italy's invaders in Egypt, captured 1,000 prisoners by nightfall, killed their commanding officer and seized his assistant, the British command announced tonight as the fighting went on.

This "great raid" against Marshal Graziani's legions in the Sidi Barrani region, 70 miles from Libya's frontiers, possibly heralded the full-fledged offensive against Italy because of its gearing with Italian reverses at the hands of the Greeks in Albania.

Fighting still swirled south of Sidi Barrani late tonight, and more Italian prisoners were being rounded up, the British said.

R. A. F. and Navy Cooperate

An Italian camp at Mabeya, a few miles south of Sidi Barrani, the coastal base the Italians occupied three months ago, yielded 500 prisoners, the British said.

That many more were reported captured about 30 miles from the coast. This attack, on the Italian right flank, apparently was the main thrust and other British units surged around it and pressed on westward behind the Italian advance lines.

The Royal Air Force was participating inland and the British navy off the Italian-held coast, it was reported.

The staff of Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander of Britain's middle eastern forces, gave no indication as to how extensive the operation would become, but showed high pleasure at the first day's results. The number of prisoners taken in a single day's fighting perhaps was the best gauge of the extent of combat.

The offensive was described as only a "great raid," rather than a general offensive, but it was believed it might lead to further offensives.

Preparations at Night

Preparations were carried out in the dead of night. Troops moved supplies—including gasoline—across 8 miles of "no man's land" and buried them under the sands.

The British command indicated the extent of the offensive would depend partly on how strenuous

President to Attend His First Women's Press Club Dinner

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told her press conference yesterday that both the President and she would go to a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club January 6. Mr. Roosevelt had received the invitation to the luncheon last September.

Asked whether the President would speak, Mrs. Roosevelt replied with a laugh "that is for you to find out."

The meeting will be the first affair given by the Women's Press Club which the Chief Executive has attended.

The First Lady also said Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie had been invited to the White House for a Gridiron Club "widows' party" next Saturday night. Willkie will be the Gridiron dinner main speaker.

President Roosevelt recently advised the club he would be unable to attend because of his Caribbean cruise.

Made Winner of Family Pet

Mrs. Bosley Dies in Auto Crash; Ranking Woman Horse Trainer

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Bosley, prominent Maryland horsewoman who began a career as racing trainer by converting a family pet into a sensational winner, was instantly killed yesterday in an automobile accident near Towson, Md.

The automobile Mrs. Bosley was driving crashed headon against a tree. Police believe she may have lost control of the car swerving to avoid another car, but no eye-witnesses had been found last night.

Mrs. Bosley rose to the position of ranking woman trainer in less than seven years. She entered the field in 1933 because of a mortgage that rested on the Bosley farm, Fox Hill, at Monckton, Md. Mrs. Bosley decided to convert one of the family's several hunting horses into a racer. For this purpose she selected Chase Me, a pet of the children distinguished principally for a few simple tricks taught him by the Bosleys.

Chase Me swept through the 1933 Maryland season with six straight victories that won $30,000.

Mrs. Bosley leaves her husband, John Bosley, also a racing trainer, and three children, John, jr., Betty and Sarg. All live in the Bosley home at Monckton.

Italian Blunders Annoy Germany

Hitler Is Reported Ignoring Duce's Hints For Air Assistance

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Dec. 9.—German diplomatic circles in Ankara are reliably reported to have revealed that Germany is ignoring Italian suggestions that while she is otherwise prepared to continue to defend herself in Albania without assistance, she would not be averse to German aerial support.

The Italians, say the Germans, admitted that the superiority of the British planes and pilots was hampering them considerably.

According to the German diplomats, however, Germany is determined to take no part in the Greek campaign.

This statement is in accordance with the reassuring line being adopted by Franz von Papen, the German envoy in Ankara, in all his conversations since his return, as part of the general campaign to reassure Turkey.

Whether Germany really intends to make no further move in the Balkans, or whether these specific assurances are a smoke screen to cover further preparations in Bulgaria—as some Italian circles here are inclined to believe—there is no question about the German annoyance with Italy and contempt for the incompetence she has shown in Greece and Albania. Local Germans continue to be the best source of funny stories at the expense of the Italians.

There is, of course, no relaxation of Turkish military vigilance. It has been announced that the report recently carried in various newspapers of a forthcoming suspension of the blackout was premature.

The press prints without comment a London report that the Bulgarian Minister to Ankara is now in Sofia endeavoring to effect a rapprochement between Bulgaria and Turkey. The fact that this report is reissued by the semi-official Turkish news agency, Agence Antolie, is not the only indirect confirmation of the general accuracy of this report. The same idea lies behind the press "write-ups" of the last few days of the idea of Balkan Union.

It is believed in Turkish political circles that King Boris' interview with Fuehrer Hitler at Berchtesgaden was as unpleasant as Hitler knew how to make it. That is one of the many reasons why it is believed that the moment for Turkish rapprochment with Bulgaria may be near.

The Germans, it is learned, are working hard against Russian interests in Bulgaria. A German whispering campaign is in full swing, one of its main items being a story that Russia is about to demand naval bases from Bulgaria.

The Germans have also secretly inspired the printing of an anti-Russian pamphlet now being circulated in Bulgaria which repeats the same story and tells the Bulgarians to beware, because the Soviet Union intends to make their country suffer the same fate of the Baltic states, where the demand for naval bases was the beginning of the end of their independence.

The Turkish press continues to discuss the possibilities of establishing a new Balkan union. The general argument is that the Greeks' successes against Italy have administered a sharp check to Germany's plans for forcing the Balkans into the "new order," and that the breathing space thus obtained by the Balkans should be utilized to draw closer together before the spring brings new threats from the Axis.

Battle Raging, 1,000 Italians Captured

For weeks British units have been probing Italy's defenses, even employing camels in one extended operation deep into Italian Libya.

Many observers believed today's blow was the beginning of operations designed to trap the main Italian body of troops at coastal Sidi Barrani.

"Following Italy's debacle in Albania, it's evident that the moment has been well chosen to make Marshal Graziani fight," one British military observer said.

Gen. Wavell himself announced the first news of the attack less than four hours after it was launched.

The commander said:

"I have asked you here to tell you our forces began to carry out an engagement against Italian armies at dawn today."

Then the general described his troops' steady advance during the night to within striking distance, and declared: "Two hours ago I received word that we had captured an Italian camp (Mabeya)."

It is the conviction of Britain's army leaders here that if the switches in Premier Mussolini's high command mean action in Egypt, British desert forces are ready, whether for offensive or defensive fighting.

They have been sitting for three months across no man's land from the Italian-held coastal strip while Marshal Graziani has waited, apparently wary of the risks of a desert offensive.

The British have a good communication system, including a railroad all the way from Alexandria. The Italians have poor transportation, and their supply problem, especially for water, is great.

British policy has been defensive—moving far from supply bases creates disadvantages—but the trend of battle in Greece has spurred desire for action of Britain's assembled British, Australian, New Zealand, Polish and French troops.

Although aid for Greece has taken a considerable number of British warplanes from Egypt, Royal Air Force officers declare plenty are left to cope with the Italian machines.

Fascist Official Protests Steep Rise in Prices

Authorities Express Confidence in Morale; Report of Riots Denied

By the Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 9.—A sharp protest against steeply rising prices of necessities in Italy was published today in the Italian monthly magazine Lavita while on the military front the high command confirmed the fall-back of Fascist troops from Argirocastro, Albania.

Meanwhile, the day passed without new resignations or replacements in the military command or government, although some observers expect further changes.

Whether a major battle was under way in Egypt is indicated by Cairo dispatches could not be confirmed in authoritatve quarters.

Also, a British report that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani had asked to be relieved of his command in Africa could not be confirmed.

Lavita Italiana, published by Roberto Farinacci, secretary of the Fascist Party and member of the Fascist grand council, said it costs "more than double" to dress this year compared with last year's prices before Italy entered the war.

"The crescendo continues," the publication said.

"With things increasing at this rate are wages and salaries to remain unaltered? Is there anyone who imagines prices are blocked and profiteers have disappeared while the mass of people are submitting with admirable discipline to the limitation in their standard of living?"

Weakened Morale Denied

Authorities expressed confidence in the Italian morale. They said the shake-up in the high command would "give the gas" to the military machine for a faster and more efficient war.

Foreign reports of riots in Italian cities were denied as "ridiculous and without foundation."

Taking notice of interpretations abroad that the shake-up showed a weakening of the Italian morale, Fascist authorities declared in a statement that "this uproar, if anything, will only sharpen the will to victory of the Italian people and their reverent and absolute faith" in Mussolini and his commanders.

"No one has ever thought of denying in Italy that the undertaking of its liberating war is vast and arduous and that in it might be harder moments," the statement said. "But the same organs which have seized on the pretext of the change in the high command to look for dangerous symptoms and indications of presumed discord and the possibility of delays, are drawing from them with too evident joy catastrophic forecasts for the future . . ."

Instead of foreign predictions of a slowing down in Italy's war effort, the statement said "the contrary may be foreseen, it being permissible to consider the changes which have taken place as stepping on the accelerator to give, if anything, swifter and more efficient rhythm to the Italian war machine."

The statement likened the current foreign reaction to what it described as "the clamorous agitation" accompanying sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian war.

"The imprudent revival," it went on, "gives the Italian public the right to hope for the same final outcome which—contrary to insinuations and predictions of enemy critics—crowned the Ethiopian undertaking.

"Meanwhile, the Italian people, compact under Il Duce's orders and with the most absolute faith in their army and the commanders who are guiding it, are drawing from the campaign of impotent rage reasons to intensify their effort and bend their discipline and will to achieve Il Duce's slogan, which remains: 'Win!'"

The statement came on the heels of an army report that Fascist forces have formed a new defense line north of Argirocastro and launched 'numerous victorious counterattacks" on other Albanian sectors of the war with Greece.

Il Duce meanwhile received Marshal Pietro Badoglio, whose resignation as chief of the army high command was the first in a series of changes in the army and navy commands. An official statement said merely that Mussolini received Badoglio "on a duty visit and held him in cordial conversation."

Today's communique of the high command confirmed the Athens announcement yesterday that the Greeks had occupied Argirocastro, used as a springboard for Italy's unsuccessful invasion of Greece October 28.

"The Eleventh Army completed an orderly withdrawal without loss of men or materiel on a line north of Argirocastro and minor surrounding localities," the communique said.

"On the sector of the Ninth Italian Army (probably the left wing) repeated enemy attacks were repulsed by our troops, which had launched numerous victorious counterattacks."

The high command said the Italian air force bombed Greek military objectives at Santa Maura and the Gulf of Arta in spite of "unfavorable weather conditions."

In North Africa, it said, a mechanized force was "put to flight" by Italian artillery southeast of Alem Rabia, while in East Africa "an enemy air raid on Gallabat (Anglo-Egyptian Sudan) and Cherille, in Somaliland, caused several deaths and injuries."

Fascists said attacking "enemy formations" caused "some material damage" to airports at Tripoli and Bengasi.

Battle-Torn Carnarvon Castle Must Leave Montevideo Today

Extended Time Limit Given for Repairs After Duel With Nazi Raider Expires; Rumors of New Naval Battle Denied

By John W. White
Copyright by New York Times

Montevideo, Dec. 9.—The damaged British auxiliary cruiser Carnarvon Castle is preparing to sail tomorrow, as soon as damage sustained in a combat with a German raider off the Brazilian coast last Thursday is repaired.

Workmen and sailors have been working day and night since Saturday afternoon, rushing repairs to the scars left by 22 German shells.

The ship's 48-hour repair period was extended another 24 hours by the Uruguayan government, and the German minister, Otto Langmann, promptly made a formal diplomatic protest against the extension. Last year the British minister here made a similar protest against the Uruguayan government permitting the Graf Spee to remain in port 72 hours.

Battle Rumors Discounted

Despite all rumors of a new naval engagement in the south Atlantic, Government wireless stations have not picked up anything which would indicate that British warships have as yet sighted the escaping raider. The British cruiser Enterprise was at the Falkland Islands when Thursday's battle took place, and it immediately started for the scene of combat at full speed.

The British Legation announced flatly that there "have been no developments of any kind since the Carnavon Castle arrived that we know of."

One report that the Carnavon Castle herself received a radiogram saying the Enterprise had caught and destroyed the raider, was squelched by a British official who commented:

"Whoever started that one forgot that radio rooms on warships under neutrality regulations are sealed when the ships enter neutral ports."

Neutral naval officers believe the German raider, if as badly damaged as the Carnarvon Castle reports, will try to get back to Germany as soon as possible and that if challenged by some British warship, the action is likely to take place far to the north of the scene of last Thursday's battle.

Cuba Patrols Coast

Havana, Dec. 9 (AP).—Cuban naval launches patrolled the south coast tonight, watching for possible landings by crewmen of the German merchantman Idarwald, which was intercepted by a British cruiser Sunday afternoon about 75 miles south of Cienfuegos.

Rumors that some seamen already had landed were denied officially, but it was not known here whether all of the Idarwald's men were apprehended by the British.

The United States Navy Department reported the Idarwald was in the possession of the British cruiser Diomede, and Navy sources said the British got aboard quickly enough to thwart German attempts to scuttle the 5,033-ton freighter.

Marine circles here said the British prize crew probably headed the Idarwald to Jamaica.

There was no word concerning the Idarwald's fellow blockade-runner, the 6,031-ton Rhein, which left Tampico at the same time.

Liner Heard 23 Attacks on British Ships

Exeter Reaches N. Y. After 18 Days at Sea; Log Tells Grim Story

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 9.—A story of continued attacks—23 of them—against the sea lanes of the British Empire was told in the radio log of the American export liner Exeter which arrived today with 182 passengers from Lisbon.

During 18 days in which the Exeter was on the Atlantic, bound to Lisbon, and return, her radio heard 31 distress signals—telling of attacks from the air and by surface and underseas raiders on more than 100,000 tons of shipping.

Maritime circles here believed four of the calls indicated that at least two raiders were at work, one in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland and another near the Canary Islands.

Included in the record were calls heard in New York from five vessels apparently torpedo victims of a mass U-boat attack on a convoy 500 miles west of Ireland December 2 in which Germany claimed to have sunk 15 ships.

On November 23, the Exeter radio picked up a distress signal from the 9,461-ton British freighter Glenbeg that she had "sighted suspicious vessel," 500 miles southwest of Santa Cruz, Canary Islands.

A week later, a distress signal was heard from the 4,825-ton British freighter Llandaff, ordinarily in the West African trade. She said a "suspicious vessel" was "following" her 300 miles northeast of Ponta Delgada, the Azores, 1,000 miles north of the scene of the Glenberg call.

Maritime circles said the vessels may have been sunk before they could send further messages. Two later calls indicated another raider, possibly the pocket battlship which leisurely attacked the Jervis Bay convoy of 38 ships last November 5 in the North Atlantic, was still at large in the same region.

Two seamen, George Dann and James Smith, now here to man ships bought by the British, were on the 4,955-ton British freighter Fresno City, sunk in the November 5 attack. They said today that two raiders took part in that fight.

Swiss Find Optimism In Greek Successes

Bern, Dec. 9.—Drawing a parallel between the Greek effectiveness on the mountainous terrain and the military situation in Switzerland, Col. Lecomte, military commentator of La Suisse, draws an optimistic picture of the possibilities of a small, well equipped army resisting mechanized aggression from an overwhelmingly superior mechanized force.

Pointing out that should war ever come to Switzerland it would, perforce, be mountain warfare, the colonel alludes to how much more the mountains of Epirus and Albania resemble the Alpine plateaus and the tura than do the plains of Poland, Finland and Flanders.

War Sidelights

Fritz Thyssen Said to Live On Riviera

Frenchman Arriving In U.S. Is Surprised Nazis Don't Take Him

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Dec. 9.—Fritz Thyssen, German industrial magnate who left the Reich in 1939, after a reported disagreement with Nazi officials, is now living in southern France and might easily be taken into custody by German agents if he were wanted, George Bally, associate professor of French at Vanderbilt University, declared here today.

Bally, a French citizen, who was mobilized into the French army in August, 1939, while on sabbatical leave from the university, and served for 11 months as an artillery lieutenant, returned to the United States today on the American Export liner Exeter.

"Many wealthy Germans from the Ruhr Valley are being sheltered on the Riviera," Bally said. "Thyssen is living in a Riviera hotel. I can't understand why the Germans don't take him."

He expressed belief the influx of German citizens from the Ruhr Valley into southern France indicated the R. A. F. had bombed the area heavily, forcing them to leave their homes.

Crowds Jeer Danish Nazis After Rioting

Copenhagen, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Several leaders of the Danish Nazis, stripped of their uniforms and weapons, were under arrest tonight in the South Jutland town of Hadersley after the worst rioting and anti-Nazi demonstrations since the German occupation of Denmark.

From midnight until 4 a. m. today several thousand Danes gathered outside the Hadersley Jail, jeering about 350 of the Nazis being questioned by police after rioting in which 10 policemen were among the injured.

The Nazis were subdued by police, after tear gas bombs and fire hoses had been used against them, and were charged with attacking the police, disturbing the peace and violating a law prohibiting the wearing of uniforms.

Greek nation as showing the extent of friendship and mutual assistance existing between our country and his great nation," Eleftheron Vima, government spokesman, told American correspondents at a special reception.

It was disclosed meanwhile the Greeks captured Argirocastro by craftily flanking the town from east and west, rather than by a frontal assault. Some sections were burned by the Italians, but the Greeks declared they left intact huge supplies of war material, including 12 full batteries of artillery.

The Greeks now have routed the Italians from about 2,125 square miles—of the rugged 10,629 square mile Albanian kingdom Musscini seized in his Good Friday invasion invasion in 1939. The fallen Koritza and Argirocastro are its third and fifth largest cities, respectively.

Prior to Argirocastro's fall, the Greeks placed the cash value of captured Italian booty at $10,000,000, a figure expected to be greatly increased when stock is taken of equipment seized in the southern invasion base.

She will shortly return to the United States.

Night Without Air Attacks Leaves All Britain Puzzled

Weather Perfect for Raiding, but Nazis Pass It Up; English Suspect Enemy May Be Forming Forces for Devastating Blow

By James MacDonald

Copyright by New York Times

London (Tuesday) Dec. 10.—London was a puzzled city last night. After intense raids Sunday night and early Monday morning the city had steadied itself for another bad night. Instead, the moon rode nigh, the sirens remained quiet and, up to the time this was written, nothing has happened.

Singularly enough, nothing has happened anywhere else in England, despite the fact that the weather appears to be perfect for raiders.

The people were left to wonder whether the Royal Air Force has pulled something from its hat to beat Nazi night bombers—a most improbable theory—or whether the Germans are preparing some particularly devastating raid for the future.

Nazi Plane Shot Down

One German plane apparently tried to reach Britain Monday but it was shot down into the North Sea, according to the Air Ministry, which said there were no British losses.

During the raids of Sunday night and Monday morning five hospitals, several churches, two hotels, one London museum, many homes, A. R. P. posts and shelters were hit and an undisclosed number of people killed or injured.

The hospitals that were bombed included one large general institution and a special hospital for women. Six wards of one hospital were wrecked when four bombs struck the building and some of the elderly patients died from shock. At another hospital four porters were buried and one had been rescued at a late hour Monday.

At a children's hospital a time-bomb fell in the nurses' quarters, lodging in the basement. Everyone was immediately evacuated and when the bomb went off, hours later, it caused property damage, but no casualties.

In another London district a large apartment house was badly damaged and it was feared that many of the tenants had been buried under wreckage. Rescue squads labored all day Monday searching for survivors, or bodies.

In still another neighborhood shops adjoining buildings were destroyed by high explosive bombs. Not far away an ancient church was badly damaged when a bomb exploded in the churchyard.

One poor district was showered with incendiary bombs and high explosives which wrecked homes and started fires.

Elsewhere in the London area the story was the same: Fires, ruined homes, rescue parties working feverishly, ambulances dashing here and there while bombs whizzed down all around them.

R. A. F. Attacks Bordeaux Nest of Subs

Apparently there was so much smoke billowing that even the inferno far below was hidden to the view of the last raiding planes arriving, and they just dumped their bomb-loads blindly. One aircraft machine-gunned a supply train near Geldern, northwest of Dusseldorf, ten minutes after attacking the steel town. The pilot dived within 50 feet of the tracks.

More ground was covered en route to Bordeaux, and perhaps more achieved.

A strong force of heavy bombers swung over the plains of western France Sunday evening, arriving at Bordeaux at 7:30 p. m. For the next two-and-a-half hours they wheeled around, high in the sky.

The attack was in Indian file, the British airmen swooping down, one after another, on the work dock, where submarines were moored, and on the warehouses, railway sidings and jetties. It was hoped, but not claimed, that nested U-boats were hit. Bordeaux was strongly defended by batteries ashore and aboard ship.

Farther north on the coast of Brittany lay Lorient, also an important base in the German sea warfare, and it, too, was blasted. A stick of bombs fell across the harbor mouth and for some reason a "great flash of flame" went up.

At Brest a flaming dockside building was said to have supplied plentiful illumination, as high explosives crashed into the Port Militaire naval barracks and drydocks.

Brest and Lorient were each raided Sunday night for the second time in 24 hours. Flushing, Dunkerque and Gravelines also felt the pressure of the Royal Air Force that night, as did other enemy airfields in occupied lands.

Pope Promises France Sympathy In Her Recovery

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 9.—Pope Pius XII promised France his understanding, sympathy and encouragement in her struggle to recover from the war when he received the credentials of Leon Berard, the new French Ambassador to the Holy See today.

Berard, in a strong hint toward Britain, had previously said that since the expectations of earthly help had been vain, France was now turning toward a more enduring source of comfort.

The pointiff told of his "emotion and sadness" at the fate of France.

The words of the pointiff, as always lately, showed pessimism regarding the future of Europe.

ended.

There is no dearth of sarcastic comment in the German press today on British optimism which allegedly prevailed over the week-end. It is stated here that British illusions that the destructive power of the German air force had been broken by recent attacks of the Royal Air Force were rudely shattered by events of last night.

British antiaircraft defenses, it is asserted, weakened considerably as the attack progressed although their fire was heavier than ever before at the start of the raid. After midnight, it is stated here, German fliers bombed the city unhindered.

Ruhr 'Test of Nerves'

Berlin, Dec. 9.—The candid admission that the steel-producing Ruhr area had been subjected to a "test of nerves" lasting three months appeared today in an article in the weekly magazine Das Reich.

Asserting that England was getting manyfold what its bombers had dealt out, the article continued:

"So British bombers flew over Dusseldorf, over Cologne, over Essen and over Dortmund, night after night, for months. The German people in the west stood up under the cowardly attack. It was a test of nerves hard to hold out under because, except for short sentences in the high command report, these attacks were hardly noticed in the press.

"Some citizens in the industrial area properly asked themselves whether people in Berlin and elsewhere in the Reich knew what it meant to sit every night in a cellar and yet the next day do a full day's work.

"Then came reprisals."

Two British Planes Felled

The Ruhr district, DNB said, was bombed last night by British planes "to give the appearance of embarking on counter action" to the London raid, but the chief result was said to have been two British planes shot down.

Reichsmarshal Goering's own plane was put at the disposal of foreign correspondents for a flight to Dusseldorf, No. 2 steel producing center of Germany.

They reported seeing no evidence either from the air or ground of crippling damage to the steel plants as claimed by the British. They said there were a few old shattered apartment houses, and about a block of blown-out windows, but docks along the Rhine and factories alike were working full blast.

War Ambulance Exhibited Here

An ambulance which will eventually see service in England was brought here from New York yesterday by the Washington Chapter of the British-American Ambulance Corps and exhibited in front of the Shoreham Hotel.

The local organization of 20 subcommittees expects to pay for the $1,300 vehicle from proceeds of a fashion show at the hotel Thursday, at 3:30 p. m., according to Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, chairman of the group.

More than 400 ambulances have been sent to Britain by the corps, the Washington unit was told at its meeting in the Shoreham yesterday. One was paid for by the District body, organized in September of this year.

Plane Plant, Union Outlaw Labor Feuds

Any Interference With Defense Work Barred by Contract

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 9 (AP).—The Wright Aeronautical Corporation and an independent union claiming representation of the great majority of 16,000 employed here, announced tonight signing of a labor contract barring any interference with defense production.

The contract, described in a joint statement by Myron D. Gordon, Wright vice president and general manager, and William H. Showers, president of the Wright Aeronautical Employes Association, as "the most comprehensive agreement ever negotiated in the aviation industry," stated:

"All strikes, sit-downs, slow-downs, stay-ins, or curtailment or interference with production are outlawed. All major grievances must be submitted to impartial arbitration."

The contract, effective December 15, provides for a basic 7 per cent wage increase with an additional 10 per cent increase for employes on two night shifts, seniority provisions, vacations with pay, time and a half for overtime and double time for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

The firm manufactures airplane motors and has on hand vast Government defense contracts.

The joint statement said the contract provided that the side asking arbitration of a grievance could petition a member of New Jersey's highest court (Errors and Appeals) to select an arbiter.

The management, the statement said, "agrees to the most extensive and liberal seniority policy ever written into a labor contract." The provisions protect employes affected by promotions, lay-offs, rehiring, Selective Service and volunteering in the armed forces of the Nation.

The statement said the wage provisions would boost the annual pay roll from $22,000,000 to $23,500,000.

The joint statement pointed to the contract as "an example of what can be accomplished by peaceful negotiations."

Seattle Mills to Open

Seattle, Dec. 9 (AP).—All of Seattle's lumber mills were scheduled to reopen tomorrow after pickets from strike-bound, out-of-town plants were withdrawn today following court orders restraining picketing at four of the 11 closed mills.

Union officials said the pickets, who had contended Seattle mills were handling orders diverted from more than 30 other plants in western Washington, would not appear again at Seattle mills. Workers had refused to go through the picket lines.

Elsewhere the strike, for a 7½-cent an hour wage increase and a week's vacation with pay, continued with the twentieth Tacoma mill closing, bringing the number out of work there to about 5,200.

Five Portland mills remained closed, with 1,500 men out, and several thousand still on strike at Everett, Snoqualmie and Morton.

It may be said, with the approval of the British censor, that their treatment is good, according to Swiss physicians, delegates to the International Red Cross.

At a camp for aviators the investigators found "three comfortable wooden barracks and good food," with a dining room where "whisky is served in the evenings and there . . . are no complaints."

Experts Called To Map Army Traffic Plan

Maj. Brown in Group Of Six Who'll Advise On Troop Movements

The Army yesterday called in six national experts on traffic control to advise them how to avoid traffic jams in mass troop movements—road blocks such as contributed to the fall of France.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of District of Columbia Police and president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, was one of the group which is headed by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Federal Public Roads Administration.

Other members are L. S. Harris, executive director of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, who was named secretary of the committee; Don F. Stiver, chairman of the State police section of the International Association of Chiefs of Police; A. W. Bohlen, president of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators and Motor Vehicle Commissioner for South Carolina, and J. S. Williamson, president of the American Association of State Highway officials.

Navy Plans A Civilian Police Corps

Program to Set Up State Guards Pressed By War Department

The Army and Navy took steps yesterday to relieve a maximum number of military personnel from routine guard duties and make them available for combat service.

Acting Navy Secretary Forrestal announced formation of a civilian police corps to take over guard duties now performed by Marines at Navy yards and establishments. A force of about 2,500 men will be set up, he said, relieving a like number of Marines for military service.

At the same time, the War Department sent out to the various State Governors, through corps area commanders, instructions as to the establishment of State guards. Creation of such forces—which in time of war would stand guard over industrial plants, power plants, air fields and other vital points—was authorized by a recent act of Congress.

Rifles and bayonets will be turned over to duly authorized State Guards free, except for the cost of packing and transportation, it was said. Suggested organizational tables and other data will be furnished on request, Governors were informed.

Under the law, the Secretary of War prescribes regulations for organization and maintenance of such forces, but the State must take the initiative in their creation. The Army is also called upon to furnish the State Guards with such arms and equipment as it can spare.

Yesterday's announcement said that enough World War Lee-Enfield rifles, with slings, bayonets and scabbards are available to equip State Guard organizations half as large as the National Guard's enlisted strength in each State on June 30, 1940. This would equip a maximum of 115,000 men.

Acting Secretary Forrestal said the Navy police corps would be recruited from Civil Service rolls and would be headed by Jerome Doyle, former FBI agent and recently on the staff of United States Attorney John T. Cahill, of New York. Administration of the force will be under the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The Navy Department announcement said that cartridge belts, haversacks, first-aid packets and some mess equipment would be sold to State Guard units, but that the Army had no spare uniforms and only ten rounds of ammunition per rifle available for sale.

Morgenthau Gets British 'Balance Sheet'

Plan to Grant Loan Via Holland Reported Under Consideration

Britain's "balance sheet" of cash-on-hand and spending plans was explained to Secretary Morgenthau last night in a two-hour conference at his home by Sir Frederick Phillips, British treasury undersecretary.

As a group of high British and American fiscal officials left his home after the parley, Morgenthau said his talk with Sir Frederick had been "satisfactory," but beyond that neither would comment.

No Requests for Aid Yet

The document, which the British fiscal envoy prepared at Morgenthau's request, was supposed to give a full picture of British assets in this country compared with Britain's buying schedule.

Earlier Secretary Morgenthau told the press that he had not yet received any formal or informal request for financial help from the London government.

The Administration had not "made up its mind yet" on the question of extending credits to Britain, he said, adding that "there will be no commitments" in his current discussions with Sir Frederick.

"I Won't Answer That"

When asked about reports that Administration economists favor allowing the British to spend their assets in this hemisphere before becoming eligible for a loan here, Morgenthau replied:

"I won't answer that."

[One method coming in for considerable attention, in view of the good-will visit of Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands to the White House December 18-20, is a three-cornered transaction, whereby the United States would grant a generous loan to the Netherlands which, in turn, would lend a similar amount to Great Britain, the New York Herald Tribune reported. This idea is believed to be in the study stage.]

[Such a deal apparently would not violate the letter of either the Neutrality Act or the Johnson Act. The Dutch stayed out of the first World War and they had defaulted no debts. Moreover, their active participation in the second war was so brief that their financial expenditures were relatively small. Although Holland itself was subjugated by the Germans, the Dutch empire remains intact, notably the Dutch East Indies, Sumatra, Java, etc., with their resources of tin and rubber, and the Dutch West Indies, such as Aruba and Curacao.]

Dutch Credit Excellent

[In addition, the Dutch are estimated to have securities and other assets worth in excess of $1,000,000,000 on deposit in the United States. The Dutch credit rating is excellent. All in all, Queen Wilhelmina and her government-in-exile are in a good position to negotiate a large loan in the United States if they are disposed to borrow funds in order to help their Allies, the British, who are pledged to drive the Nazis out of Holland.]

Bankers Urge Free System In Rearming

Upward Price Spiral Is Called Danger To U. S. Railroads

By Claude A. Jagger

Associated Press Financial Editor.

Hollywood, Fla., Dec. 9.—The Nation's leading investment bankers today urged fullest use of the American free enterprise system in meeting the national defense emergency.

The railroad securities committee of the Investment Bankers Association, reporting to its annual convention, asserted that the greatest danger facing the country's $20,000,000,000 rail system is the possibility of a wartime "upward spiral in wages and material costs," which unless offset by higher rates, would push them into the hands of the Government.

The committee told the 550 investment men convening at the Hollywood Beach Hotel that operation of the roads by the Government in the first World War "cost the public nearly $2,000,000 a day."

Most Efficient Way

In opening the day's sessions, Emmett F. Connely, of Detroit, president of the association, asserted: "Free enterprise affords the best means of providing armaments on a vast scale, and of doing the job speedily, efficiently and at a minimum cost."

He said further:

"We have the record of confusion and failure in the world as of 23 years ago, so long as the Government tried to manage the job of production itself. We have the later record of successful accomplishment when responsibility for arming the country was turned over to groups of businessmen temporarily in national service."

Connelly put the association on record as recommending reorganization of the present Advisory Defense Commission in Washington "with a chairman and with authority to act," and with "a full-fledged division of finance, charged with coordinating the production of credit."

He favored shaping the commission along the lines of the old War Industries Board.

"Horseback Economics"

Referring to what he called "our horseback economics of recent years," the investment banking executive said when private capital failed to go back to work as recovery began to stir in the country, "we were told that these huge reservoirs of capital could never find work to do in industry because industry was finished with external development . . . So it was up to Government to tap these reservoirs and go into the investment business itself.

"Then along came the defense emergency with its insistent demand for new capital. Immediately it was assumed that our huge stores of private savings, which we were told a short time ago could never find employment, could not do the job—so Government had to go still further into the banking business."

Federal Competition

He asserted health of the free enterprise system required fullest use of the Nation's great reservoir of private investment savings, but said private investment was stifled when it had to compete with the Government in the credit markets.

The association's railroad committee said:

"The railroads successfully met the first month of war with perhaps the sharpest pickup in traffic on record, with no important shortages of equipment . . . We believe that the apparent ability to thus fully measure up to the requirements of a grave national emergency notwithstanding a long period of financial starvation, is perhaps the best demonstration of the advantage, in the public interest, of private ownership and management."

Hit-Run Truck Injures Pedestrian

Sam Cooper, 47, of 840 North Seventh Street, Philadelphia, is in Casualty Hospital with a fracture of the right hip and possible other injuries as a result of being struck by a hit-and-run truck on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard about 6 o'clock last night near Berwyn.

Found lying in the road, he was taken to the hospital by the Branchville Rescue Squad. He was conscious and able to give a description of the hit-and-run vehicle, Corpl. Louis Mackall and Officer Richard Pearson, of the Prince Georges County Police, are investigating.

Miss Perkins Urges Guarding Of Labor Gains

Defense Needn't Change Standards, She Tells Conferees

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday urged guarding the New Deal's gains for labor as a vital part of the Nation's defense plans.

Present national defense needs furnish no reason for breaking down wage and hour standards, the Secretary told the Seventh National Conference on Labor Legislation, meeting in the Labor Department.

"The security of a nation depends not only on its physical defenses, but on the well-being of its people," she said. "Anything that contributes to greater health and safety, to proper working conditions and to more adequate standards of living contribute to the national defense."

31 States Represented

She said there had been "loose talk" about the working-hour requirements of the Wage-Hour and Walsh-Healey Acts, and declared "there is no valid reason to undermine the wage and hour legislation as defense needs shape up at this time."

The conference, whose members represented the Governors of 31 States, and State labor organizations, settled into committee studies, following the Secretary's talk, to investigate these general topics:

Industrial health, safety, and workmen's compensation; labor supply in national defense, wages and hours, migratory labor, child labor, industrial home work, Federal-State cooperation and industrial disputes. Their reports will be turned in to the conference today and tomorrow.

Secretary Perkins said that attributing collapse of the French Republic to its 40-hour week laws was no guide for the effect of this Government's wage-hour rules.

The French work-week law, she said, was a "rigid statute," so inflexibly administered "that as a practical matter French industry was on a 40-hour week." She said it was obvious that production on that basis could not equal production with three shifts of 40 hours each.

The American hour laws, she said, were framed to avoid the French "rigidity."

"Any employer in the land can automatically work his employes as many hours beyond 40 a week as he cares to without asking permission of anybody, so long as he pays the overtime rate of time and one-half," she said.

She said that experience in Britain in the last and the present war showed that reduction in working hours increased production.

U. S. Potash Supply Held Sufficient

The General Land Office reported to Secretary Ickes yesterday that supplies of potash produced or available in the United States should be sufficient to meet all domestic demands.

Fred W. Johnson, land office commissioner, said as a result of the European war shipment of potash, a vital agricultural fertilizer ingredient, practically ceased.

"To meet the emergency, more than 6,000 acres of land, comprising the greater part of the dry bed of ancient Searles Lake in California, have been leased by the General Land Office," Ickes said.

The report said that more than 7,000,000 acres of public domain were embraced in withdrawals or requests for withdrawals of tracts for bombing ranges and other defense uses.

Green Urges Labor Representation

Lakeland, Fla., Dec. 9 (AP).—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor demanded today that Labor "be taken more largely into the confidence of the Government" in the national defense program.

Addressing the quadrennial convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Green shouted, with clenched, upraised fist:

"Labor should be represented on every board created by this Government for the promotion of our defense program. For some reason or other, I know not what, Labor has been given practically no representation whatsoever."

Engine, Propeller Output to Increase

Plant Expansion To Ease Bottleneck In Plane Production

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Two trouble points in American aircraft output—warplane engines and propellers—will be relieved by next summer under an expansion of production facilities disclosed yesterday.

Contracts were concluded for the enlargement of United Aircraft Corporation plants, which officials said would increase the Nation's production of combat plane engines and propellers nearly 50 per cent by next August or September.

Monthly output of engines of this type is now about 2,100,000 horsepower—approximately 2,100 engines. The $14,799,000 enlargement of United Aircraft's Pratt and Whitney plant, announced yesterday by the Navy, will add something approaching 1,000,000 horsepower, or perhaps 800 to 900 engines, to this monthly figure, aviation circles declared.

Larger Propeller Plant

Additional facilities costing $1,761,748 beng added to the company's propeller factories, under the contract announced yesterday, will forestall a threatened bottleneck in the production of this essential aircraft part, expected next spring.

Deficiences in certain types of warplane engines already have proved a serious bottleneck, with a number of plane factories having to store their products for lack of power plants.

Construction of the additions to the United Aircraft's engine and propeller plants has been under way for some time. Machinery is on order, and company officials say they will be in production by spring and be operating at full speed by later summer or early fall.

Engne production of this company is now approaching 1,000,000 horsepower a month. With the plant expansion and speeding up of present facilities, officials hope to double this output by 18 per cent in the spring and nearly 50 per cent by late summer.

New Wright Plant

Wright Aeronautical Co., the other big producer of engines for combat planes, has an output at present about equal to United's Pratt & Whitney. When its new plant at Lockland, Ohio, gets into operation next summer, it is understood the Wright production rate will keep pace with United's.

The only other manufacturer of warplane engines, the Allison division of General Motors, is said to have turned out 283 engines last month. By spring, according to a statement of a company spokesman, it will be producing 1,000,000 horsepower monthly — approximately 1,000 engines.

By late in 1941, the Ford Motor Co. is expected to get into production of aircraft engines, and in the opinion of informed circles, should turn out 600,000 or more horsepower a month.

Packard to Produce

The Packard Motor Co. is building a plant for the production of British Rolls-Royce aircraft engines. Orders have been placed with the company for 9,000.

By a year from now, leaders of the aviation industry predict that the new and expanded plants will increase the monthly horsepower from 2,100,000 to above 5,000,000.

The expansion of United Aircraft propeller production facilities, together with an increase in similar facilites of the Curtiss-Wrght Co., will more than double the monthly output by next summer.

Production figures are not available from official sources, but Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee recently placed data in the Congressional Record indicating that United had orders for producing 27,000 propellers in the fiscal year beginning next July, and Curtiss-Wright orders for turning out 14,000 in that period.

$500,000,000 in Taxable Notes Will Help Finance Defense

Democratic members of Congress and the results were very encouraging."

Morgenthau's precedent-shattering plan, going the World War financing program one better by asking the end of tax exempts, was made necessary by the huge military program on which the Nation has embarked.

The national budget for the fiscal year that starts July 1, 1941, will call for a record peace-time deficit of about $7,000,000,000, The Post learned yesterday.

Expenditures are estimated in the first budget drafts to total $15,000,000,000 for the 1942 fiscal year, against hoped-for revenues of $8,000,000,000.

Of this spending total, only about $7,000,000,000 would go for the so-called "normal" operating expenses of the Government. All the rest—$8,000,000,000—would be for rearmament and national defense.

This information was obtained as work began on the first of the new appropriation bills. As two subcommittees of Congress tackled the first money bills for the 1942 fiscal year Chairman Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, served notice that nothing—not even defense items—would be considered sacred in the hunt for economies. Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, echoed his sentiments.

While Morgenthau said he would probably ask that the authority to make all bonds taxable be discretionary, he added that he would also be glad to have it made mandatory.

The debt limit, he said, should be increased by at least as much as Congress has appropriated, but he declined to fix what exact figure above $65,000,000,000 he would favor as an ultimate debt ceiling.

Making known his intention to put on a sales campaign for baby bonds, Morgenthau said he would like to spread the cost of the preparedness drive over as many people as possible.

He estimated that 2,500,000 people now hold United States Savings Bonds and declared he would like to double and even triple that number.

To a suggestion that the savings stamps of World War days be revived, he replied:

"I would not turn down 25 cents if I thought I could get it under those circumstances."

"We have to raise an awful lot of money and I want as many people as possible to take part in raising it," he said.

The Treasury Secretary said he had conferred with several State Governors and mayors about reciprocal taxation of Federal and local securities and "I am a little bit encouraged."

A bill already is pending in Congress which would allow reciprocal taxation of Federal, State and local securities now tax exempt. Opponents of the proposal, who have managed to defeat it several times in the past, term it an unconstitutional invasion of States' rights They insist a Constitutional amendment would be needed.

Secretary Morgenthau estimated yesterday that $2,000,000,000 in presently tax-exempt Federal, State and municipal issues would fall due next year.

He said he expected the Government might at first have to pay a slightly higher interest rate on wholly taxable securities, but in the long run would save money.

The estimates of a $15,000,000,000 budget for next year compare with actual estimated expenditures during the current fiscal year of $12,058,000,000. Spending for this year was originally planned to be $8,424,000,000.

Meanwhile, several proposals were advanced for helping the Nation pay the preparedness bill. Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, introduced a bill to impose an annual tax of $1 on each billboard in the country.

The committee on Federal financeo f the Chamber of Commerce of the United States proposed a series of amendments designed to clarify and improve the Excess Profits Tax Act, which it called "unquestionably the most complicated, technical and involved statute ever enacted by Congress."

C. Oliver Wellington, New York, president of the American Institute of Accountants, in a speech here recommended nine changes in Federal tax laws to increase revenue yield and encourage the use of "enterprise" capital.

Defense to Net 6 Million Jobs, Lubin Predicts

Labor Statistics Chief Testifies Before House Migrant Committee

By James D. Secrest

Jobs for 6,000,000 persons will have been created, directly and indirectly, by the national defense drive by Christmas, 1941, Isador Lubin, director of the bureau of labor statistics, Labor Department, told the House Committee Investigating Interstate Migration yesterday.

Defense industries alone will have created 4,000,000 new jobs, Lubin said, while 2,000,000 more will have been employed in occupations which serve the defense workers.

He told the Tolan committee that 37,000,000 persons were employed in the United States last October. This is the highest figure since the depression, but still 700,000 under the peak level of the fall of 1929.

Meanwhile, the working population of the United States has been increased by 5,000,000, he said.

Asked by committee members what he would suggest to ease the reaction when national defense industries cease operation, Lubin said that "labor amortization" should be adopted to give the workers the same safeguard as the manufacturers.

Proposes Dismissal Wage

His plan would be to require defense industries to pay a dismissal wage based on the length of service.

Thus a man who has worked 100 weeks might be entitled to five weeks dismissal pay, Lubin explained.

"Do you think we'll ever reach the point where this country will have no unemployment?" asked Representative Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois.

"If I didn't, I'd quit my job," responded Lubin. "To admit we couldn't would be to admit bankruptcy."

Lubin, who is economic advisor to the National Defense Commission, admitted that he doesn't know the solution to the unemployment problem, but he suggested it might lie in the solutions to a number of problems.

Earlier Boris Shishkin, economist of the American Federation of Labor, proposed Federal "reemployment insurance" as a means of reducing unemployment by encouraging private investors to take financial risks.

At one point Lubin suggested that consumers might be taxed to provide insurance for men thrown out of work by technological advances, provided manufacturers passed along the saving from replacement of men by machines to the consumer.

When questioned about his opinion on the right of employes to strike in National Defense industries, Lubin pointed out that there were fewer strikes from May to October, this year, and during the corresponding periods of 1916 and 1917, when the United States was preparing for war and then in the war.

He dismissed the vultee aircraft plant strike as a flare-up of short duration "at a small aircraft factory."

Today Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will testify at 10:30 a. m. in the caucus room of the old House Office Building. It will be her second appearance before a Congressional committee. She set a precedent last spring when she appeared before a subcommittee of the House District Committee during a welfare inquiry.

Shishkin called attention to "the problem of the aftermath," when defense industrial activity will have ceased, and forecast "a crucial test of our ability as a democratic people to assure unbroken continuity in our ways and methods of production and our standards of work and living."

Among the recommendations made by Shishkin to protect the migrant workers were:

Regulation of interstate job advertising; extension of the wage and hour law and the right of collective bargaining; extension of social security benefits; extension of the Workmen's Compensation Act; authorization of additional funds for USHA housing; continuation of the migratory labor camp program of the Farm Security Administration, and modification of existing State settlement laws.

The "reemployment finance program," which the A. F. of L. spokesmen proposed, would constitute a Federal insurance on industrial loans made by private banks and other lending institutions. This action, he explained, would encourage private investores to take long-term risks.

"The only condition of Federal insurance on industrial loans of this kind," Shishkin explained, "would be the enforcement of minimum standards of fair competition and of such minimum labor standards as have already been established in the industry in question."

Charles Eliot director of the national resources planning board, submitted to the committee copies of reports made by the board on various aspects of the migration problem.

Officials Call for Speedup Of Rearmament Program

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aroused to greater action by their increasingly grave apprehensions for the peace and security of the American continents, national defense authorities are intensifying efforts to speed up production of all defense essentials to an "all-out" wartime tempo.

High ranking officials disclosed yesterday that—impelled by recent events in Europe and Asia—the major and urgent topics at the almost daily conferences of cabinet and national defense commission members are speed and greatly expanded production of planes, ships and munitions.

Pushing the "speed up" program aggressively, Administration officials now are also emphasizing the urgency and magnitude of the task of providing armed strength—for Britain, Greece, China and the American republics as well as for the United States—at officially inspired roundtable discussions with industrial and labor leaders.

William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, sounded the keynote of the "blitz-production" drive in an address last week at Detroit when he called on industry for "speed and more speed" in producing modern war weapons as the "best insurance to keep us out of war."

Secretaries Hull, Stimson, Knox and Morgenthau have been among the most outspoken, privately and publicly, in urging industry, labor and the average citizen to awaken to the need for accelerated production of war materials.

A new and powerful recruit joined them when Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, new chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, advocated round-the-clock production to step up plane, ships and munitions manufacture from a peacetime to a wartime pace.

Without criticizing the tremendously increased expansion of the defense program under way, with orders approximating $10,000,000,000 already placed, Senator George declared there was "pressing need for even greater and faster production than we are getting."

George also joined with other Adminstration leaders in urging immediate protective and remedial action in eliminating labor and management troubles, which have already slowed down production in some cases.

A number of high Administration officials, likewise, are advocating 24-hour days and 6-day weeks in all industrial plants concentrating on defense orders as urgently required since "material aid must be given Britain quickly to be effective."

Must Be More Speed

"Despite the excellent results already achieved in greatly expanding defense production," one high official declared yesterday, "there must be more speed in turning out planes, ships and everything else required for defense if the United States is to aid these peoples described by President Roosevelt as 'defending themselves against aggression,' as well as to bulwark the defenses of the American continent."

President Roosevelt used that expression in pledging Greece immediate American aid, which was interpreted here to include warplanes and surplus war weapons and ammunition, in an exchange of messages with King George II, made public Saturday.

The United States already is supplying Britain with an increasing number of planes and other supplies, and is expected to render similar assistance to China, still battling against a Japanese invasion after three years of war, and South and Central American republics preparing to defend themselves against any aggression.

Redoubling Not Enough

Although the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce has reported that the American aviation will have doubled its productive floor space by January 1, and will double it again by next June under present plans, one high Administration official declared that was still not sufficient.

"Planes are not coming off the production benches fast enough to meet the demand," he declared. "In addition to the Army and Navy requirements Great Britain has placed orders here for 12,000 planes, urgently needed to defend England and to achieve air supremacy in Egypt and elsewhere along the empire's lifeline.

"China, still battling bravely against tremendous odds, especially in the air, wants planes.

"Our 'good neighbors' in South and Central America want planes.

"And now comes Greece with a request for planes to aid her in fighting off invasion by Italy, six times as big.

"Where will the planes come from if we don't step on it and produce them faster?"

Another ranking Administration official emphasized the need to speed up the building of both war and cargo ships, especially cargo vessels for Britain, which is losing ship after ship in German submarine and sea-raider attacks.

The slogan of the "speed up" drive, officials said, was Secretary Knox's warning, "It's later than you think."

The theme of the reiterated warnings to American industrial leaders is provided by Secretary Hull's declaration that the European war is not a localized struggle, but an avalanche of invaders, sweeping closer to American shores in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

Scalise, Penniless, Begins Sing Sing Term

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 9 (AP).—George Scalise, former $25,000-a-year labor leader, entered Sing Sing Prison today—penniless—to begin a 10 to 20-year term for stealing union funds.

The former head of the Building Service Employes International Union had neither money nor property to declare to the property clerk. He was convicted last September on five grand larceny counts for stealing $9,662.27 from the union.

Small Business Asked to Help Speed Defense

Senate Seeks Cure For 'Little Industry's' Ills in Special Survey

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A small business solution of defense production "bottlenecks" yesterday was sought by three Federal agencies as a special Senate committee opened surveys of "little industry" ills.

In 100 different cities, the National Defense Advisory Commissoin's Labor Division was calling on local chambers of commerce to organize community committees to survey small plant facilities for defense program subcontracting use.

Two "demonstrations" meanwhile were undertaken in Charlotte, N. C., and St. Paul, Minn., after mayors of the two cities confarred here with Defense Commission spokesmen and Paul V. Betters, of the Conference of Mayors.

Practical Illustrations Sought

Object in each case was to provide practical illustrations of how local civic and industrial leaders, on their own initiative, can canvass plant equipment and available labor, and tie these into the defense program.

Cooperating closely with the Federal Reserve Board, another Defense Commission division — the Small Business Activities Office, under Donald M. Nelson—sought liaison between primary contractors who have received national defense contracts and small businessmen who have subcontracting facilities.

Credit guidance is supplied by the Federal Reserve Board, which has assigned district officers to provide procurement information and help potential subcontractors get necessary financial aid.

English Example Followed

Goal of the three-way program to harness little businesses in the national defense effort was ultimate "total" production. Modeled after the English system of "farming out" contracts to "bits and pieces" industries, the plan theoretically would eventually tap all reserves of idle men and machinery that could be put to defense use.

Entirely apart from the Defense Commission program, a special Senate committee on small business problems considered means of restoring "a healthy, virile and strong national small business economy."

Headed by Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana, the Senate group has sent out 35,000 questionnaires asking small businessmen to "state clearly your own problems."

It was learned yesterday that "inability to get defense contracts" figures high on the list of the early replies.

Three-fold Objective

Speed-up of defense production, relief of the unemployed and stimulation of lagging small enterprise was described as the three-fold objective of the promotional work being done by the Defense Commission's labor division, under Sidney Hillman.

Total production goal of the program extends far beyond plans for revival of 15 "ghost towns" recently outlined by Morris L. Cooke, the commission's engineering consultant in charge of the promotional work.

Stress was being laid on local initiative. To that end communities of all sizes with idle men and equipment were being urged to form local industrial committees for national defense. These would conduct necessary inventories and bring idle productive facilities to the attention of primary contractors and Army and Navy ordnance departments.

In a month of operation, Cooke's office has received mayors and industrial delegations from far-flung communities, providing defense program guidance in each case.

Bar Plans National War on Propaganda

Subversive Groups To Be Fought In Every County

The American Bar Association yesterday declared itself prepared to combat subversive activities in America with "education" committees organized in every county in the United States.

Establishment of counterpropaganda machinery was made public following a meeting of association officers in the headquarters of the bar's committee on national defense in the Hill Building at 839 Seventeenth Street Northwest.

Joseph P. Gaffney, of Philadelphia, chairman of the association's committee on American citizenship, declared the background of American constitutional government and the need for preservation of the country's traditional liberties would be emphasized in communities throughout the Nation.

Rallies Planned

The campaign will be carried on, he said, by distribution of pamphlets and through use of radio, lecture series and organization of Americanism rallies.

According to Jacob M. Lashly, of St. Louis, association president, literature to be distributed first will be reviewed by "all of the war services of the Federal Government" through a cooperative arrangement with the defense committee and Government agencies.

The meeting yesterday brought together with Lashly and Edmund R. Beckwith, of New York, chairman of the defense committee, the heads of all other bar committees whose work touches on national defense problems.

Henceforth, the gathering decided, every activity in which the association may help the country "prepare to defend itself from external or internal aggression" will be cleared through the defense committee, Gaffney stated.

Aiding Selective Service

Lashly pointed out that the defense committee already has supplied the Nation's Selective Service System with approximately 20,000 legal advisers to local draft boards, selectees and their dependents and can be expected to furnish a total of 150,000 volunteer lawyers when the selection of trainees reaches top speed.

He called the association's entire defense organization "the most wonderful thing the bar has ever done."

"With their knowledge of the development of American institutions and their training in the operations of the courts and other branches of Government, members of the association have prepared themselves to tackle a job that no other group in the country is equipped to undertake."

Through one of its committees now integrated with its defense machinery, the association also is prepared "to insure justice and fair treatment to those individuals or groups who may suffer from emotionalism engendered by the emergency," Lashly said.

Objectors Pose Problem

Conscientious objectors to military service, Lashly observed, will be "one of the most delicate of the problems the association will be called upon to face."

In another field of activity, the association, it was pointed out, already has assisted in drafting uniform State defense legislation and will concern itself in the future with preventing enactment of "jackpot" defense bills.

Also attending the meeting were George I. Haight, Chicago, chairman of the Bill of Rights committee; Lewis F. Powell, Richmond, chairman of the junior bar conference; Paul F. Hannah, Washington, director of the public information program of the junior bar conference, and the following members of the citizenship committee:

Louis E. Wyman, Manchester, N. H.; Frederick H. Wiggin, New Haven, Conn.; Clarence E. Martin, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Ralph R. Quillian, Atlanta; Earl F. Morris, Columbus, and George E. Morton, Millville.

Maj. Horton, Airplane Radio Inventor, Dies

Maj. Harry Mack Horton, U. S. Army, retired, inventor of the two-way airplane radio, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital at the age of 63.

MAJ. HORTON

He devised and perfected the first method of radio communication from airplanes to the ground shortly before entering the Army as a World War Air Corps captain, and the United States Government paid him $75,000 for its use during the war.

In Europe at the time as chief assistant to Dr. Lee DeForest, who is considered one of the outstanding pioneers in radio, Horton worked in his spare time on a "trailing antenna" that is still in use.

Perfecting the antenna in two years' work, he offered it to Dr. DeForest, but his employer declined to take any credit for its invention. Dr. DeForest and Maj. Horton were honored jointly last year at the New York World's Fair with a testimonial dinner in recognition of the device.

During the war Maj. Horton was an instructor of airplane pilots and radio operators in California. His service was terminated by a crash there and he was placed on the retired list as a result of the injuries sustained.

His death, after a long illness, was attributed to a heart condition believed to have been caused by the California accident. Since leaving active service, he had lived in Washington and, for the last three years, on a farm in nearby Wheaton, Md. During that period he was comparatively inactive, except for a brief, unsuccessful venture in the automobile business as agent here for Dusenberg cars.

Maj. Horton also invented one of the first gasoline gauges for automobiles and a trench gun equipped with a periscope, 30,000 of which he sold to the Russian army in the World War.

He was born in Knoxville, Pa., where his father and mother operated a private school, and went into electrical engineering work at Jersey City, N. J., in his early twenties. It was there that he became acquainted with Dr. DeForest.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sara C. Horton, and two sons, Mack and Thomas Horton, of Wheaton, Md.; a brother, Commander Fred Horton, U. S. Navy, retired, of Virginia Beach, Va., and two sisters, Mrs. Helen H. Gambell, of Vineland, N. J., and Miss Ada Horton, of Mansfield, Pa.

Funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Health Programs For U. S. Workers Found Profitable

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—After surveying health conditions affecting 1,945,000 employes, the National Association of Manufacturers announced today that "expenditures for medical supervision of employes is financially profitable."

The complete report, which will be made Wednesday to the annual convention of the association by its committee on healthful working conditions, said in part:

"It was learned (from a survey covering all types of industry in 47 States) that those companies installing and maintaining health programs have reduced occupational disease and injury by 47 per cent, and that the number of absences from work have been reduced 28 per cent.

"Following the installation of a health program costing a total of $6,445 a year, it was found that the typical company employing 500 employes saved $10,451, leaving a net savings to the company of 4,000. In addition to the savings, the employes, because of their fewer absences, received $5,046 more annually in pay."

Court Upholds NLRB Orders Reinstating Four

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday upheld two orders of the National Labor Relations Board requiring reinstatement with back pay of workers dismissed for the union activity.

Arcade-Sunshine Co., Inc., operator of a laundry here, was directed to reemploy William Jones, who worked for the company 11 years before his discharge a few months after he joined Landry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers Union in 1937.

The Press Co., Inc., publisher of the newspaper Knickerbocker News, Albany, N. Y., was directed to rehire three men whom the board found to have been dismissed for membership in the American Newspaper Guild. The court reversed the board's order that the paper reemploy a fourth man, who resigned after being given work he did not like.

Radio Serial Depicts Life In Washington

Program Devoted To the Ups and Downs Of Government Girl

By Richard L. Coe

Washington heard a new radio program yesterday morning—a serial drama of, by, but not necessarily for Washingtonians.

The program is titled "Helen Holden, Government Girl," is heard Monday through Friday morning over Station WOL at 1:30 and is being tested as a possible Mutual network feature. Dan Beattie, of the Furness-Beattie production organization, producers of the serial, is author-director. Playing three typical Washingtonians are Nancy Ordway, Robert A. Pollard and Neil Fleming.

Miss Ordway, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Godwin Ordway, of Georgetown, is the author of several articles on Washington life. She has the leading role of "Helen Holden." Pollard appeared here only last week in the Blackfriars' premiere of "Safe Crossing" and, with his wife, Cleone Pollard, is noted throughout the country for professional appearances with collegiate and "little theater" societies. Playing "David Bailey" in the new series, he's also heard on WOL's Stamp Romances Monday evenings at 8:15. Miss Fleming, in the role of Helen's aunt, "Mary Irving," came here from Sydney, Australia, where she appeared in stock companies as well as in broadcast dramas. Locally, she has been identified with the Blackfriars' Guild.

Contrived to depict Washington to those unfamiliar with a setting peculiar to this Capital, Beattie's script has three pivotal figures: Helen Holden, a young girl from the States who comes to Washington for a two-week visit with her aunt and remains to try for a post in the Federal service; Mary Irving, her aunt, a journalist whose assignments will take listeners through the labyrinthine ways of Washington official life, and David Bailey, a Government lawyer and friend of Aunt Mary's whose attentions are immediately arrested by newcomer Helen.

Yesterday's first installment drew unusual listener responses, in which the only criticism was that the broadcast time would not permit Government employes to follow their counterpart's adventures.

Social Agencies, Business Asked To Cooperate

Drive to Rid City Of 'Charity Rackets' Hailed at Luncheon

Cooperation between businessmen's groups and private social service agencies in the District was urged yesterday by business leaders at the monthly luncheon meeting of the Council of Social Agencies in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

John Victory, chairman of the Washington Board of Trade's charities and corrections committee, commended the teamwork between the two organizations in the current drive to eliminate "charity rackets" in the city and suggested more joint action to improve recreational facilities here.

Ihlder Cites Differences

Differences in the points of view of the welfare agency and business organizations were noted by John Ihlder, member of the Board of Trade and of the board of the council. The "enlightened self-interest" of the businessman and the "social consciousness" of the welfare worker each must be understood by the other for effective cooperation, he said.

Charles V. Koons, of the Junior Board of Commerce youth welfare committee, asked that the council point out new welfare projects for his organization. Such things as the board's annual boat ride for crippled children, the blood bank party, the Christmas party for shutins, and the "big brother" program for aiding underprivileged District boys would be undertaken by the board this year if a need were expressed, he reported.

J. A. Nolan, also of the Junior Board, added that the organization has long searched for gaps in the youth welfare field and would appreciate suggestions from other groups interested in welfare.

Funds Urged by Kaufman

Larger contributions to private charity through the Community Chest and more welfare work by business groups were urged by Joseph D. Kaufman, of the Board of Trade, "to keep pace with our rapidly growing city," and the resulting increase of welfare problems.

Members of the council voted to admit into the welfare coordinating body the women's council of the Federation of Churches and the Stoddard Baptist Home, both recommended by council board of directors. This action brings the number of member organizations to 95, according to Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the Council of Social Agencies, who presided at the meeting.

93 Traffic Ticket Adjustments Reported by Police

Five persons pleading diplomatic immunity were among 93 motorists whose traffic tickets were adjusted last week, according to the list made public yesterday by police.

The "fix primer" showed 22 persons had their tickets canceled outright, while 71 escaped with warnings.

George J. Obomoon, 6101 Fourth Street Northwest, a plumber was one of those favored with a warning notation after his name. Obomoon explained that he parked overtime in a restricted zone because he responded to a hurry call to do something about a bathroom that was being flooded.

That she was getting medicine for a sick child was the plea of Anne Friedman, of 342 Fifteenth Street Southeast, who also was let off with a warning. She told police she was in the drugstore barely one minute.

Those escaping through diplomatic immunity included: Karl Odie, German Embassy; Paula Whatley, British Embassy; Enrique L. Herrarte, Guatemalan Legation; Meredith S. Watts, Polish Embassy, and Stephen Feher, Hungarian Legation.

Industry Held Unprepared To Meet Boom

Production Not Keeping Pace With Increasing Demands, Jones Says

"The broad character of the advance in November is indicated in increases in many fields on a seasonally adjusted basis, including industrial production, electric power output, freight car loadings, and department store sales.

"Further expansion of industrial production necessarily will proceed at a slower pace in the near future because many companies producing goods that are in especially heavy demand have either reached or are approaching capacity," he said.

Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones said yesterday that industry thus far has not made sufficient preparation for the demand, domestic and foreign, that is in prospect.

In a monthly statement reviewing the rise in industrial output, Jones said:

"Assuming that the war in Europe continues, the demands on industry in the next year will multiply—for defense purposes, for export to England and its allies, and for increased civilian requirements as national income expands. A few industries have already moved to meet this expected increase in demand. What has been done up to date, however, is not enough."

"The general upswing of the last six months is being extended on many fronts," the Secretary said. "As in 1939, December industrial production will be the high point of the year.

Princeton, Ill., Dec. 9 (AP).—Investigation of the shotgun slaying of two children in their farm home near here was at a virtual standstill tonight, pending recovery of the mother, Mrs. Agnes Borg, 33, who was found standing in a 13-foot cistern a few hours after the tragedy.

State's Attorney Joseph R. Peterson said the mother, in a semi-conscious condition, was under guard in a hospital. He said no charges have been filed.

"WOMEN don't scare easily," declared Ida Jean Kain, Washington Post writer, lecturer and authority on diets and reducing exercises, before the Annual Convention of the American Dietetics Association.

"If a novel diet comes along that will give them anemia—but guarantees to reduce them—why, they'll chance the anemia," she said. "The way to get a woman on a sensible diet is to play up the dramatic results. There is plenty of drama," she continued, "in the staid, 1,000-calorie balanced diet! The true facts are more sensational than any faddy ideas. There's no necessity for anybody fasting to reduce when it's possible to reduce faster by no fasting!"

The balanced slimming diet, Miss Kain told her audience of more than 1,000 dietitians and their guests, can be the best diet in the world. "It will not only reduce weight just as rapidly as it should be lost, but will actually improve the health of the reducer!"

Miss Kain's 21-day diet has been reprinted on a single page, handy to tack on the kitchen wall, easy to follow day by day. Copies are available, free of charge, to all Post readers who wish to reduce the easy, sensible way. Send for your copy today!

WASHINGTON'S HOME MORNING NEWSPAPER

Gestapo Chief Acts to Repress Unrest Seething in All Nazi-Occupied Nations

Himmler Calls Aides to Deal With Problem

Censorship Fails To Hide Conditions In Conquered Lands

By Frederick T. Birchall

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Dec. 9—Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German Gestapo, summoned a conference of staff officers from the various armies of occupation a few days ago to consider the increasing unrest in some of the occupied countries and to prepare repressive measures for dealing with it.

The Swedish radio broadcast the fact, but thereafter a great silence fell upon Himmler's actions. What his conference decided will probably only be known from its fruits as they develop in the countries concerned.

There is not the least doubt, however, that unrest is increasing in most, if not all of the countries that Germany has invaded and occupied since she began with Poland in September, 1939.

"Unrest," in fact, is almost too mild a term for the state of mind prevailing in most of the occupied territories. If there were the least chance of success, it would develop into open revolt by subjugated people who see their national resources of food, raw materials, industrial machinery and household goods confiscated and moved away under their noses, while they themselves, often underfed, are compelled, at the will of the victors, to engage in the hardest and most humiliating labor at starvation wages.

Must Wait and Hope

There is no such chance at present, so the oppressed can only wait and hope. Strict censorship conceals their strivings and as far as possible the conditions under which they exist. It varies, naturally, according to conditions in the territories concerned, but the general rule is the worse conditions are, the stricter is the censorship concealing them.

Nevertheless no censorship has ever yet succeeded in wholly bottling up the brief items which when collected and carefully studied, present to the practiced eye a fairly accurate picture of what is going on.

The following summaries present as nearly as possible a truthful picture of what is going on behind the viel which Hitlerism has cast over its occupied territories:

France

There is no longer any question that in France, both in the German-occupied territory and the section nominally controlled by the Petain government, anti-German sentiment is increasing. A conservative computation is that two-thirds of the French people hope to see Great Britain victorious and Germany defeated in the present war. It is their only hope of ultimate restoration to a status in any way resembling the old independence.

It is also unquestionable that the cleavage between the Petain government and the people grows daily. The government itself is hopelessly split with more than half its members violently opposed to the aims and practices of Vice Premier Pierre Laval and the small group of opportunist politicians who stand for him. Between the two is the pathetic figure of the aged Marshal Petain.

To expect any active help from the French people for the British cause, because the great majority of them favor it, is another matter. There are more than 1,500,000 French prisoners of war still in German camps. They are hostages for French obedience and good behavior. Hitler does not hesitate to let it be known that if any German hair is ruffled in France it will be taken out on the French prisoners.

Shortage of Food

The French, if not actually starving, are hungry for the luxuries they once enjoyed and the prospect is that they may be hungry for some necessities before the winter is over. There is a shortage of meat, butter, cheese, eggs and sugar and a lack of coffee and chocolate. Long queues at the food shops are the rule rather than the exception.

Everything is rationed, but money, for the few who have it, still buys extra portions from sly traders for those who will pay the price and keep the secret. From Paris all gayety has disappeared except for the German soldiers, whose gayeties must be kept modest because army pay gives them little to spend.

The barrier between occupied and unoccupied zones is as tight as in the beginning, with no sign of immediate relaxation. Lorraine has now been incorporated in German territory and some 100,000 of its inhabitants banished into France, leaving their possessions behind under the vague promise that some day somebody—presumably the French government—will compensate them for the loss. What will happen to Alsace is still in doubt.

Unemployment is general, although the work of reconstruction lags. It calls for money at every step and the Vichy government has no money. And the whole population waits eagerly to know what Gen. De Gaulle will do or can do in French Africa and which way Gen. Maxime Weygand will go.

Belgium

Eight million Belgiums are living under German domination. After six months of occupation, the Germans are beginning to realize that Belgian hearts are with their compatriots who, from London, continue the struggle. German condenscension and good will are beginning to wear thin.

One of the recent acts is the taking over of Brussels University, which has been placed under the joint administration of an educator appropriately named Dr. Grab, and a lieutenant colonel from the German army.

Every effort of the victors to cajole or scare their Belgian victims has thus far been in vain, for there are facts the Germans cannot hide. Britain's airplanes, continuing the struggle against Germany, cross the skies nightly on their way to bombard German cities. The Belgian government, from London, still controls the Belgian colonies and continues steadily, as far as its resources permit, to take part in efforts which Belgians hope will ultimately lead to their country's liberation.

The Belgian King steadfastly refuses to become a German puppet, insisting that the Belgian government is in London and that he is powerless.

Serve as Informers

All the known traitors and suspects arrested before the invasion are now German proteges, but neither they nor the Rexists, who were the original Belgian Nazis and have been hoping for German support, are trusted. They serve as spies and informers, but no work of importance is entrusted to them.

The Germans favor all movements of opinion that might reduce the moral resistance of the Belgian people, but even the Flemish intellectuals from whom much was hoped have disappointed them. The spirit of resistance is as much alive among Flemings as among the Walloons, traditionally French in sympathy.

The Belgians, like the French, are strictly rationed and have lost their luxuries. They, too, have been looted, but in a moderate degree. They are not yet hungry. But if the tide does turn it is doubtful that they will be able to conceal their satisfaction and their lot may then become harder than it is now. And already some 50,000 Belgian workers have been deported to labor in Germany.

The Netherlands

The Netherlanders, as everybody knows, are a stolid, determined and stubborn people. They suffered much during the few days it took the German armies to overrun their country, but they sent their queen away to safety, and in London a Netherlands government is now functioning and still rules the colonies.

Meantime, the population under German control is making as much trouble as possible for the Germans occupying their country. A recent dispatch told of 2,000 civilian Hollanders in German prisons and said that this was a conservative estimate.

There is no doubt that the "unrest" of which Herr Himmler complains, and to deal with which he has summoned a council of officers, is in large part Dutch. The weapon is passive resistance and these people know how to use it, but they also have a few little tricks to make life difficult for the Germans. One is to reset and change the signposts on the country roads, causing military units to march long distances in the wrong direction. Heavy penalties have now been decreed for any interference with signposts.

German rule is harsh wherever there is a question of authority. The burgomaster of The Hague and the military governor of Amsterdam have been dismissed because anti-German demonstrations occurred in their jurisdiction. Several professors with anti-Fascist reputations have been sent to concentration camps. Prof. de Vries, of Rotterdam, has gone to prison for 18 months for "fostering hatred of Germans among his students." He had made a speech which began: "As all of you heard our beloved Queen Wilhemina say in her broadcast from London . . ."

Radio Sets Seized

A pro-Nazi schoolmaster asked the children in his class how many had listened to the Queen the night before. Most of them innocently admitted that they had heard the speech. Next day the radio sets in their parents' homes were removed by German police.

But the Germans, at heart, have a wholesome respect for the Netherlanders. They would reconcile them to nazism and German domination if they could, but that is impossible. There is a further strong reason for the victors to behave in that country as decently as they dare. It is a great producer of the foodstuffs that Germany needs most. From Netherlands farms they gather in—at cut prices it is true—butter, eggs, poultry, meat and fodder for their own cattle. They want Netherlands farmers to continue producing and, in this instance, they know that undue harshness will defeat itself. Perhaps they begin to realize that you can't crush a spirit such as was expressed on behalf of his countrymen by a former cabinet minister, Slotemaker De Bruine.

"Do not expect of us," he said, "that for the sake of national unity we should drive out of our public life that which is to us most holy. Spiritual freedom, freedom of church, school and opinion are in our very blood."

Denmark

Denmark is now in a situation hardly comparable with any other of the German-occupied countries. King Christian and his government perform their duties as before, with certain limitations imposed by the invaders, and exercise an influence by no means negligible in internal affairs.

There are two reasons. A minor one is perhaps that the Germans would like to keep Denmark, as far as possible, as a show piece to demonstrate to other little countries that life may be quite tolerable within the German Lebensraum.

The second and more important one is the Danish agricultural system. The Danish farmers have long been skilled workers in a finely adjusted agricultural industry. The Germans need the Danish produce and they know that without the cooperation of the farmers there will be no eggs, butter, cheese, fat cattle or poultry. They are even paying for what they get in Danish currency; the farmers would have none of the German credit coupons.

Systematically Looted

Denmark has been and is being looted almost up to the danger point, but as far as possible the plundering is being concealed under elaborate trade agreements.

The Danish government has confessed itself unable to prevent the German exploitation, which is financed under duress by the National Bank through a so-called German clearing account.

Thousands of Danes, thrown out of work by the cessation of overseas trade, have been driven to take employment in Germany, and other thousands are waiting to go to sustain their families. But their wages, sent home, are paid by Germany through this same clearing account, so that literally Denmark is providing Hitler with free labor inside Germany. Danish livestock far beyond normal requirements is being slaughtered for lack of fodder and the meat sent to Germany at German prices, cleared through the same agency.

So Germany may be killing off the Danish goose that lays the golden eggs she needs, in spite of herself.

Norway

Of all the countries under German occupation, it is generally agreed that Norway is giving her captors most trouble and is most strongly pervaded by a spirit of defiant independence that will not down. The spirit even extends to the school children, who beat up other children induced by their parents to join the youth organization formed by Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi leader.

Maj. Quisling himself has to go about under escort of a large and well-armed bodyguard. A bomb exploded within a few feet of him in Frederikstad, southern Norway, recently, and on the same day only his bodyguard enabled him to escape from a riot started against him in the neighboring town of Sarpsborg.

The skating champion, Michael Staksrud, who became a member of the Quisling party, mysteriously disappeared a few weeks ago. His body has since been found in a lake near Oslo.

German reprisals have been immediate and severe whenever anything of this kind has occurred. When a German soldier was shot in a street brawl in Oslo, the Gestapo immediately gathered in 15 bystanders, took them to the nearest barracks and shot every other man.

Directors of Norwegian schools have been ordered to expel immediately all pupils showing "a provocative attitude" toward the new regime. Norwegians have been forbidden to whistle in the streets, because it was suspected that they whistled derisively whenever Germans passed by. Another recent order has forbidden "impolite

Latest U. S. Merchant Ships Can Be Adapted as Cruisers

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr.

New York.—Cruisers have multiple duties—to be the eyes of a fleet and scout out the enemy position, to drive home a destroyer attack on the enemy in battle, to protect the capital ships of its own fleet against such attack and, when these duties are fulfilled, to keep open lines of sea communication.

The United States Navy has 37 cruisers in commission and is building 43 more. These latter, however, will not be in service for several years as some are only in the blueprint stage.

The demands of the fleet for cruisers must be considered first. After that, cruisers that may be spared can be assigned to running down enemy sea raiders or to convoying merchant shipping.

If war comes to this country in the next few years our available cruisers—37 plus perhaps a few new ones rushed to completion—will not be enough. Other vessels must be supplied then to do cruiser duty on communications lines. This may be done by converting fast merchant ships—usually passenger liners—into armed auxilliary cruisers. These ships would have the double duty of protecting convoys and of running down enemy sea raiders comprising similar converted merchantmen.

Britain Has 75

Great Britain has more than 75 regular cruisers—heavy and light—yet she has not half enough to take care of fleet duties devolving on cruisers and to guard the sea lanes. Britain has fitted out a number of merchant ships to act as cruisers. The Carnarvon Castle, which fought a German raider in the South Atlantic last week, is one of these.

The United States in the last few years has built some fine merchant ships especially designed and adapted for conversion into auxiliary cruisers. The latest, and largest, of these is the 27,000-ton America. Others are the Manhattan and Washington of 24,289 tons each; George Washington, 23,788 tons; President Coolidge, 21,936 tons; Argentina and Brazil, 20,614 tons each, Monticello, 19,361 tons; Mariposa and Monterey of 18,017 tons each, and Lurline, 18,009 tons. Some of the new and faster freighters might serve as light cruisers and others have been planned for conversion into troop ships or hospital ships.

All of the vessels named above were built under Government supervision with the idea in mind in each individual case of using the ship in time of war. Some of them already are down in the war plans of the Navy to be converted into cruisers.

The number and caliber of guns to be fitted in each case was carefully worked out even before the ships were built and during construction the decks were strengthened for the reception of these guns.

Would Get Guns, Armor

If war came tomorrow these ships would be sent immediately to the nearest Navy Yard to have their guns installed, armor plate placed to protect the bridge and fire control center and otherwise prepared for their new role. Places for ammunition storage will be designated and electric power hoists installed from magazines to guns.

Take the American for example, now engaged in winter luxury cruises to Southern waters. Six-inch guns to the number of 12 pieces would be installed as the vessel's principal battery. The guns allotted to this ship are already built and waiting, installed in armored gun houses and ready to be noisted aboard and secured in place. There would be two guns in the bow, two astern and two guns at each of the four corners of the superstructure deck.

In addition to this main battery, a number of antiaircraft guns would be mounted, from 3-inch to 5-inch in caliber, and a number of machine guns provided.

The ship then would be commissioned as a warship and a full member of the Navy and sent out either to guard sealanes or run down enemy surface raiders and submarines.

Such a converted warship would be no match for a regular cruiser with its armored decks and side armor and a crew highly skilled in gunnery. With these craft it would avoid battle, if its speed of 33 knots was sufficient. However, against similar converted ships of the enemy and against submarines, it would be able to give a good account of itself.

words" at meetings addressed by Quisling speakers. Meetings in the street are broken up by the Gestapo.

More serious are undoubted cases of sabotage designed to hamper the German army. Quite recently a fire of suspected incendiary origin destroyed a whole row of warehouses in Bergen although German soldiers fought it for 24 hours. The Norwegian labor unions have united to oppose the transfer of unemployed Norsemen to Germany.

Plays to Empty House

Frequently when the German newsreel, put on by order, is started in a theater, some one in the dark will start the Norwegian national anthem. In a moment the whole audience will be on its feet singing fervently. When the anthem ends, the audience troops out, leaving the newsreel to be run to empty benches.

There is no doubt that the Germans, who began by invading Norway treacherously, have since handled the conquered country clumsily. Their demand that the Storting (Norwegian parliament) remove the King was a psychological blunder. He, in exile, is now the hero of his people.

The story is told that a wealthy Norwegian called at an Oslo restaurant to request the maitre d'hotel to reserve a table for him for "the day of the King's return." He was told that all places were booked for the first three days of those celebrations, but room might be found for him in the fourth.

Norway, like other occupied countries, has been systematically looted by the Germans of eggs, butter and other agricultural produce. Eggs, butter and tobacco are now virtually unobtainable in the open market, but are sold to Norwegians secretly when they can be obtained. There is no food distress yet, but the winter outlook is dark.

And hate for Germany grows along with the severity of reprisals.

Poland

It is more difficult to get news out of Poland than from any other of the countries invaded in this war. Such news as does come out is of outstanding horrors.

Germans have always disliked and affected to despise Poles. Their dislike is now being vented in brutality almost beyond belief, augmented perhaps by the feeling that the war which is making German life so disagreeable, originated in Poland and was due to Polish "obstinacy" in fighting against German invasion.

There seems to be no doubt that 3,000,000 Poles have perished in the German invasion and under German occupation. The condition to which the Jews in Poland have been reduced is pitiable beyond expression.

In June there were 300 executions in Warsaw alone; in August the number was even greater; in September among 100 executed were 20 women. These figures comprise only those killed after quasi-legal proceedings. They do not take into account the deaths from torture by the Gestapo, the victims of the prisons and concentration camps, who number hundreds if not thousands more.

Thousands have died of cold and starvation. The horrors of the Polish concentration camps have greatly exceeded any told of Dachau and Oranienburg.

A reliable report received in London recently regarding conditions in a prison camp told that civil prisoners were compelled to work 16 hours a day with half an hour off for a scanty meal. They were not allowed to rest and when they collapsed from weakness they were tortured by the practiced sadists who were their warders. Old men and the weak succumbed in a short time.

Dumped in Country

Thousands of prosperous Poles in the cities have been rounded up in the night and deported in unheated freight cars, with only a few belongings, to sheds in the open country where they have been dumped to get along as best they can. Their city homes with all that was left in them have been turned over to Germans.

Thousands more have been sent to work on fortifications along the Soviet frontier and to agricultural work in Germany. Most shocking of the round-ups have been those of young girls seized in the streets of Warsaw and carried off in motor trucks to "agricultural work" in Germany. The alleged agricultural work is known to be only a blind for houses on the edge of German military camps.

That this is no propaganda invention is shown by advertisements in the German-controlled papers, where daily there appear in the missing column the names of girls between the ages of 16 and 20 who left their homes on such and such a day and failed to return.

Rations for the Polish population are sufficient barely to stave off starvation. What they will be when the winter scarcity makes itself felt no one dares predict. Only one factor of relief has developed in the last few months. The Germans began by dismantling Polish factories and moving their machinery to Germany. When the British airplanes began to bomb German war plants the dismantling was stopped. Certain German plants, the latest an aero-engine factor from Kassel, are now being moved to Poland out of reach of the bombers.

Should the raiding airplanes follow them there, the Poles will rejoice. They are beyond fear of death now, and the appearance of R. A. F. machines, among the pilots of which are some of their own fliers, will give them notice that they are no longer beyond the range of their friends.

Bohemia

The Bohemian Protectorate, which once was Czecho-Slovakia and suffered the first terrors of German invasion and occupation, has been suffering from greater German ruthlessness since the fall of France. The reason is somewhat obscure but apparently as the war became more serious and casualties more numerous the German Gestapo and Schutzstaffel men in the protectorate feared that they might be called from their easy berths to service at the front. At any rate they began to discover nests of rebellion in the most unlikely places and a new reign of terror started.

Former Social Democrats and left-wing politicians who had accepted the new regime and had been left unscathed began to disappear. Men who had welcomed the Germans in 1939 and been reviled for it by their compatriots were now, in their turn, thrown into prison. Czech local officials who had been left in office followed them. The Mayor of Prague, praised by the Germans for his complacency, was one. Professors and writers also vanished.

Nevertheless the ruling Germans profess that all is well in the protectorate. They point out that they have even raised wages. It is true that some wages have gone up, approximately a cent an hour, but that is no consolation to the worker who finds that everything he buys has risen from 50 to 75 per cent. He is far worse off financially than he was two years ago. Moreover, although everybody is rationed and rations are admittedly slightly more liberal than they are in Germany, food is much scarcer than it was under the republic.

Relics of Past Scrapped

All tendencies are toward full incorporation of the former Czech territory in the Reich. Every relic of former autonomy has been scrapped, but even more significant are the new barriers against Czech trading. No Czech university is now open. The books and apparatus of those formerly existing are being moved to Germany. The building of Czech elementary and secondary schools has been forbidden on the ground that all building materials are required for military purposes. But German schools are still being built. Similarly the stocks of publishers and booksellers are being confiscated—"required by the military."

In economic life there is the same discrimination. Czech factories are being closed and Czech industries are being deprived of materials and work in favor of German industries. Industrial workers are being deported to Germany. Under the latest labor law all Czech men between the ages of 16 and 70 have to work where their masters tell them. It is estimated that more than 80,000 have already been carried across the frontier.

The Czech reaction is to produce faulty workmanship, for pride in the natural product has ceased with the ending of exportation except to Germany. Cultivation of the land has become poor. This year's harvest has been far less than normal. And the Czechs, too, bide their time and look for future deliverance. The best news the protectorate has had in many long months was the recent British recognition of the Czecho-Slovak government in London.

Rumania

Rumania is in the news daily and all the news is of increased disorders and greater disturbances since the Germans arrived and took possession of the country's key posts. It is now recognized that Rumania is in no better but probably in worse plight than most of the countries invaded and conquered by Germany.

To all intents she is already a German possession, so far as any external or important internal action is concerned. Indeed, reports from Bucharest indicate that many Rumanians who did not initially welcome the German troops hope now that the Reich will take full control before long and oust the native gangsters who hold sway.

The influence of Premier Antonescu is steadily waning. The boy King, Michael, is a figurehead and virtually a prisoner in his palace. The new rulers—and these are perhaps only temporary, for they are incapable of governing the county, in the opinion of leading Rumanians, are the obscure adventurers who lead the Iron Guard and are simply creatures of the German Nazis, used by them for their own purposes.

The outstanding feature of life in Rumania, according to all reports, is the increasing German control over the economic life of the country, which must eventually result in full occupation and possession.

Thus from one end to the other of countries in German occupation comes the same story of discontent, disorders and the troubles that Herr Himmler classifies under the general heading of "unrest." It is small wonder that he felt the need of a conference to determine how to put the "new order" in a German world upon a basis of calm and quiet.

Ina Claire Will Star In New Behrman Comedy

John Halliday Also in Cast of Unnamed Play; A Venus of the Airlines Is Being Sought; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH ELMER RICE'S "Flight to the West," as its first production of the current season, the Playwrights' Company has in immediate prospect the unfurling of a new S. N. Behrman play, as yet untitled. This second item will be of particular interest because it will bring Ina Claire back to the boards after an absence of two years. Cast opposite her for the first time will be John Halliday, who, to the best of my recollection has not trod an Eastern rostrum since Jane's Cowl's "First Lady."

BELL

The new Behrman work is described as a modern comedy-drama, with serious undertones, set in New York. The Playwrights' Company has had the far-sighted sagacity to engage Herman Shumlin, the producer-director responsible for Ethel Barrymore's most resounding hit in years, "The Corn Is Green," which Washington was so fortunate as to see recently prior to its all-enveloping conquest of Broadway to direct. After a short out-of-town "break-in, which it is to be hoped will embrace the National Capital, the piece will open on Broadway early in January.

In the meantime, Katharine Cornell, who scored so decisively in Mr. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy" last season, still has made no decision regarding her activities this season. The actress-manager is reputed to have indicated that she would like to produce "Mary Poppins"—not to be confused with "Hellza"—in association with her husband, Guthrie McClintic. The script is a dramatization by Nancy Hamilton, with music by Morgan Lewis, of the popular stories by Pamela Travers. It is the third collaboration of Miss Hamilton and Mr. Lewis. The other two were "One for the Money," season before last, and "Two for the Show," last season. "Produce," not "act in," the man said.

With "Miss America" and her geographic competitors, counterparts and the like disposed of as long ago as last fall, a search is now being instituted for America's most beautiful airline stewardess. Yes, it all hooks up with that "hemispheric premiere," in celebration of Pan-American Aviation Day. The National Aeronautic Association, sponsoring the "hemispheric" business with the Loew enterprises, is looking for this flying Venus, to be crowned "Miss Flight Command." She will be selected by a panel of judges, headed by William P. Redding, NAA officer and including a well-known photographer, a noted woman flier, an artist and a newspaper picture editor and, of course, will participate in all the gay goings-on scheduled for the day and evening of Tuesday, December 17, with Loew's Capitol Theater the center of activity and interest.

So that indomitable veteran, Louis Bernheimer, who already operates a string of residential picture houses in and around the Capital, is opening another one on Thursday night. It is the Vernon Theater, on Mount Vernon Avenue, in Alexandria, Va., and will be under the management of Stanley Barlup, formerly long-term assistant manager of Loew's Palace in this city. The Vernon will have a seating capacity of 900 and was designed by Architect John Zink, whose most recent monument in Washington is the Apex Theater, recently opened by the Kogod-Burka Amusement Co., on Massachusetts Avenue at Forty-eighth Street, Northwest.

While decisions of such a nature usually are not made so early in the week, Bette Davis in the Warner Brothers picturization of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Letter," is sardining them in so tightly at the Metropolitan that it will be continued a second week, beginning Thursday, at the F Street house. This will make its third week in the midcity area.

And since the drama desks barged in on the tailend of a screening at which they had no business a fortnight or so ago, and saw the final few minutes of "Tin Pan Alley," the Loew factotums are ripping it off again today to let the cricks see how the handsome Technicolor thing started.

Mr. and Mrs. Brock Whitlock announce the birth of a 7-pound, 9-ounce son, William Brock Whitlock III, at Columbia Hospital at 5:50 a. m., Saturday, December 7. Mrs. Whitlock and her first child are reported resting comfortably. Almost as much can be said of Mr. Whitlock, assistant manager of Loew's Capitol. Congratulations is what I always say.

Hello, Deadline, good-by space!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 9.

Nunnally Johnson's first picture was for Maurice Chevalier, titled "A Bedtime Story." Boy! Has he gotten away from that! Though Nunnally looks on the bright side of life, he has won glory for himself and his studio by writing about the other side. He did "Grapes of Wrath" when they said it couldn't be done. He has just finished the film version of "Tobacco Road," when even Will Hayes' office said it shouldn't be done. But Nunnally says:

HOPPER

"After you're taken all the dirt out of 'Tobacco Road,' people have been asking me, what's left?

"As a matter of fact, nobody has asked me any such thing, but I've got to get this column started some way, and the reputed dirt in 'Tobacco Road' is my subject.

Three months ago, when Darryl F. Zanuck assigned me to the screen play of this dusty classis, I went to New York to see it on the stage, for the first time. (When it opened I was too young to go to the theater.) I wanted to see for myself how much of a garbage disposal job I had sawed off.

"I came out of the theater bewildered. Either I was downright depraved, and couldn't recognize dirt when I saw it, or else common talk had skinned up the wrong tree. Outside of a few dishes contributed by the actors, or the director, I found almost nothing to which anything but the strictest exception could be taken.

"When Jeeter and his raffish family go about getting Lov's turnips it is about as understandable and justifiable a piece of mass thievery as one could very well imagine. I am naturally in no position to speak for the rest of the human race, but if I had been there, hungry, and Lov ventured into my yard with a croker sack full of turnips, old Jeeter Johnson would have been right in there scrambling for his share.

"But I realize, of course, that their ethical philosophy is not the occasion for the general assumption that 'Tobacco Road' is hot stuff. It's their—look out!—attitude toward sex. My information, from Dirt Operative 24, was that this was oh boy!

"But with one thickish moment excepted, I failed to spot it. When I learned that Lov's wife, Pearl, was only 13 years old I figured that her presence on the stage would give me a bit of nasty turn, but I failed to reckon on the ingenuity of the producers of the play. Pearl appeared all right, but in the person of an actress clearly 25 years old and, to use snap judgment, able to find her way around and about, either on stage or off. So that cleared that one up.

"There was another moment which I am sure gave rise to the usually accepted belief that the play contains a suggestion of incest. This was when Jeeter exhibited a certain amiable interest in Pearl, the 25-year-old child bride, but it should be pointed out that this interest never manifested itself until he had learned, with some mild surprise, that he was not Pearl's father."

New Spewack Play Is An Excellently Acted Satirical Farce-Comedy

New as it is, to the steadfast patrons of the National Theater it seemed an oddly reminiscent play that Max Gordon brought to the Capital last night for its metropolitan premiere, following a single Saturday performance in Princeton.

In theme, but not in period, place or dramatis personae, "Out West It's Different," the new comedy-drama in three acts and five scenes, by Bella and Samuel Spewack, bears a close relationship to this season's earlier "Suzanna and the Elders." Its revolt, however, is against artistic rather than economic slavery. In the slyly ingenuous manner of its portrayal, one of the characters in the play within the play is somehow vaguely suggestive of the demurely deceptive Bessie Watty, in Ethel Barrymore's "The Corn Is Green," although it leads to no such catastrophic crisis as the scheming Miss Watty precipitated.

But it should not be inferred from these nebulous analogies that "Out West It's Different" is a stuffy item remote from the here and now. Quite to the contrary, it is an amusing, slightly spicy and not too farcical commentary upon the manner and mood of any "arty" group of theatrical counterfeits that might be discovered in present-day New York's East Fifty-fourth Street.

The action opens none too vigorously with "The Nucleus" in the keenly satirical throes of the "conception," "creation" and "projection" of a new drama, being ground out laboriously in the face of insuperable impediments by Stewart Frank, elevated from lowly usher in Radio City to the "American Chekhov" among playwrights by Keith Grable, the Maestro of The Nucleus who will admit, if sufficiently pressed—and even if not—that he is "the most significant figure in the theater since Stanislavsky."

Flies in Ointment

There are a few flaws in all these pretentions. Dramatist Frank, for instance, is blindly and numbingly in love with the beautiful visiting film star, Ingred Egan, vacationing in the East after seven years as "Queen of the 'B's'" in Hollywood. Brandon Carey, the celluloid matinee idol, is Mr Frank's chief cause of concern. Even Maestro Grable is occasionally distracted from his creative urge, and his meal ticket as "The Monster" in radio, by the annoying alimony demands of his estranged wife, Barbara. The handsome Mr. Carey eventually becomes one of his major discomfitures, too.

These demoralizing intrusions of "normalcy" upon the lofty purposes of The Nucleus in time bring about its partial disintegration, just as the economic dynasty in "Suzanna and the Elders" was overthrown. This does not come about, fortunately, until after the Spewacks have poked a great amount of barbed fun at the toy balloons of bogus artistry, pompous pretending and incurable egomania. The source of greatest hilarity reposes in the preparation of the new play so seriously interrupted by Mr. Frank's impetuous marriage to the dazzling Ingred and the bride's impatience at the delay of a honeymoon that seems more than likely never to arrive.

Glibly and pungently written though it be, "Out West It's Different" is not the inspiration of continuously uproarious mirth. It comes a little nearer being than any comedy that has preceded it to Washington this season, but sags at least once in each act, nevertheless. The final curtain, for example, does not descend upon the explosive note needed to end the play in a burst of diaphragmatic laughter. In the matter of curtain lines throughout the three acts, as a matter of fact, the authors could take a leaf from last year's "Off the Record" book to high advantage.

Splendidly Balanced Cast

As among the current year's lighter stage works, "Out West It's Different" is easily the best acted of the lot. The cast is considerably better balanced than the script's counterpointing of satire and farce.

Sam Levene, codirector with Mr. Spewack, is characteristically dynamic, humorous and dominant in the pivotal role of the Maestro to whom The Nucleus is life—until something better comes along—and as Hiram Wordsworth, to whom acting is a religion and a god, Charles DeSheim contributes a study that is a gem of consistency in its uniform excellence. Keenan Wynn's Brandon Carey, although by no means the "fattest" part in the play, is the one that produces the three acts' most instant and spontaneous laughter. Katherine Bard, as Myra Lee, the novice cast to play the role of "Drifting Helen, a naive prostitute," is immensely effective by sheer contrast.

Playing a role that strangely parallels some of the aspects of her own professional career, Claire Trevor proves herself one of the most competent stage actresses recently proselyted from the West Coast studios. Miss Trevor is lovely to look at, deft in comedy and believable in her more romantic moments. Without her the play would have no point.

Perhaps it has none, anyway.

New York, Dec. 9.

THE NEW SHOW, "Off the Record"—in which Bruce Cabot and other Hollywood actors have featured roles—concerns a political entanglement, wherein a man elected to the Senate dies two days before he is to take office. His party chieftains try to withhold the news of his death until after the induction ceremonies, so that they can designate his successor . . . The Senator-elect does not appear in the play. But in one scene, campaign posters, displaying his picture, are shown. John Shubert, the producer, needed someone to pose for that campaign poster. He tested every Hollywood actor in the cast—all with senatorial make-up—but none looked convincing enough. After a thorough search, Shubert finally found the man who looked distinguished enough to be a candidate for the United States Senate, and his photo will be used in the campaign scenes . . . He's the doorman at the Maxine Elliott Theater.

"That little canary is an old friend of mine. Sure. His name is Morris F. Canary."

LOLITA CORDOBA, who leaps and twists while she leads the rhumba band at the Hurricane, led the band quietly and conservatively last night—because the tall, distinguished-looking man observing her from a ringside table was her father . . . Mrs. Preston Van Wyck, the dancer, whose husband is a descendant of New York's first mayor, again will appear in the courts—to press a lawsuit concerning the sale of her Hispano-Suiza . . . Estelle Taylor goes to Boston's Mayfair, with a new song repertoire, on December 18 . . . When Groucho Marx and Joe Mankiewicz were inspecting the screen tests made for the new Marx Brothers movie, Mankiewicz said about one actress: "She won't do. She has big shoulders and a foreign accent" . . . "Well," Groucho snarled, demanding an apology, "so did my mother."

long last, the Charles Boyer-Deanna Durbin picture has been decided. The great French lover and the little singing star will be teamed in "Romance." Don't confuse the title with the famous old story played for years and which Greta Garbo made as a picture. Although the titles are the same, the Durbin-Boyer is an original by two writers on the Universal lot. Incidentally, "U" will give out no details about the story or the authorship because it would reveal too much of the sensational plot twist.

Sounded almost like a gag when I received a wire on the train that Cecil De Mille may step before the camera to play the important role of Judge Cothrington in his own picture, "Reap the Wild Wind." But far from a joke, Y. Frank Freeman is doing everything in his power to get C. B. to play the part. There's far more sense than nonsense in Paramount's offer to their star director. Not only is he one of the biggest names in the directorial field, but C. B. is well known to millions of radio fans who listen to his weekly shows.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: M-G-M is testing Diana Barrymore, John's daughter, now appearing on Broadway in "Romantic Mr. Dickens," for a movie job. Hear Diana and Jawn have healed their rift since Elaine Barrie went out of his life; not everybody knows that Rita Haworth was invited to the cocktail party Ann Sheridan tossed last week—but Rita couldn't accept because she's working in "Strawberry Blonde," the picture Annie was supposed to do; Tallulah Bankhead is coming to the Coast for a visit and may spend Christmas in Hollywood. John Emery can't come with her because he's in a New York show.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

High Court Voids Island's Rum Law

Puerto Rico Statute Preventing Barcardi From Manufacturing Under Own Label In Territory Called Treaty Violation

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In an opinion directly affecting inter-American trade relations, the Supreme Court yesterday unanimously decided on a "liberal interpretation" of a treaty signed by the United States and eight countries of Latin America in 1929.

Among other questions handed down yesterday, the court ruled against the United States Government in six out of eight cases in which Federal agencies were immediately interested. The six cases, all dealing with taxes, were disposed of in three opinions.

The high court agreed to review the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. case arising out of a decision of the National Labor Relations Board that induced the first major public split between Dr. William M. Leiserson and the other two board members last year.

ASCAP Case Accepted

Also accepted for review was the Nebraska case that may determine whether the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) is an illegal monopoly. The organization is now engaged in a bitter row with the broadcasting companies.

Written by Chief Justice Hughes, the opinion in the Latin American treaty case invalidated a territorial law that would have prevented manufacture in Puerto Rico of rum under the Bacardi trade mark of a Cuban corporation.

Discrimination of this sort, said the court, cannot stand against the General Intef-American Convention for Trade Mark and Commercial Protection which has been adopted by the United States, Cuba, and seven other nations.

Liberal Construction

The Cuban government had officially informed Secretary Hull of its interest and that of Cuban nationals in the question before the court.

Pointing out that "this treaty on ratification became a part of our law," Chief Justice Hughes—who was Secretary of State from 1921 to 1925—said that 'according to the accepted canon, we should construe the treaty liberally to give effect to the purpose which animates it."

"Even where a provision of a treaty fairly admits of two constructions, one restricting, the other enlarging rights which may be claimed under it, the more liberal interpretation is to be preferred," he said.

The mere fact that the law would apply to the nationals of Puerto Rico as well as to foreigners does not alter the case, the Chief Justice declared. "A ratifying state cannot escape the obligations of the treaty and deny protection (of the trade mark) by the simple device of embracing its own nationals in that denial. That would make a mockery of the treaty," he declared.

The six tax cases which the Government lost yesterday were divided into groups of three, two and one. Opinions were written by Justices Hughes, Black and Stone, respectively. The two cases the Government won involved a perjury indictment, and were handled in an opinion by Justice Murphy.

Experts on the subject said that this was the poorest showing on one day that the Government has made in the last few years—although it was noted that none of the cases was of major popular interest. Nevertheless, the group of cases settled in the Black opinion may mean a saving to insurance companies of many millions of dollars in taxes.

The court acted on two other important matters affecting the National Labor Relations Board. It ordered the Seventh Circuit Court to reconsider a case which had been previously decided against the NLRB, and it refused to reopen an NLRB case which a C. I. O. union had won.

Reconsideration Ordered

The first of these—in which reconsideration was ordered—involved the Foote Bros. Gear & Machine Corporation, of Chicago, which had ordered the company to cease negotiating with an independent union, to refund dues checked off employes' pay for the union and to reinstate employes allegedly fired for union activities.

In the other case, which had been decided in favor of a C. I. O. union a few weeks ago, the International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.) asked the court for a rehearing on the grounds that it had failed to settle the extent of the NLRB's power to prescribe the appropriate bargaining unit. The case involved the Serrick Corp., of Muncie, Ind.

The court refused to reopen the matter despite the plea of Joseph Padway, counsel for the A. F. of L., that "it is of the utmost and vital importance to petitioners (I. A. M.) and to all other organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L., that a determination respecting the extent of the board's powers in prescribing bargaining units be obtained."

Other Decisions

In other decsions, the Supreme Court held that:

Federal courts must follow the interpretation of State law given by an inferior State court if a higher State court has made no ruling.

Farmers have the right under the Frazier-Lemke Act to redeem their land at its appraised value before it can be offered for sale.

The 1933 Securities Act allows security buyers who charge a company with fraud to sue for a receiver and damages.

The court also:

Decided that men who sold supplies to moonshiners could not be convicted of conspiracy unless it could be proved that they knew the distillers were in conspiracy.

Ordered a Washington State District court to entertain a $1,500,000 antitrust damage suit brought by C. E. Stevens Co., Seattle billboard advertising firm, against Foster and Kleiser Co., a Pacific Coast outdoor advertising firm.

Reversed a lower court decision awarding $142,000 damages to California Joint Highway District No. 13 for failure of a contracting firm to complete a highway-tunnel project near Oakland.

Family of 12 Face Christmas Apart

eight years old. Tommy."

It will be!

Over and over, in letters that come with their checks, contributors have thanked The Post for the opportunity to join in this sort of constructive long-range giving, which will mean a new chance for the families.

Many more contributions are needed from Post readers, however, and soon, if the entire list of families is to be cared for.

Family No. 25

Homeless at Christmas—that is the bleak situation of Mr. and Mrs. M. and their children. Since fire destroyed the house in which they were living, the family divided up among neighbors who could crowd other persons into the home only by letting them sleep on palletz. The ten M. children range from a girl of 14 down to a 6-month-old baby.

Only two days before the fire, Mr. and Mrs. M. had paid a month's rent for the little house. And in addition to furniture, bedding and clothes, they lost the supply of groceries which they had bought on Mr. M.'s pay day.

It had been the family's thrifty custom to lay in the staples, so that on the last few days before the next pay day, when pennies are so scarce, there was always meal and a few canned vegetables that could be made to stretch out. As a truck driver, Mr. M. makes $20 a week on which to support a family of 12. But somehow the family has managed to get along until this calamity struck.

Mr. and Mrs. M. are hunting for another place to live, but are having great difficulty in finding a house large enough for their family with rent low enough for them to afford.

The family could be brought together again in time for Christmas, if $125 were provided to cover a month's rent, some furniture, bedding and clothes.

Family No. 26

Bill must have help to work out his complicated problems. Although he is only 17 years old, he has the responsibility of a wife and small child, and he has had trouble which brought him into the Juvenile Court. He took a sum of money from his employer. He said that it was because his wife and child were ill; that he meant to borrow it and pay it back.

Through the efforts of the agency which became interested in the case of Bill, who was only a juvenile in the eyes of the law, although his socia lresponsibilities are those of an adult, was referred to Juvenile Court despite the fact he had been sentenced in the higher court.

Now he needs training and a job if he is to carry his responsibilities as husband and father. His wife, also 17, needs to have her health built up—she will have another child in the spring. And the 4-month old baby needs warm clothes, cod liver oil and a chance in life.

With $150 this family can be given a good start toward a better future.

Case certified and help administered by Bureau of Rehabilitation. Amount needed: $150.

The 50 neediest families are not eligible for public relief, and the funds of the various social agencies are severely limited, insufficient to meet all the demands made upon them.

Each one of the families was selected by one of the five following agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion welfare department, Salvation Army and Bureau of Rehabilitation. These agencies, which are members of the Community Chest and are supported by Chest funds, carry all costs of administering The Post's fund for the neediest families.

Contract Bridge

Today we offer two questions asked Morrie Elis, the young New Yorker who has been taking so many first prizes lately, including the gold trophy for the masters' pairs with Harry J. Fishbein, and Lewis Fremont, Detroit champion, who will defend the national mixed-pair title with Miss Florence Statford at Philadelphia this year. See what you think of their bidding. Here are the two questions:

1. Duplicate bridge; both sides vulnerable; what is your call as dealer with:

2. Duplicate bridge; your favorite partner, dealer, opens the bidding with two no-trump. What is your first call, and intended subsequent calls, if any, with:

◇ Q 10 9 8 6 3 2	◇ Q 10 9 8 6 3 2

Supreme Court Refuses Review Of 'Elks' Case

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to review litigation involving two colored fraternal organizations and the right of one of them to use the words "Elks" in its name.

Eureka Lodge Modern Elks, of Norfolk, Va., appealed from the Fourth Federal Circuit Court, which enjoined the use of the word "Elks" as a result of a suit brought by the grand lodge, Improved, Benevolent, Protective Order of Elks of the World, another colored organization.

The Eureka lodge formerly was affiliated with the grand lodge, but broke away from it in 1939 after an internal dispute over the payment of head taxes to the parent lodge.

15 Shaken as Trolley, Truck Crash in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 9 (AP).—Fifteen persons were shaken up, but none seriously injured in a collision between a large truck and a Willoughby Beach-bound street car at a crossing near Forest Lawn Cemetery today.

Police Capt. M. H. House said both vehicles were headed North and the collision occurred when the truck made a left turn across the tracks.

False Snappers Snapping Man Is One of Year's Odd Mishaps

National Safety Council Rounds Up Peculiar Methods—Some Funny, Some Sad—People Find to Hurt Themselves

A man in Chicago is bitten by his false teeth. A steel executive rides out of his office on the cowcatcher of a locomotive. A proud father in Illinois tries to put a diaper on his new baby and ends up in the hospital.

These are some of the novel ways persons found to hurt themselves in a year. Many of these misfortunes—some amusing, some tragic—were revealed yesterday by the National Safety Council in a roundup of the ridiculous.

Joseph Callahan, of Chicago, always took good care of his false teeth. But one day as he dozed, he slipped off his chair. His false plate fell out and landed tooth-side up on the floor. His forehead struck them and they gave him a vicious bite.

As he sat in his office in Pueblo, Colo., Jay J. Martin, a steel executive, had no intention of leaving immediately. The next thing he knew, he was riding a locomotive cowcatcher through several partitions. The locomotive, but not Martin, jumped its track.

Cooing seemed to be the best way of quieting his baby daughter to George Lundgren, of Aurora, Ill., as he folded her diaper with a pin in his mouth. She took an ungrateful poke at him. The pin lodged in his throat. Only an operation succeeded in dislodging it.

The Kaczynski family, of Pittsburgh, had a bad day of it last winter.

First, 6-year-old Frank grabbed a live wire and couldn't let go. His brother, 8, grabbed Frank, and he couldn't let go. Sister, Anna, 17, heard their screams, and as she dashed to the scene saw sister Frances, 14, get struck by an auto. As Anna ran to help Frances, a big dog ran up and bit Anna.

Only slightly less rapid was the train of events which transpired when Driver Lloyd Watson's truck skidded over an embankment near Maysville, Ky. Watson jumped to safety. The truck knocked two houses off their foundations. They immediately caught fire.

The stork was attracted to the scene of excitement, and a colored woman living in one of the houses gave birth to a boy.

Going Home for Christmas!
by Edgar A. Guest

Are you going home for Christmas? Have you written you'll be there?
Going home to kiss the mother and to show her that you care?
Going home to greet the father in a way to make him glad?
If you're not I hope there'll never come a time you'll wish you had.
Just sit down and write a letter—it will make their heart strings hum
With a tune of perfect gladness—if you'll tell them that you'll come.

From Edgar A. Guest's poem "On Going Home for Christmas", found in his book "A Heap o' Livin'", copyright, 1916. Used by permission of The Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.

Argyrokastron

The word is as difficult to pronounce as the town was to take. Argyrokastron doesn't come trippingly off the tongue, nor did it come easily to Greek arms. The victory, in consequence, deserves the three-day celebrations which have been decreed in Athens.

No warfare could be more difficult than the conflict in Albania. Albania is a tiny country, but, if one were to measure it vertically as well as horizontally (in the manner of the proud Norwegians), then the country would be quite sizable. For Albania is the land of mountains. And there isn't a mile of railroad in the entire country, not even a decent-surfaced road, though the Albanians will point with pride to a third-class highway between Tirana, the capital, and the seaport at Durazzo. And that isn't the worst of it. The weather at this time of the year in Albania is as inclement, to put it mildly, as the terrain. The mountains all through the attack and the counterattack have been lashed by the snows and rains of the Balkans. No doubt the mountain roads are as deep in mud now as they are deep in dust in the hot summer.

Argyrokastron isn't journey's end for the Greeks, by any manner of means. But the victory is significant because Argyrokastron is of key importance in the strategy of southern Albania. The capture puts the Greeks astride the third alternative route to the port of Valona, the second port of Albania after Durazzo, through which the Italians came pouring into Albania on Good Friday a year ago.

It would seem that the capture of Argyrokastron makes the whole of southern Albania untenable to the Italians. For the taking of Argyrokastron was the windup of an encircling move which had taken the fighting Greeks clear around Argyrokastron from the north to meet a coastwise drive from Epirus by the Greek left wing. The place called for such strategy. Perched high on the side of a hill, it would seem to the traveler almost impregnable, and the only hope of taking it was by these Fabian tactics. Argyrokastron, in short, was a mouthful.

Time And A Half

The chief arguments advanced against proposals to suspend the existing Federal restrictions on hours of labor as a means of speeding up the defense program are (1) that longer hours are not needed and are not socially desirable until industry has reabsorbed the millions still without work and (2) that the Walsh-Healey Act and the Federal Wage-Hour Act don't impose rigid limitations upon working hours. When the need arises, it is said, working hours may be increased to any extent.

Those who reason in this fashion ignore the fact that labor shortages in the skilled occupations where the pressure is first felt cannot be filled by drawing upon untrained and unskilled reserves of unemployed labor. They also forget that employers cannot extend the statutory 40-hour working week imposed by the Walsh-Healey Act (applicable to Government contracts) and the Wage-Hour Act except by paying at least time and half for overtime. Knowing that penalty rates have to be paid for every hour of overtime, employers will naturally try to keep within statutory limitations on hours, even if that entails delay in the completion of defense orders.

Evidence is already at hand showing that the 40-hour work week is acting as a brake on the output of certain aircraft factories which are operating on a five-day working week schedule. Their failure to extend working hours is due in some instances to lack of material, but in other cases it is the result of labor shortage, combined with an unwillingness to add to the amount of overtime payments.

Especially convincing evidence of the need for a relaxation of restrictive labor laws is provided in the report of Rear Admiral Spear, Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy, who says that the Walsh-Healey Act is a "disturbing factor in the procurement of some lines of Government supplies." Admiral Spear's complaints are directed particularly at the minimum wage provisions of the Walsh-Healey Act as they affected contracts placed before the defense program got under way. However, the release of his report at this time shows that the act is regarded as an obstacle in the defense program by responsible naval authorities.

True Charity

Hearts as well as heads are represented on the list of distinguished American women who have just challenged the essential rightness of the Hoover plan for feeding the people in occupied Europe. Nobody would accuse Helen Hayes of being hard and ungentle. Alice Duer Miller has attached her name to too many worthy causes to be thought of as having suddenly turned unkind. Mrs. Simkhovitch has given a lifetime to charity in lower New York City. In the van when work has to be done for raising the lot of underprivileged women is the name of Rose Schneiderman. And women such as Mary Woolley, Carrie Chapman Catt, Josephine Schain, Virginia C. Gildersleeve and Marion Edwards Park aren't anti-Hoover because they are lacking in generosity.

On the contrary, we dare say that these women approached the Hoover proposal first of all with their hearts. Nobody with any knowledge of the records of these women could think otherwise. And that the humanitarian impulse beats within them just as strongly as, if not more strongly than, in the rest of us is demonstrated by their statement that "if at any time the British government should find it possible . . . to permit limited supplies of medicine and milk for children to pass through the blockade," they would urge the United States Government to cooperate. We have ourselves entered this caveat. But the head dictates, as it does with these women, that ultimate good will not be served by compassion alone.

It would have been easy for these women under Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach's leadership to avoid an entry into this controversy. They might have simply ignored the Hoover plan. They might have taken refuge back of its obvious impracticability. (For it is fantastic to suppose that the Nazis would return to the captive countries the equivalent of the stuffs they have already looted.) But these women were anxious to show that the "small nations can be freed of their miseries" only when the Nazi yoke is lifted from their necks. If there should be any doubt about that, ask the "five small democracies." The Hooverites are making gesturing serve for statesmanship at a time which tests the depth and not the tumult of charity.

Fed To The Bears

A traveler returning to Washington early yesterday was alarmed by a pall hanging over the city. As he stepped out of Union Station he listened for the sound of fire engines, but could hear nothing. The cloud wasn't smoke.

The first man he met looked young, but had hair as white as snow. Approaching, the traveler noticed that this person's hands trembled, and that he stared straight ahead with the expression of a shell-shocked soldier. The traveler paused sympathetically.

"Did that auto clip you?"

"Naw," was the quavering rejoinder. "Jussa football fan."

"That so? What was the score?" The traveler tried to understand the reply, but the silence all around had deafened him. "Seven to three? Close!"

The shell-shocked man choked. "Look," he said. "Not seven-to. Seven-ty."

The traveler staggered, as if grasping at something, and at last ejaculated, "That's football!"

The fan, well, the fan kept on staring straight ahead, and, as we go to press, the cloud is still dense.

Combating Influenza

Although modern rapid travel favors the spread of influenza, the epidemic on the West Coast doesn't give the rest of the country nearly as much cause for alarm as a similar outbreak would have occasioned soon after the pandemic of 1918. In that year one person of every 333 in the United States died of influenza. Health authorities today are much better equipped to keep people from contracting the disease and from dying if they do contract it.

The brighter outlook is not due to the discovery of any specific remedy. It is true that scientists of the Rockefeller Foundation have just reported indications that an effective vaccine might be developed, but it may be several years before their valuable work emerges from the experimental stage.

The District of Columbia, on the other hand, offers a prime example of presently practical measures which combat influenza. Here laboratory technique and case treatment have cut the deaths from pneumonia—the immediate cause of most fatalities attributed to influenza—from 121 per 100,000 in 1937 to 72 in 1939. In the field of sanitation, Dr. Ruhland's department has taken advantage of the A. E. F.'s experience, which showed that companies whose mess kits were boiled had fewer casualties from influenza than those whose eating implements were washed in warm water. The campaign for sterilization of all utensils in restaurants is expected to achieve important results in the good health of Washingtonians.

Local health authorities, who have been counting absences in schools and business organizations, say that the incidence of influenza appears less here this year than last. They warn, however, that despite improved methods of control, the spread of the disease is unpredictable, and they emphasize the responsibility on the individual to withdraw from public contacts when he gets a "bad cold" with the characteristic muscular pains of influenza.

Mare Nostrum

In times past Italians dubbed the Mediterranean "mare nostrum"—our sea—far more out of affection for the sunny waters washing the shores of their peninsula than because in the distant days of the Roman Empire the Mediterranean was actually an Italian lake.

More recently, under Mussolini, "mare nostrum" became an emotion-laden term expressive of the far-flung Fascist ambition to establish Italian hegemony over the entire Mediterranean area. But the events of the last few weeks have brought a rude awakening to that grandiose dream of empire. "Mare nostrum" is now, as the English pun has it, "nightmare nostrum" to the Italians. Whereas some months ago Mussolini hoped to fall heir to France's North African possessions, drive the British out of Egypt, and make himself master of the Suez Canal, he now finds himself in a situation in which it may even be difficult for Italy to retain a hold on her own possessions in the Mediterranean.

Even before the Greek war began Mussolini was making no headway in achieving his Mediterranean ambitions. The sea power he had he hesitated to use, with the result that the British fleet has managed to move unimpeded from Gibraltar to Suez, and to play havoc with Italian supply lines to Libya. No wonder, then, that after the assault on Sidi Barrani the Italian armies have made no further progress in the direction of the Suez Canal. It is the British who now appear to be taking the offensive in Egypt.

Since the Greek war began the Italian situation in the Mediterranean has gone from bad to worse. The Italian invasion of Greece gave a present to Great Britain of invaluable Greek naval and air bases close to strategic Italian centers, with results exemplified in the devastating raid on Taranto. It also made possible a further tightening of the British blockade of Italy. How effective that blockade is becoming can be gauged by the new and drastic rationing restrictions which the Fascist government has been forced to put through.

The drastic shake-up in the high command underlines the magnitude of the disaster which has befallen Italy as a result of the ill-starred incursion into Greece. Nor is the problem which Italy faces limited merely to reversing the tide in Albania alone, difficult as that may prove to be. With Porto Edda in Greek hands Italy now has only two ports of disembarkation left in Albania and both of these—Valona and Durazzo—have been subjected to constant British and Greek air raids. And with Argyrokastron taken, the Greek and British will have an air base in their possession so close to Italy's Adriatic route as to make it more hazardous than ever for the Italians to ship reinforcements to the Albanian battle area.

In the meantime the Italian garrisons in Libya and particularly the Dodecanese threaten to be completely cut off from the homeland. Should the Dodecanese be starved out and forced to surrender, as is now a real possibility, the British would be in possession of invaluable naval and air bases of operations against the Nazis, should Hitler seek to intervene in Greece by way of Bulgaria.

It is hardly surprising, in the circumstances, that Germany has intensified her raids on London and other British centers, and thus tried to make it difficult for the British to increase their efforts against the Italians. But they will have to do far more damage than they have managed to do up to now in order to achieve this objective. They may, of course, seek to render the Italians direct aid by a further thrust in the Balkans. But with each passing day the cost of such a venture rises. The Greeks have set an example which the other free Balkan peoples are not likely to ignore.

THE LEAF

Lie quiet, heart!
Time is a softly dropping leaf,
Russet on russet, gold on gold,
Fading to mold.
A little while,
No step of memory shall sound
The muffled ground.

Lie quiet, heart!
For now no iridescent wing
Flecks the green tree.
The smooth air charged with snow has hung
Its panoply.
Lie quiet, heart, and like the leaf
Make a soft coverlet of grief.

Assails Three Laws

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three laws that should be repealed now are the silver purchase act, the gold prohibition law, and the law granting the President power to issue three billions of fiat currency. There never was any need for any of these laws and there is not now the slightest excuse for keeping such laws in force.

The Federal Reserve note issuing system is and has been since 1914 ample for supplying all needed currency, no matter what emergency may arise. During the panic weeks of March, 1933, an additional billion of Federal Reserve notes were quickly made available, but were not used, or needed then. That disposes of the silver purchase folly, also of the need of any special power lodged with the President to issue fiat currency, or "printing press money."

As to the gold prohibition law and the pegging of the price of gold at $35 an ounce, no argument has been advanced, even by its sponsors, in defense of such legislation. Why not clear the decks of such unnecessary statutes, for further action, if it is deemed essential to perfect the defense program?

During the recent campaign the Willkie supporters criticized our financial and monetary legislation, most of which harks back to 1933 and 1934. If those responsible for these laws made any attempt to defend them, it did not appear in daily press, nor was it heard on the air.

Well, what are we waiting for? "Eventually, why not now?"

Representative Bruce Barton and Senator Arthur Vandenberg are both strong for repeal measures. Here is an opportunity to show their skill at persuading their fellow members, and to make an exhibit of true patriotism.

OLIVER CALVERT.

Praises Dies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Richard Franchot has a mistaken idea of Communist privileges under the "Bill of Rights." Religion, the right to private property, trial by jury, is in direct opposition to the Communist doctrine. As these are sacred properties belonging to the American people, I should think that being of Communist belief constitutes treason. More power to the Dies committee and its activities.

Rhythmic Birds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The story recently published of the Bulbul bird caught by Broker Lloyd, of Yonkers, N. Y., suggests that your readers will be interested in a pair of mockingbirds which daily feed on the scarlet berries of a white dogwood in our yard. On the fourth of December, a dreary drizzling morning, we saw these birds together dancing on the shingled sloping roof of the side porch. They hopped and postured and "balanced to partners," reminding us of the old-fashioned quadrille. Others have observed them dancing on the lawn. We are told that flickers have this habit, but not mockingbirds. PERCY FOSTER HALL.

Prince And Beggars

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a democracy a beggar may say to a prince, "I am as good as you," but who in the devil would believe the beggar? MARY DANIELS.
Washington, Dec. 5.

On Charity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading Miss Thompson's column on "The Slump At Washington" today, I could not help wondering why this writer did not foresee, before November 5, that things would be "distinctly 'sticky' all along the line" and that the Defense Commission would still be "without a responsible head" if she had her wish in getting a third term for the President she now finds "in a down mood." If people like Miss Thompson had thought clearly before election, if they had not torpedoed the campaign of the honest and efficient Wendell Willkie—by all sorts of personal vilification—they would not today be deploring what Miss Thompson calls "a lack of integration, a lack of responsibility, a lack of movement" in Washington.

Apropos of Miss Thompson's role in the presidential campaign, I wonder if your other readers resented the singularly sinister slur she cast on Mr. Willkie's character, speaking on the radio just before midnight on November 4,—too late for anyone to answer her,—by saying we could judge of the essential difference in the characters of Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt if we noted that the former was not listed as a trustee of any charitable foundation in Who's Who while the latter was listed there as trustee of the Boy Scouts, etc. Since when have outstanding men like Mr. Willkie been expected to pick their charitable activities with an eye to getting credit for them in Who's Who? Had it not been too late for an answer to Miss Thompson's eleventh-hour speech on election eve, this particular slur on Mr. Willkie could easily have been refuted.

But since Miss Thompson has been such a strong exponent of national unity and of reconciling our differences, ever since November 5, why does she not take the trouble now to make amends for the above slur on Mr. Willkie by informing her readers of his extensive private benevolences? Those who know Mr. Willkie are particularly impressed by his generosity in giving financial help to needy and deserving young people. But this type of charity is not recorded in Who's Who.

Washington, Dec. 6.

A Counter View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who served overseas in World War I with the U. S. Navy, I would like to register a protest against all this hullabaloo about aid to England. Undoubtedly England needs help—history records no major war in which England didn't need help—and spent more energy trying to get it than in conducting the war. England has always depended on other nations to do as much of the actual fighting as they would stand for. The French knew it, and it didn't help to improve their morale. The phrase, "England will fight to the last Frenchman," is very well founded historically.

It has always seemed to me that one of the basic strategies of the vaunted British navy is to lay in port and wait for the enemy to obligingly show himself at the harbor entrance so that they (the British) could take a shot at them. British gunnery records indicate they would probably miss anyway, so the enemy was not taking too much of a chance. Recent news seems to bear out this concept of British naval strategy. Invariably, after the Germans have done all the damage and are well away, we read that "English warships are rushing to the scene." It's a laugh—especially to all who have seen His Majesty's Navee in action. To some of us who know what a job a few American destroyers accomplished in the last war, the question is pertinent: What is the British navy doing? Sending 50 old United States destroyers to the British navy is about the same as hitching Challedon to a milk truck.

Charity should begin at home. There is plenty of room right here at home for all the "aid" this country wishes to give. AN EX-GOB.

Decline In Language Study

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with a great deal of interest that I read the recent letter to this column from Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of Columbian College, of the George Washington University relative to the attitude of the "educationists" toward the study of foreign languages. It is regrettable to note that in the paragraphs dealing with this topic in a pamphlet on "What the High Schools Should Teach," a 1940 publication of the American Council on Education, which is being widely circulated throughout the United States, the committee which drew up the report proposes to limit offerings in foreign languages in the secondary schools to a course in "general language."

This city is fortunate in having administrative officials who appreciate the educative values of foreign language study and give it their active sympathy and support. In spite of this fact, however, foreign language enrollments in our secondary schools, particularly in Latin and German, have dropped to such an extent that their maintenance as high school subjects already presents a problem in school administration.

In the field of modern languages there is no concern for the cause of Spanish, which is enjoying greatly increased popularity incident to the rapid development of the "good neighbor policy" between the United States and the Latin-American countries. French, too, is holding it own, but in the minds of many the study of German is being confused with the issues of the international conflict. No more serious error could be made at this time. Obviously the present is a time when we should know from their own form of expression what the Germans are thinking and saying, since what they are doing is affecting the whole world. Because of their continuing necessity for developing every conceivable scientific device for the furtherance of their own ends, it becomes increasingly necessary for American scientists and engineers to be able to read the German scientific publications. Reports on such things are not available in translations. It has for many years been necessary for physicians who kept abreast of their profession to have a reading knowledge of German, in which have been recorded so many outstanding discoveries in the field of medicine. And whatever the outcome of this present war, a knowledge of German will stand in good stead those who have any part in the post-war diplomatic, economic and commercial adjustments which will have to be made with the Germans.

In closing, may I call attention to the fact that the young people who contemplate advanced study leading to the degree of doctor of philosophy face a practically universal requirement of a reading knowledge of French and German for that degree. Such young people will find, as a rule, that they will fare better if their language study is begun in the secondary school, where two years are given to laying the foundations for which the colleges take only one. This longer period of study will not only give them a surer foundation on which to build their later study, but will also yield immediate returns in the widening of intellectual and spiritual vistas at the age when youth is most impressionable, and so, most susceptible to the cultural values inherent in language study.

EMILIE MARGARET WHITE.

In Defense Of 'Tom Sawyer'

I RECENTLY had occasion to reread that funniest of all books, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," and to recall the comment of a critic who deplored the book's dime novel sensationalism and Mark Twain's lack of refinement in what he termed lapses of good taste in Tom's behavior.

I always suspected the squeamishness of a sissy behind that prim comment even if it was our English textbook that said so. And now, in my grownup perspective on textbooks and childhood, I'm certain of it. But certain of even more—that the critic never knew the dime novel sensationalism that sometimes makes up the stuff of a child's fancy.

Mark Twain was right.

Whatever inadequacies in their lives or environment prompt children to fancy themselves carrying on great and heroic exploits under hazardous circumstances, the terrors of moonlight gravedigging and treasure hunting have their place in their adventures. Whatever adult attention and approbation may or may not win them, children do fancy themselves the heroes in hair-breadth rescues. And so, Mr. Muff Potter's startling rescue from the gallows for the crime of Injun Joe, and the safe delivery of Miss Becky Thatcher from the cave, plus violent tree-uprooting storms at the right moment, I think, pertain.

Adventure is nothing if it is not community-rocking. (I once was a child myself.) No hero is a hero without an audience.

If it doesn't make a beloved remorseful for her indifference or a whole neighborhood penitent for its neglect, then the most hair-raising adventure isn't worth a straw. I know this from personal experience.

I had the intimate acquaintance of a certain young lady of 8 who was given to seeing herself in very dramatic situations. For weeks she courted the attention of her teacher, who, being a wise woman, responded with the same behavior she accorded all her pupils. Ultimately the little girl relaxed her pursuit, undoubtedly when fancy came to the rescue.

She imagined herself one day in the future rich and proud and celebrated, walking down the street, when horrors! Of all people! Who should be lying in the gutter dead drunk but Miss Sunderson, her teacher!

She would rush up to her, while her luxurious furs fell all about her, gather the wilted teacher up in her arms, and nurse her back to health. Of course, she would be very charitable about Miss Sunderson's unseemly behavior. Not even mention it.

Then would come the surprise. From out of her bosom, the teacher would draw the little unsigned Christmas card placed in her desk drawer years before.

"I always kept it here, next to my heart," the teacher would bleat her confession abjectly, "because I always knew it came from you."

The heroine would tut-tut that all away.

"That's all right, Miss Sunderson," she would reassure the penitent teacher. "You didn't know who I was. We never wanted to tell anyone we were rich and everything. People might think we were stuckup."

They would become fast friends after that and Miss Sunderson would never look at anyone else.

Becky Thatcher may have been rescued under less favorable circumstances but the rewards were the same.

Midnight escapades must have hordes of young exploiters. Midnight is such a horrible and hazardous time to be out!

Now when the corner grocery store was robbed of $20 one day, and the neighborhood thrown into commiseration with poor Mr. Smith, the above-mentioned young lady saw her chance.

She just bet that that $20 was not taken at all. That there it lay untouched, hidden behind the soup cans on the shelf. Nobody even thought of looking there.

Of course, the daytime when the store was wide open and all one had to do was go up and ask Mr. Smith to take a look, was really no time to start such explorations. She had to make the discovery by herself when no one was around, preferably in the dead of night while the world innocently slumbered.

What admiration, what praise, when everybody would be gathered about her the next day, laughing and asking, How did she know it was bidden there right along? She just happened to know those things, she would answer. The whole neighborhood would look on while Mr. Smith handed her a couple of Uncle Sam bars with nuts inside.

Then Mr. Smith, standing over the candy show case, in a fine outburst of oratory, would tell how he hoped to see her a great citizen some day with everybody looking up to her with respect.

Tom Sawyer was hardly paid more extravagant tribute at court when he exposed Injun Joe.

At any rate, that night she stole out of bed at a mousey hour and began dressing. She got no farther than her stockings when the patter of bare feet from the bedroom was heard.

"What are you doing? Where are you going in the middle of the night?" a stern voice called. It was her mother.

"Oh, just to the bathroom." And off came the stockings.

What a waste of good opportunity.

I wouldn't even question Tom's chuckling at his own funeral and at Aunt Sally's grief, a situation the critic deplores as bad taste. Fancying it any other way would not have been a child's. Any other way would not have been sensational or melodramatic enough!

And so, I'll stand up for "Tom Sawyer" though it hardly needs my defense or anyone else's. It has stood pretty well on its own all these years.

Today And Tomorrow

The Salvation Of Italy

IT MAY SOUND like a paradox to say that the salvation of Italy depends upon the defeat of Germany. But this is not the first great war in which the allies of a conqueror are forced at last to see that his victory would mean their own destruction. Napoleon was at one time allied with all the kingdoms of continental Europe; in the end they left him and turned against him and defeated him.

The Italians are the chief example in this war of a people who have more to fear from their nominal partners than from their avowed enemies. For the defeat of Italy by Great Britain and her allies would leave Italy intact, would preserve Italy as an independent power in the Mediterranean, as an influence in the Balkans and Central Europe, and with some kind of colonial empire in Africa. But the victory of Germany would certainly put an end to Italian independence and would surely mean the loss to Germany of the territory which Italy won from Austria in the other war.

UNTIL MUSSOLINI made the fatal decision to enter this war, the great majority of responsible Italians saw clearly that the Axis was bound in any event to be fatal to Italy. This was the view of the monarchy, of the army, of the Vatican, of the seasoned diplomats, of many of the older Fascists, and certainly of the great mass of the ordinary people. They could not, presumably, have foreseen in the late spring that things would go so badly for Italy in a military sense as they have gone.

The most eminent soldiers of France thought that Hitler had won the war and that Great Britain would be defeated in a few weeks; it would not be surprising, therefore, if the Italians who entered the war so reluctantly may have been persuaded for a while that Mussolini had made a shrewd choice, and that he was going happily to the assistance of the already victorious Germans.

But once this estimate of the state turned out to be mistaken, the earlier and sounder judgment of the Italians and of their friends was vindicated. The Italians have been placed in a position where they are losing to both sides. They are in fact losing more to the Nazis than to the Allies, and they now face the prospect either of being occupied by the Germans as the result of being knocked out by the British, or of being overrun and administered by the Nazis to save them from the British.

EVEN BEFORE their recent reverses in Albania and in the naval war, the Italians were suffering one disastrous defeat after another. They sacrificed blood and treasure in Spain; it is not Mussolini but Hitler who dominates Spain. They joined the war against France; Hitler did not allow them to occupy French ports in the Mediterranean or to make contact through French territory with Spain or to take possession of Tunis and Corsica. Indeed, Mussolini's old friend Laval entered into a conspiracy which, if it succeeded, would make a totalitarian France the successor of Italy as the junior partner of the Axis. The Italians have been summarily ousted from Hungary and Rumania—the region of Central Europe which has always been in their sphere of influence.

To lose Spain, to be betrayed in France, to be frustrated in their African claims, to be pushed out of Central Europe, is a series of disasters which just about puts an end to all that Italian foreign policy has aimed at since Mussolini came to power.

THESE DISASTERS preceded the military reverses of Albania and Taranto, the stalling of the Egyptian campaign, the grave jeopardy in which the Dodecanese Islands have been placed, and the precarious isolation of Ethiopia. What makes the Italian position so serious is not that there is as yet any certainty that Great Britain can muster the force to deliver a knockout blow.

It is that the Italians are now placed in a fearful dilemma. If they call in the Nazis to help, this will bring the Germans into Italy and into the Mediterranean, and any victory that the Nazis win will make them, not the Italians, the masters of what Italians would like to regard as an Italian sea.

If, on the other hand, they do not call in the Nazis, they must wait and suffer on the theory that if Britain is defeated in the Atlantic, they will extricate themselves in the Mediterranean. But they know what to expect from a

PREMIER MUSSOLINI
Must Fear His Ally More

Hitler victory in which they themselves have been more of a liability than an asset. They will be absolutely defenseless against anything Hitler chooses to ask of them, and they know quite well that the Tyrol is German territory, Trieste is a German city, and the dominion of the Balkans and Turkey and the Middle East is an essential part of the ancient pan-German ambition.

THE DILEMMA of Italy is that the Fascist regime and her internal economy will be ruined if Germany loses the war, whereas Italian independence, the territorial integrity of Italy and her empire, will be destroyed if Germany wins the war. There is no way out of this dilemma unless Italy is able to leave the Axis before there is a decision—that is to say, before Hitler wins or loses the war against Great Britain. But as long as Hitler has an immense unemployed army, Italy cannot leave the Axis. The time to leave it will have arrived only when, with Britain in firm control of the sea and with a growing air power, the Hitlerian empire begins to disintegrate as Napoleon's did and a continental coalition comes into being against him.

It is already evident that this empire is not "a new order," but a mere military occupation which must become increasingly difficult as the British power of resistance is demonstrated.

There is no slightest evidence that in any part of Europe from Russia to Spain, from Norway to Turkey, the Hitlerian empire rests upon anything but the naked power of the German military establishment. The Nazi propaganda and the Nazi diplomacy have been able to break down resistance to the German army, but what they cannot do is to hold what the army has conquered. The Nazis are able to destroy, but they are not able to organize and construct, and the longer they operate in an occupied territory, the more surely they arouse resistance.

Thus the seeds of the disintegration of Hitler's conquest have been sown, and, provided the resistance is firm and the return blows can be made formidable, the continent of Europe will overthrow him as it overthrew Napoleon. In that coalition the Italians, and of course the French and the Spaniards, will find their only possible salvation.

That Draft Army Questionnaire

"Following are typical questions asked in an intelligence test of drafted men at Camp Upton:

"An orange is a . . . (a) broom; (b) bat; (c) flower; (d) fruit.

"How many dozen will 42 oranges make? . . . (a) four; (b) five and a half; (c) six; (d) three and a half.

"Johnson had $13. When he added his partner's to his own he had $65. How much did his partner have?"—Newspaper item.

Elmer Twitchell is pretty indignant over the above. He thinks it belittles the draft boys. "Has the Army such a low opinion of its draftees as these questions indicate?" he demanded. "Does Uncle Sam really think any of those boys don't know the difference between an orange, a broom, a bat and a daisy?"

Is there even an outside chance that anybody in the draft army would ask for an orange when ordered to sweep out a tent, or squeeze a broom when the captain asked him for some orange juice?"

Elmer was fit to be tied. "Questions like that are enough to give an army, regular or draft, an inferiority complex," he thundered. "How would you feel if you were in an army, full of confidence and all set to save democracy, and somebody upped to you and said, 'Before we go any further, is an orange a broom or a bat?'

"It's destructive of Army morale. Believe me, if I was in the draft army and anybody shoved a questionnaire like that at me, I would just say, 'Everybody knows that an orange is a kind of nut found in the Himalaya Mountains. It is otherwise known as Gus, and even if you can prove different, I still think I am okay as a fighting man in a pinch!' And I would add, 'Who wants to know, anyhow, Stimson or Knox?'"

"Take that second question, about how many dozen oranges 42 oranges make . . why is the Army putting so much emphasis on oranges? Is Florida trying to get some advertising out of the defense plans? Does somebody think the war is going to be fought in Giuseppe's fruit store? Are our soldiers going to throw fruit at the enemy?

"Any draftee knows how many dozen oranges 42 make, but even if some boy ain't positive and says 42 oranges make six dozen, he could still make a good soldier. I have known generals to make bigger mistakes, and not merely with oranges.

"As for that last question about two soldiers having $65 between them, that is just exaggeration. Nobody in this country has $65 any more, especially in the Army."

Matsuoka Foresees No Clash If U. S., Japan 'Keep Heads'

But Foreign Minister, in Press Interview, Warns Empire Is 'Honor-Bound' To Fight Us if We Attack Germany

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Dec. 9.—If Japan and the United States keep their heads, and mind their own business there will be no serious clash between them, according to Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka.

Japan is "in honor bound" to fight the United States if the United States attacks Germany, he declared, adding that the appearance of American warships at Singapore would arouse Japan's "very serious consideration."

These statements were the highlights of Matsuoka's first conference with foreign newspaper correspondents here tonight.

The first question asked was whether appointment of Admiral Nomura as Ambassador to Washington meant a new Japanese policy. To this Matsuoka answered: "The tripartite pact is now Japan's guiding policy . . . All nations now know where Japan stands. The tripartite pact was intended as a peace pact to prevent any others from joining the European war."

"How will the pact operate if the United States and Germany are involved in war?"

Must Decide Attacker

Matsuoka—"We would have to decide first whether the United States or Germany was attacked. It is a case for interpretation. . . . If it appeared that the United States attacked Germany we would be honor-bound to fight. I hope such a case will not arise. The wish to prevent it from arising was the object of the pact."

"What is your vision of the future relations between Japan and the United States if the present emergency passes peacefully?"

Matsuoka—"My forecast would be that we may have differences, even serious differences, but if both of us attend to our own business, I cannot think there will be any serious clash. . . . Both of us would be awfully foolish to fight. We have no difference that cannot be surmounted if we keep our heads cool and mind our business."

"Would an 'undeclared war' bring the alliance into effect?"

Matsuoka—"An undeclared war would be difficult to determine. Even in case of an open declared war it is a delicate question to decide which side started it." Then he emphasized that Japan places Soviet Russia "outside the pale" of the tripartite pact.

"How will the relations with Soviet Russia be affected by the Treaty of Nanking, especially the clauses providing that Japan will satation troops permanently in Inner Mongolia and North China?"

Matsuoka—"That concerns the future; I will leave it to the future to answer. I am hoping it will not have a disturbing effect and I will do my utmost to convince the Soviets to consider it harmless."

"What are Japan's ultimate aims in the South Seas?"

Matsuoka—"Our ultimate aim is to establish a sound understanding so we can trade and carry on peaceful development."

"Do you continue your predecessor's policy of maintaining a status quo in the South Seas?"

Matsuoka—"The status quo is constantly changing, no power can prevent it from changing. Japan has no intention of preventing changes, but has no territorial ambitions . . . Our objectives in the south are purely economic. We are against conquest, oppression and exploitation. . . . By Japan as much as by any other nation."

Not Conquering China

"Greater East Asia," he explained, "includes Thailand (Siam) and Burma, and goes as far as New Caledonia, but excludes Australia and New Zealand.

"We are opposed to conquest. . . . Some may ask what we are doing in China. We are not conquering China.

"What we are doing may look like a war of conquest, I admit.

"Many Japanese have been taught by the West that after conquest comes exploitation. We are fighting against that idea. We are traveling towards a perfect equality between Japan and China. We have many Japanese who were educated in your Western way of greed, conquest and oppression, but we are trying to get away from that to get back to pure old Japanism.

"If the American people understood us they would be willing to help but they cannot understand."

Dangerous Problem

"What would be Japan's reaction if United States warships went to Singapore?"

Matsuoka—"Such an eventuality would immediately become the subject of very serious consideration on the part of Japan. This is a very dangerous problem and I wish to avoid any misunderstanding. If I were a more cautious man I would simply have said I cannot answer a hypothetical question. Such an event is not in my mind and I am not considering it."

"Would Japan alter its policy in China in the hope of improving relations with America?"

Matsouka—"I do not see any such prospect for the simple reason that we think we are doing the right thing and there is a clear difference of opinion between America and us. We do not pass judgment on what the United States does in the West and try to confine ourselves to this part of the world."

Glory Of Italy

THE COMPARISON between the conduct of the Duce's dashing indomitables in Albania and that of the British in France is not very complimentary to the Italian nation under fascism, but it has been offered by some loyal followers of Mussolini in this country and therefore may be examined out loud. They may be sorry they brought it up.

To start with the British disaster, it will be conceded surely that the British nation was caught flatfooted even after a year of borrowed time, and that the force was a bow-and-arrow army by comparison with the great German machine. The British were attacked by methods and weapons never before encountered, and any Italian who denies that the Germans fought superbly dishonors his comrades at the other end of the Axis.

Nevertheless, after a hopeless stand against the greatest military force on earth, the British reached the beach and, thanks in part to their luck, most of them were rescued. In any case, they were under attack by the best army in the world, which is the important point to remember in turning now to Albania, where the indomitables had the initiative against a third-rate power.

TO COMPARE the German army with the Greek army is to belittle the Germans to an insulting degree and flatter the Greeks outlandishly. And even if it be conceded that, as it has been said, some of those Greeks speak with an Australian or cockney accent, that doesn't improve the case for fascism, because the Fascists already have said that the British fled contemptibly in France. Such reasoning is unwise, because it argues that the Fascists were doing all right until a small force of cowards joined their enemy and put them to flight.

It should be remembered also that the Italians under Mussolini had been arming, marching, shooting, puffing out their cheeks, beating their chests and leaping through circles of fire and over hurdles of bayonets for 15 years. Even babies were dressed in uniforms and taught to lisp that they were killers. Long before Hitler came to power Mussolini's Italy glorified war in song and story and in the public schools, and their aviation, which was their special boast, had fattened its vanity by shooting barnyard ducks in Ethiopia and Barcelona.

IF ANY NATION ever prepared for conquest, subordinating all else to thought and talk of war and preparation for victory over weaker people, that nation was Fascist Italy.

Yet, when war finally came, Mussolini feinted until the death rattle of France could be heard all over the world and then stabbed the fallen neighbor—a blow which should have hurt the Italian people as much as it hurt the French. If that stroke did not fill the Italians with a sense of remorse and shame, then that cancels all their boasts of superior civilization and military valor.

The Fascists had been in Albania for two years. They had had time to make the most thorough preparations for the conquest of a small, poor and ill-armed enemy, and their sideshow wars had given them an opportunity to acquaint their soldiers with war under comparatively safe conditions. They did not have to start cold.

BUT, WHEN IT happened, the indomitables were chased out of a country in which they had every advantage, even abandoning the seaport which the Duce, in his fatuous vanity, had named for his daughter, the wife of the boastful Count Ciano.

This was not the German war machine which disgraced fascism after so many years of pot-valiant boasting. It was the army of the little Greek nation. It was not the British who fled, but the dashing invincibles of Benito Mussolini.

Hope On The Defense Front

BEFORE THE PRESIDENT left for his vacation, a number of business and labor leaders received confidential White House requests for nominations for the chairmanship of the Defense Commission. Their responses went with the President on his cruise.

In the same dossier aboard the Tuscaloosa were also memoranda from several Administration sources outlining proposed plans for reorganization of the entire defense set-up. And in conversations with at least one Cabinet officer and several lesser advisers before his departure, the President indicated he would examine the memoranda and study the problem with a friendly mind.

Such are the signs, brought to the surface by the current agitation in the country, that improvements in the defense set-up will probably be attempted not too long after the President's return to Washington. It is always possible that he will be overcome by the odd inertia which so often seizes him when administrative changes are urged. The interminable Woodring-Johnson episode at the War Department must never be forgotten. Yet the signs are undeniably encouraging.

WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN
Put His Ideas in Writing

APPARENTLY the President has at least been playing with the idea of taking steps to speed up defense production for some time past. During the campaign the appointment of a chairman of the Defense Commission was constantly forecast by men close to the White House, until Wendell L. Willkie forestalled the President by attacking him for keeping the commission without a head. At about the same time a position as one of the President's administrative assistants was actually offered to Donald Nelson, former executive vice president of Sears Roebuck, and a leading figure in the commission. The position would have carried with it partial powers to coordinate commission activities, but the arrangement did not seem practical to Nelson, and nothing came of it.

Then, some weeks ago, after a long talk about defense problems, the President asked Defense Commissioner William S. Knudsen to put his ideas in writing. It is understood that Knudsen prepared and sent to the White House a long letter setting forth the objections to the present set-up and suggesting that authority and responsibility must be definitely fixed before full speed defense production could be hoped for. Presumably the Knudsen letter was part of the Tuscaloosa dossier.

MEANWHILE action has been continuously deferred for a reason which may perhaps be inferred from the terms of the White House requests to the business and labor leaders. The nominee for the Defense Commission chairmanship, it was stated, must be an eminent industrialist, with tested organizing ability, practical training, high standing in the country, and labor record good enough to make all labor factions welcome his appointment as a happy inspiration. The final clause presented the real difficulty. One of the more irreverent men consulted in the matter remarked that if the President insisted on such exacting specifications, he had better summon his patience to await the Second Coming.

The wish to please, or at least to avoid giving the slightest offense, to the "underprivileged third" and labor elements in his following has undoubtedly strongly influenced the President's management of the defense problem. The original so-called Stettinius report, compiled by the group of businessmen summoned to Washington when the war broke out, gave bitter offense to the President by its emphasis on the need to hold labor organization within normal bounds during the war crisis. The point of the report was sound enough, that no one group should be allowed to use the crisis as a lever to procure abnormal advantages, but the point appears to have been expressed in such a way as to show anti-labor bias. It was after presentation of this report that the slogan was coined, "We won't give back the Government to the businessmen."

THERE ARE STILL influential persons in the Administration who are not fully aware of the urgency of the present situation, and who fear the businessmen "moving in" on the Government as much as most businessmen fear Government moving in on business.

There are other factors making for delay. One has been the President's wish to imitate the example of Woodrow Wilson, who waited to choose a supreme commander for his war production effort until trial and error had clearly demonstrated the superior ability of B. M. Baruch. No one in the present commission has risen above his colleagues as plainly as Baruch did above his. But besides the President's desire to keep his followers happy, the chief obstacle to change has undoubtedly been the habitual inertia already mentioned. Sometimes this inertia is extraordinarily strong. Although the President's cruise should refresh his energies and prepare him for decisive action, it is probably wise to keep several fingers crossed until reorganization of the defense set-up is a visible fact.

INAUGURAL STANDS RISE AT CAPITOL

Progress . . .

From projects for national defense to plans for relief of Washington's traffic problem, one of the largest building programs in history is under way.

Out at the end of East Capitol Street, the first unit of the new National Guard Armory is nearing completion. At a cost of $112,000, the structure will house the Guard drill hall, rifle range and garage. Bids for the second unit (the total cost of the armory will be $2,750,000) will be asked in January, according to Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, Guard commander.

Late February will see completion of the 150-foot span over Rock Creek Park at Massachusetts Avenue. Taking rapid shape, the huge bridge built of reinforced concrete and stone, will cost approximately $500,000. It will include a 50-foot roadway and two 10-foot sidewalks.

Augmented office space for defense workers is almost finished at the Navy and Munitions Buildings on Constitution Avenue. Additional stories are being added to take care of the extra workers in both buildings.

Work at the new National Airport has progressed to the extent that officials plan its opening for emergency landings December 15. The elaborate administration building and one of six mammoth hangars are nearly completed.

An ornamental base for the Navy and Marine Corps Memorial on Columbia Island is at last under way.

Meanwhile, expansive stands for the inauguration of President Roosevelt are in the last stages of construction on Capitol Plaza. Work on the inaugural reviewing stands in front of the White House will be started within the next few weeks.

Study 'Public Need,' Meyer Tells Colleges

Notables Attending Meeting of College Business Officers

Educators Are Urged To Reorient Thought For 'Ordeal' Ahead

The stabilization and reconsideration of American institutions of higher learning "from the point of view of competition" are necessary at the present time, Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post, told finance officers of more than 100 college and universities last night.

He addressed the annual dinner of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers at the Mayflower Hotel. The association will conclude sessions of its twenty-fifth annual meeting today.

Mr. Meyer visualized the "definite danger of an extensive price rise and possibility of a great one" as demanding a "reorientation" of educational leaders' thought along academic as well as financial lines.

He declared that "this country has quite generally accepted education as the path to ambition, as the foundation of our Government institutions and of our way of life."

Deterrents Cited

Tracing the flow of material wealth in past years "freely and almost automatically" to aid in the growth of higher education, Mr. Meyer said:

"It is necessary to ask ourselves whether this system, of which your institutions are an expression, can continue to expand along the old lines—for upon the answer to this question depends the measures you must take to protect your institutions."

He cited income taxes and inheritance taxes as deterrents toward the continuing endowment of colleges and universities.

"Also in the back of your mind is the fear of inflation," he said. "You are told that this is not likely to happen now, but as we are thinking in terms of the future I do not hesitate to say that there is definite danger of an extensive price rise and possibility of a great one.

"In the light of these developments, past and to come, a reorientation of your thinking seems to be essential, and that thinking will have to include strictly academic problems as well as financial ones.

"Educational Needs"

"For the time has now come when the public will want to know how economically and how well you are able to satisfy the educational needs of the country in the light of new social developments. Hasn't the moment arrived when the position held by your institutions in American life should be stabilized and reconsidered from the point of view of the public need rather than from the old-fashioned point of view of competition?"

Mr. Meyer warned the group that "Like everyone else, you will have to concentrate much of your efforts upon the defense program—in scientific research, in training men and women physically and morally as well as intellectually for the ordeal that lies before us."

He emphasized that "we can establish and maintain our independence in the future only by the strength of arms."

"Don't Be" Dying Industry

Colleges should obtain "the most expert financial advisers that the country affords," Mr. Meyer asserted. He said that he favored "the investment of a considerable proportion of trust funds in what are commonly called equities and what might better be called properties."

He urged investors of college funds to "avoid dying industries, and above all things . . . don't be one."

Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, and Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University, extended greetings to the group last night. George D. Crofts, treasurer and comptroller of the University of Buffalo and president of the organization, presided at the dinner.

"The university cannot economize at the expense of the quality of its functions," Lawrence G. Tighe, treasurer of Yale University, told the afternoon session.

With William H. Claflin, jr., treasurer of Harvard University, he discussed the problems of investment of funds facing endowed institutions at the present time.

Investment Problem

Tighe pointed out that "like any other investor, a university is today faced with the problem of what to do with its new funds and matured investments."

He said "a real cause for concern" was that individuals of means are less inclined to endow educational institutions today because of increasing inheritance taxes which cut down the expectant incomes of their survivors.

Stating that Harvard has 40 different budgeting units, Claflin declared that the institution "financially can be compared to a holding company." He stated that the university's endowment totals roughly $150,000,000.

He summed up Harvard's investment plan by stating, "we do the best we can under the existing circumstances."

Addressing the morning session were C. E. Merry, business manager of George Washington University; William B. Franke, of Franke, Hannon & Withey Co., New York, and Arnaud C. Marts, president of Bucknell University.

Takoma Council Hits Fire Danger At Ray School

The Takoma Park, Md., town council last night went on record favoring the correction of "fire hazards" at the J. Enos Ray School on Ray Road in the Prince Georges County section of the town.

The action followed a statement by Chief Herald Hirst, of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department who told the council that should fire break out in the four-room school, the 168 students would be caught "like rats in a trap."

Hirst declared that the school is without a telephone, has narrow stairways, no fire extinguishers, no fire alarm and only two exits.

A house detective discovered the body after the Marine's failure to leave his room all day yesterday was investigated. It was believed Hutchins had died of poisoning.

Federal Use Sought

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Carmen ..... Floreine Hurley
Jose ..... John Seate
Escamillo .... George Mattingly
Micaela ..... Eleanor Bradburn
Zuniga ..... Fred Wacker
Mercedes ..... Agnes Boggs
Frasquita ..... Ruth Thompson
Morales ..... Phil Rosenberg
El Dancairo ..... John Bruton
El Remendado Daniel Viehmeyer
Conductor: Carl Lausch

Before a friendly and encouraging assemblage in Cafritz Auditorium, Dorothy Remington and William Webster presented their operatic students last evening in a performance of Bizet's "Carmen." With scenic accessories necessarily limited to an Elizabethan simplicity, and an orchestra compressed into four instruments, the production was virtually a costumed concert with acting. Under these circumstances, the critic lays aside his usual standards of judgment and leniently takes the will for the deed. The earnestness and zeal of the singers was beyond cavil and carried them safely through occasional contretemps such as attend amateur performances.

Ray C. B. Brown

As a concerted effort of ambitious singers, the entertainment had its good points. The chorus was well trained and zestful, though it disturbed the dramatic unities a bit by singing in English while the principals used French. In the chorus, moreover, was present the emotional vitality that a performance needs for the stimulation of excitement and for the heightening of dramatic climaxes.

What one missed most in the work of the principals was the stage experience which banishes self-consciousness and imparts ease. Without exception, the impersonators of character were sincerely essaying their portrayals, but they rarely achieved identification with the assumed personalities. They sang with emotional conviction and there was no lack of warmth in their voices, yet they did not achieve the complete romantic illusion.

Floreine Hurley, in the title role, was the most vocally accomplished member of the cast. She obviously had studied the role with care and perseverance, and the evidences of her work showed in the details of phrasing and the assurance of her tonal attack. Her voice is one well suited for the part, wide in range and variant in color, and she uses it with fluency.

Long-Range Public Works Policy Urged

National Resources Planning Board Sees Plan as Job Safeguard

The National Resources Planning Board yesterday recommended a long-range public works policy to furnish employment in periods of depression and provide an "orderly program of public construction at all times."

Future public works policy, the board said in a report, also should aim at coordinating "forward-looking programs by State and local agencies with those of the Federal Government."

"Continued existence of unemployment as the central economic problem of the United States makes evident the need for planning a public works policy on a long range basis if the problem of unemployment is to be met in part through the construction of public works," according to the board.

Its statement added that "even if unemployment should cease to be a major problem, the need for a continuing program of public works construction would not disappear."

"Furthermore, it should not be assumed that the problem of developing a long-range public works policy is exclusively a Federal problem. No matter how far the financial and planning leadership of the Federal Government may be carried, the role of the States and localities remains of fundamental importance.

"Since 1932, Federal programs for construction have had to offset the sharp curtailment that was made from 1930 to 1933 in State and local construction. To return public works expenditures approximately to earlier levels through Federal action was an important accomplishment.

"However, future public works policy should seek to coordinate forward-looking programs by State and local agencies with those of the Federal Government, to the end that public construction policy as a whole shall contribute more effectively to the rational upbuilding of the national estate and the most profitable utilization of our resources.

"Accordingly, we recommend as a matter of long-range Federal policy a continued use of public works construction as one part of a program for employing men and other resources when they would not be otherwise used, and thus add to the total of our national income. Such policy should be properly coordinated with all Federal relief policies and other social security measures . . ."

Spreckels Says Wife, Not He, Was Pro-Nazi

Former Baroness Named Dog 'Swastika,' Sugar Heir Depones

By the United Press

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec 9.—Adolph B. Spreckels, California sugar heir whose estranged wife charges he is pro-Nazi, tonight answered her divorce complaint with an accusation that she herself had been under scrutiny of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for pro-German activities.

Spreckels charged that she, the former Baroness Emily von Romberg, brought the pro-Nazi accusations against him in her divorce complaint as "part of a deliberate plan to whitewash her own activities and embarrass" him.

The 28-year-old millionaire sportsman explained that antics of which his wife complained, such as mounting a Nazi flag on his table in a New York cafe, were only "in a spirit of levity."

Dog Called Swastika

He denied that he has "ever been or is now actuated by any motive in any cause contrary to the Government of the United States."

But he said his wife was proud of the German citizenship which came with her marriage to the late Baron von Romberg, killed in an air crash several years ago, and she traveled in Europe on a German passport.

Her swank Montecito estate is named Brunninghausen, he charged, and her dog called "Swastika." A swastika was built prominently into the decorations of her home and was removed only recently, he alleged.

Mrs. Spreckels had complained that he forced her to entertain his pro-Nazi friends. But Spreckels said the friends were hers, not his. He listed them as the Duke of Saxe-Cobourg-Gotha, here on a mission for Hitler; Leni Riefenstahl, German actress and friend of Hitler; Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the former Kaiser, and others from the German consulates and embassy.

Admits Slapping Her

Spreckels admitted some of his wife's other charges: That he struck her in the Coronado Hotel at San Diego on May 15 but explained that he was enraged by her "admission of improper relations with other men." Again last August 8 he admits slapping her during a quarrel.

"From time to time," he said, both have used alcohol to excess.

The sugar scion, who inherited $2,500,000 upon reaching his majority, stated that he does not know the amount of his income because it fluctuates with the market. He said Mrs. Spreckels, who demands $30,000 a year alimony, inherited $1,000,000 from the Baron and is amply able to support herself.

The divorce suit will come to trial probably in January.

Man, 69, Indicted As Poisoner Busy On Ft. Meade Job

Frederick Degges, 69, 1314 D Street Southeast, is employed as a carpenter at Fort Meade, it was disclosed in circuit court at Arlington, Va., yesterday when he failed to appear for arraignment on a charge of attempting to kill his stepdaughter by mailing her a box of poisoned chocolates.

This disclosure was made by Defense Counsel Brooke Howard, who appealed unsuccessfully to the court to defer the case against his client until the next term.

Judge Walter McCarthy denied the request after Lawrence Douglas, Commonwealth attorney, had recommended that Degges undergo a mental observation. The Court set a hearing on Degges' "mental condition" for December 30. Meanwhile, Howard told the Court, he would try to have his client enter some private institution for observation.

Degges was arrested after his stepdaughter, Mrs. Velma Dunham, 40, of 3212 North Washington Boulevard, Arlington, had received in the mail November 5 a box of chocolate-covered cherries that contained bichloride of mercury.

Man Who Proved Booth's Burial Tells of Lincoln Guard's Laxity

Policeman Moved From Theater Box, George Bryan Says

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

A quiet-voiced man, whom authorities say has buried John Wilkes Booth's body too deeply for controversy to reach it ever again, came to Washington yesterday for a vacation from all the spade work.

Only George S. Bryan himself, author of "The Great American Myth," isn't sure that the facts he dug up will allay the legend that Lincoln's assassin escaped from the blazing barn, to wander the Western United States, finally to become, as thousands believe, a grizzly corpse in a roving side show.

Bryan's evidence entails new testimony, highlighted by what Henry W. Mears, one-time Baltimore undertaker and childhood companion of Booth, told Bryan. Investigations of Washington police records also disclosed a new and illuminating slant on John F. Parker, the officer assigned to guard President Lincoln's box in Ford's Theater the night of April 14, 1865.

"Just Absolute Bunk"

Bryan believes that the legend of Booth living years after the tragedy was based on the superficial resemblances certain impostors had to Booth and that the rest was based on "bunk, just absolute bunk."

But he doesn't think he has scotched the legend. People still are paying quarters throughout the West to see "Booth's body," and one of the questions asked thousands of times a year in the Lincoln Museum here is whether Booth escaped his pursuers and whether his body still can be seen somewhere for a fee.

Bryan has "laid low" the legend, said Capt. John T. Clemens, custodian of the Lincoln Museum here. He wrote Bryan in part: "An orchid to you . . . because your assertions and deductions are manifested by proof . . ."

The investigator followed along with the known fact that a Lieut. Baker, a Washington detective, saw Booth clearly through a crack in the blazing barn, where the assassin had been trapped by Federal cavalrymen April 25-26, 1865. The body was brought to the warship Montauk, lying in the river here and was again identified, this time by persons associated with the theater. It was taken from the ship to a penitentiary here, was buried there, then later removed to a warehouse.

Identified by Sexton

Later, when the family asked for the body, it was taken to the undertaking firm of Harvey & Marr, on F Street. There, again, it was identified by John Weaver, sexton of Christ Church, Baltimore, where Booth had been baptized and attended Sunday school; by a younger brother, Dr. Joseph Booth, and by a dentist. Weaver, also an undertaker, took the body to his place in Baltimore and there it was seen by Bryan's ace witness, Mears, and John T. Ford, owner of the theater where Lincoln was shot.

Both said the body was that of the assassin. Mears, before his death, told Bryan there was no doubt about it. He said he had played in child theatricals with Booth when they were children. "The memory of Mr. Mears was perfect," Bryan said.

Then Bryan dug out a contemporary account by Norval Foard, of the Baltimore Sun, who had said emphatically that the man was Booth.

Weaver buried the body in Green Mount Cemetery, Baltimore, in the Booth family plot.

Now researching in Washington, Bryan said he found that the policeman, John F. Parker, had sometime before the assassination been discharged for being absent from the force 41 days out of 82. But he was reinstated and assigned to a White House detail. On duty at the President's box in Ford's Theater the officer discovered that his station only permitted him to hear the play's dialogue. He moved where he could see the actors. That was how Booth entered the box more easily.

GEORGE S. BRYAN

Bryan's request for the contemporary police records of the case sent Police Chief Ernest W. Brown probing the musty records three years ago. It was then suspected the reports in the museum were at variance with the facts. Investigation established that the actual records were lost. Only copies of them exist.

Bryan lives at 16 Young Avenue, Pelham, N. Y.

Mrs. Lucille McMillin Addresses Washington Branch of A. A. U. W.

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Women's part in national defense was the subject at two meetings yesterday, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission, addressed the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women at its weekly tea in the afternoon, discussing the effect of the present emergency on the employment of women, and Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, of the National Defense Advisory Commission talked before a joint dinner meeting of the Home Economics Association and the Dietetics Association at the Kennedy-Warren last night.

The defense program will increase the number of women employes in the Government, but this will be accomplished through established procedure, Mrs. McMillin told the university women.

"The most notable change in Government personnel brought about by the World War in 1917 was the greatest employment of women," she said. "Hundreds of women who came to Washington then as clerks have risen to administrative posts and have demonstrated that women are efficient and indispensable."

Fortunately the emergency worker of 1940 finds housing and office conditions in Washington infinitely more pleasant and satisfactory than in the World War, said Mrs. McMillin.

Mrs. W. C. Van Vleck Presides at Session

Today about 72 per cent of the positions which make up the executive departments of the Government are subject to the Civil Service Act of 1883, she said. Of the 100,000 such positions in the District June 30 there were 41,000 held by women. The Ramspeck law for the extension of the Classification Act of 1923, signed by the President in November, will affect nearly 200,000 positions, she stated.

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the branch, presided at the meeting, and Miss Nelle Ingels, chairman of the committee on the economic and legal status of women, was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Cunningham, in her talk to the home economists, suggested three ways in which they could be of service in the defense program. The first was to inform themselves as to supplies existing in this country so to be able to dispel worry and unfounded rumors about shortages in commodities.

She also suggested their cooperation with Government agencies and with other groups in what she termed a "social defense program."

Joint Dinner Meeting Hears Mrs. Cunningham, Of Advisory Board

Offers Suggestions On 'Initiative'

The third heading under which she offered suggestions was "initiative." Such a trained group, she said, is in a position to offer new ideas in training for women; a new program of relief for the underfed and for diet clinics and courses in schools and colleges that will dovetail with the defense program.

Mrs. Cunningham is chief of the civic group section of the consumer protection division of the national commission.

Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, was chairman of the meeting.

Guests from the National Defense Advisory Commission were: Dr. M. L. Wilson, adviser on nutrition; Robert E. Bondy, chairman of the committee on welfare and consumer interest, and Dr. George C. Ruhland, chairman, health committee, District of Columbia Defense Committee.

Other guests were Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling and Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, of the Bureau of Home Economics, and Mrs. Elizabeth Grant, District of Columbia Health Department, all members of national and local defense committees.

Bombs Won't Destroy British, Press Club Told

There'll Always Be Shakespeare's England, Jan Struther Says

"Shakespeare's England" cannot be destroyed by bombs, Jan Struther, author of the Mrs. Miniver stories, declared yesterday in a talk at the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club at which she was the honor guest.

Answering the Americans who bemoan the destruction of historic landmarks, she declared: "Bombs may destroy Westminster Abbey and other famous places, but what Shakespeare loved and wrote about was not the old buildings but the people who lived and worked in them—this England will never be destroyed.

The Middle West is more typical of England today than any other section of this country, said the author. New England is like prewar England, she said, "but the Middle West is talking and thinking as England is now; it has gotten to the stage where it has its ancestors in its bones and not hanging up on the walls."

"Half-democracy" in England is gone, she said, "largely due to the mixture of the best qualities of your Nation and mine in the person of Winston Churchill."

A negative democracy cannot exist in a world with an active totalitarianism, she asserted, expressing the hope that after the war, leaders would make peace as inspiring as war for a united effort toward the common good.

Asked if she thought the United States should get into the war, she answered by likening the two countries to two houses in a forest fire. "The fire happens to be raging about one house," she went on. "It is spreading rapidly. As long as you keep sending us nice buckets of water, we can keep it under control. . . ."

Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the club president, presided and presented several other distinguished guests. Among them were Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Governor of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Nella Florence, who is here on her way from Egypt to her hom ein London, and Ethel Barrymore Colt. Mrs. Osa Johnson, who was to have been present, did not reach Washington in time to attend the luncheon.

TODAY Miss Gwladys Jones, secretary of Quota Club International, will present to the American Red Cross funds raised by Quota clubs in the United States for an ambulance for Britain. Contributions have been made to the fund by clubs throughout the country including that in Washington, of which Miss Kathleen Tancill is president, and the Montgomery County club, of which Miss Edith Barnett, of Gaithersburg, is the president.

The ambulance will be sent to England the first of the year and will bear a plate showing it is the gift of the Quota. In addition to this, the club will maintain a bed for one year in a convalescent hospital in Great Britain.

The decision to form an ambulance fund was made at the twenty-first convention of Quota International, held in San Francisco in June, when the international board, instead of purchasing favors for members attending the convention as has been the custom in former years, used the money to make the initial contribution to the relief project. The clubs have raised their portions either through direct contributions or through fund-raising activities.

Funds contributed to the Red Cross by the Quota Club will purchase the latest type ambulance, a unit following United States Army regulations. Minor changes have been made in interior design to conform with the type of stretcher used in Great Britain which differs from those in this country.

Ambulances which are being purchased with funds contributed to the Red Cross are heavy-duty vehicles, capable of high speed over rough terrain. They accommodate four stretchers. Ventilating systems and shatterproof glass are featured. Unlike ambulances of the last World War, 1941 models have an inclosed, heated cab for drivers.

Quota clubs in Canada and Australia have made their contributions directly to the British Red Cross through Red Cross organizations in their countries.

NEW MUSIC SOCIETY—Auditions are in progress for the Pan-American Choral Society being organized by Mme. Malda Fani d'Aulby, who will direct the chorus. In it will be several members of the music sections of local women's clubs interested in choral singing and in the plan of devoting study to the work of the composers of North and South America.

The society, for which a number of singers already has been selected, will begin its rehearsals January 3. It is to be under the patronage of diplomatic representatives of the Latin-American countries and Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan-American Union.

The plan of having a singing society devoted entirely to the study of the music of the New World is in line with the other cultural projects that express the Good Neighbor policy of the Americas, says Mme. d'Aulby. Although it will give emphasis to the characteristic music of different countries on this hemisphere, it is in no way designed to discount the beauty or the importance of the works of European masters, she says.

MEETING TONIGHT—Gamma Chapter of the Kappa Gamma national sorority will meet in the clubrooms at The Raleigh Hotel tonight at 7:45. Alice Hutchins Drake will speak on the subject, "Know Your Capitals", following which there will be a short business meeting at which plans for the Gamma Christmas party will be completed.

Democrat Club Hears Taylor

America must place itself in readiness to make good its obligations to its neighboring nations, declared Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Undersecretary of Commerce, at the regular Monday luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday. Mrs. Claude Pepper, president of the club, presided.

Introduced by Judge Lucy S. Howorth, Mr. Taylor spoke on "American Needs in the Light of the Present European Situation," asserting that certain decisions have been made by this country, as for example, those involving the undertakings for hemisphere defense.

"We seek no wars," said Mr. Taylor. "It may well be that no one seeks war with us, but with new alignments developing almost daily, we must be in a position to protect ourselves and rush to the aid of our neighbors in this hemisphere.

"Our commitments to our sister republics and Canada are unequivocal. We must be in a position to fulfill them if the occasion arises.

"No nation or group of nations forced us to make these commitments. We have undertaken them of our own free will, with the enthusiastic support of a united people. Will we ever be called on to fulfill them? No one knows, but I can assure you that we must be in shape to do so. Bluffs have gone out of fashion in international affairs.

"Have we time enough? No one knows. I do know that we have no time for idle debate, for coddling this or that industrial or financial group. We must have the active support of every man, woman and child in this country."

Lella Warren, Author, Addresses Kensington Club

Lella Warren, author of "Foundation Stones," yesterday addressed the Woman's Community Club of Kensington at its meeting in the Masonic Hall. Miss Warren, who is a native of Alabama and now resides in Washington, told of some of her experiences in writing.

She began with short stories for popular magazines. "Foundation Stone," a story of the Civil War period in the South, is her first novel. It is now on the best seller list in this country, and the rights have been purchased in Sweden and England. Miss Warren is giving half of the proceeds from the sale of the book in England to the British War Relief Fund, she told her audience.

She is now working on a book dealing with the young people of today and "the crash that pulled the silver spoon out of their mouths," she said.

The author was introduced by Mrs. Lewis Merriam, of Kensington, chairman of the book section. There were also Christmas carols, sung by the music section under the chairmanship of Mrs. Henry Milburn. The business meeting following the program was conducted by Mrs. Earl Macy, the club president.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bashful Boy in Early Twenties Doesn't Know How to Get Himself a Girl; Those He Admires Spurn His Overtures; What's His Trouble?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If you can solve this problem for me, you will be doing something no one else has been able to do, so far. I am a young man in the early twenties, and I have never had a date with a girl. Most of the girls I have come to know, since leaving high school, are anything but the kind I would like to "date." Perhaps you wonder what kind of girl I have in mind. I'd like to meet a girl between the ages of 19 and 24; and I would want her to be good looking, with a good figure, preferably a blond—but not necessarily.

You may ask why I have never been able to satisfy this normal ambition. You may say that it shouldn't be hard to do. And I agree that it shouldn't. It makes me angry that anything so simple, for other fellows, should be so hard for me. Yet, try as I will, I cannot convince myself that it's easily accomplished.

For one thing, I have always been rather bashful, especially during high school and the two or three years following. In the last couple of years, I have overcome my bashfulness to some extent—but not enough to achieve my ambition. I have asked several girls for dates—but with no success. In spite of these disappointments, I know I have many fine qualities. If girls could only see these qualities—instead of dismissing me for what they think I am—I believe they would be willing to go out on dates with me. But how can I make my real self known to them?—when I am handicapped by bashfulness and they don't make the effort to get acquainted?

Another aspect of my trouble is this: How can I meet the kind of girls I want to know? Since leaving high schoool I have rarely, if ever, met girls of that sort. I have been here in Washington for several months, and although I've met a few girls, no friendships have developed. The few men I know here are, seemingly, either unwilling or unable to assist me. If it weren't for my bashfulness, I could probably make contacts without any one's assistance. I am hoping you can give me the help I need. M. F. C.

Boy's Complacency Is Defeating Him

DEAR M. F. C.: It appears that you have no friends of either sex; and I imagine that most people (your own age) who meet or know you, put you down as a rather queer duck. If only you could "see yourself as others see you," you would know what important changes must be made in your manner, appearance and mental attitudes, before you can register as a normal, likable person.

Just now, you're not only a social flop (as persons your own age rate attractiveness),—and, remember, it's their good opinion you're wooing);—but, (and here's your real stumbling block), you're lazily content with yourself as you are. You believe your latent "fine qualities"—which you swear exist, and which others don't dream of—ought to take you wherever you want to go. But that's a little like a vagabond's believing he's a potential artist or genius or millionaire—if only somebody would give him the opening to prove it—and, meanwhile, expecting the world to treat him as if he already had "arrived."

Your description of the kind of girl you want for sweetheart indicates the shallowness of your approach to friendship, to companionship, to love—to the whole vast field of social relationships. Are you interested in the quality of the lady's personality, mentality or character? Indeed, no. You're primarily concerned with outward appearance—with texture (she must be young); with shape (she must have a good figure); and with color (preferably blond!)

But answer me this: Since you yourself put so much stress on outward-seeming, what right have you to expect the party of the second part to disregard your Mr. Milquetoast appearance and fall in love with the "inner man?" What you really want, I suppose, is a girl friend who is such a knock-out that she will compensate, to the onlooker, for all that you're not—and can't be bothered becoming. You couldn't be content with—couldn't stomach—a girl who was the current feminine counterpart of your uninspiring self.

I believe you need to acquire (1) a gentleman's mannered poise—perhaps by reading Emily Post; (2) a gentleman's unmistakeably "good" dress—perhaps by studying the magazine Esquire; (3) at least three social skills which make for "mixing," such as dancing (taught by a first-class instructor; not picked up at dance halls), tennis and swimming; (4) a few genuine intellectual "enthusiasms," such as make for easy conversation in any company—which may be books, the theater, music, youth's place in the political arena or what-have-you; and (5) some completely "extroverted" boyish interests in life, such as devotedly following the fortunes of the local "pro" football team; or the big league baseball teams; or the progress being made in aviation, or anything else you may think of that appeals to you more.

I believe you will be able to "date" almost any girl you choose, if you will exert yourself to acquire the manners, dress, social skills, enthusiasms and hobbies of the average American "nice boy;" if you will persevere until you are casually in possession of the repertory of assets suggested above. When you know "how to do," your bashfulness won't be a handicap any longer. It will be raised by the girls as part of your charm; and they'll take the initiative in breaking it down.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Half a Hat, Debs' Device For Winter

Debutantes and young party-goers have fought against the hat idea for years. Now that cold weather has descended, pompadours and glamour "hair-dos" are being driven under cover. A mere excuse for a hat is better than none. The half-headdress effect is in evidence for bareheaded young rebels. Above are two versions from the Western Hemisphere, which only partly conceal long, curly hair. Left—A tremendous bow of black lace adds a frivolous touch to a minute lace cap by Sally Victor. Big, pink roses decorating the front are prophetic of spring. Right—Two bunches of wild orchids joined together by a glorified bicycle clip, lace-covered, are the answer to a girl's "half-hat" dream by Lilly Dache

Slimming Easy When Necessity Forms Habits

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are girls who can add weight and never show it. As a rule, the tall, slim girls can put on several pounds without having the extra adipose tissue protrude enough to notice—but not if they're in the movies! On the screen, the slightest excess is exaggerated and a girl has to keep her figure perfect to get by as a beauty.

As a result of this strict watch on the scales, you might expect slimming would become more complicated than ordinarily—instead, it becomes simpler. As Adrienne Ames, screen beauty, would tell you: An actress can't afford to have her mind on her diet all the time. Besides, that's unnecessary. All one needs is a set of good, sound slimming habits.

When Miss Ames first began keeping such close tabs on the pounds, she developed an acute case of what she calls "calorie-itis"—that's nothing serious, but it is a nuisance to find yourself calculating the number of calories in every bite you eat. And she soon found that the scales could be counted on to behave just as well for the observation of a few rules as to food.

Regular Hours for Meals

The first—she never eats fat meats, fried foods or pastries and she has sweets only occasionally. The second—except for an apple, she never eats between meals. And third—she has regular hours for meals.

If you are too plump, one of the easiest and quickest way of normalizing your weight is to cut out those same taboo foods. They are too high in calories for you. And you could also cut out the between-meal snacks to advantage. If you train yourself to go without food except for the regular three meals a day, you won't have to put up quite such a battle with your appetite at odd times. And fat or thin, have your meals on schedule. If you have a too-robust appetite, you are sure to overeat to more than make up for a meal you have missed.

Cultivated Taste

Very sensibly, this beauty has cultivated a taste for variety in her menus so she gets plenty of the lean meats, eggs, milk and vegetables. These make for health and sparkling good looks.

Miss Ames is a great believer in relaxing for beauty. She has massage as often as possible, but relies mainly on a day-in, day-out rule of resting for half an hour after work every day.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

"I AM ABOUT to say something that will stir up all the animals and make me even more unpopular than I already am," announced Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey president of the Do Something About It League, as she faced her press conference yesterday. As the scribes waited tensely, pencils poised, Mrs. DeGoofey continued:

Mrs. DeGoofey

"You may quote me as saying that Christmas this year promises to be even a worse headache than ever before and in some respects a national disgrace!"

A shriek of feminine protest greeted this announcement.

The 'Haves' versus The 'Have Nots'

"You mean it SHOULD be," retorted Mrs. DeGoofey. But as it is, what do we have? A melee of fighting women in department stores. Frantic adults rushing here and there in pursuit of something to exchange with other frantic adults. Infantile grown-ups hinting for wrist watches and fur coats. Millions of musical powder boxes, marabou bed jackets, cocktail shakers, china penquins, satin sofa pillows, fancy ash trays, monogrammed card sets, 'personalized' matches, lapel doodads, etc., being put into circulation. Jaded children surfeited with toys and junk, and other children having rickets for lack of milk. Families going in debt to keep up a holiday front with the Jones'. People stuffing themselves with rich foods at big dinners while half the world goes hungry. Humans garnering their loot like smug little squirrels, while other humans are being crushed by bombs."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey, you surely wouldn't do away with Christmas would you?" asked a "little girl" reporter.

"Certainly not! But I would celebrate it with some dignity—especially at a time like this!"

"What would you do?" asked a "Christmas crowds" reporter.

Design for a Sane Christmas

"In the first place I would confine gift-giving to children. The sight of adults going around talking about what they want for Christmas or telling what 'Santa brought' them has always been a distressing mental spectacle to me. It is high time the people of this country—especially the women—grew up.

"Second, I would see that children had a simple Christmas and learned to appreciate a few toys rather than a multitude heaped on them by doting parents and relatives.

"Third, if adults must exchange gifts—instead of giving to the suffering here and abroad—I would confine the exchange to $1 bills. I have always been a strong advocate of the $1 bill as the ideal Christmas gift. I have spent a large part of my life looking for a $1 gift that was better than a $1 bill—and I have never found it.

"Fourth, I would prohibit men giving their wives useless elaborate and expensive negligees, and instead turning over the cash to the little women to get themselves some stockings, or cold cream, or good kitchen smocks, or flannel nighties.

New What-Not Era Is Threatened

"Fifth, I would cut down on the gadgets that are given. We are rapidly drifting back to the era of useless Christmas gifts—the time when women were presented with feather boas, fancy garters, boudoir caps, yarn flowers, fussy pin cushions, etc. Our houses are becoming as full of frippery as in the what-not age.

"Finally, I would have all women—as they are the chief promoters of the Christmas gift racket—ennoble their souls by each making a sacrifice of at least one gift expected, and notifying the potential giver to turn the money over to the relief of the unfortunate either here or in Europe."

"But, what would you do about Santa Claus?" asked a Christmas decorations editor.

"I would not have him call on anybody in any way, shape or form, above the mental age of 14" was the reply.

A Woman's WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Every Child Has Musical Ability In Some Form, Says District Teacher

DEEP in every child is buried some form of musical ability, believes Katharine Fowler, concert organist and pianist who teaches 450 budding musicians each year at Taft Junior High School. She disagrees with the point of view that one must produce music to be considered "musical." More important to the majority of people is the ability "to appreciate a pretty tune, enjoy a rhythmic sensation like Ravel's 'Bolero,' see a picture in Saint-Saens' 'Swan' or re-live the story of 'The Sorcerer's Apprentice.'"

How can a mother encourage this talent for intelligent listening? By singing to a small child, playing records of nursery tunes, listening with the child to good radio music, taking him to recitals by children and to symphony concerts for children.

She thinks a youngster gets little from a grown-up's concert, any more than a child learning to read would appreciate Dickens. He also should be encouraged to take up some instrument, if only the harmonica, she believes. "Amateur orchestras, family musical groups, even swing bands are valuable; not only musically—they develop a sense of cooperation and responsibility."

A woman coming out of the anesthetic in Columbia Hospital's recovery room saw her doctor, a well-known local obstetrician, enter the room with a New York Times under his arm. "You wouldn't think they'd allow newsboys in here," she murmured indignantly.

CORRESPONDENCE—Nelson Eddy does all right with Washington girls. The recent story about Shirley Winston, American University student who saw "Naughty Marietta" 25 times, produced a note from June Bancroft, of 1711 East Capitol Street. Her record makes Shirley's enthusiasm seem like blank indifference. She saw "Naughty Marietta" 39 times and "New Moon" 44 times. She is starting her sixth Eddy scrapbook and has more than 400 stills from his pictures. She and a fellow-fan, Eleanor Fitts, of Chevy Chase, Md., practically camped in the first row of the Capitol the week "Bittersweet" opened and managed to see it 14 times in six days.

Osa Johnson Shows Pinchot Guests Some of the Adventure She Married

By Hope Ridings Miller

PROOF THAT Osa Johnson "married adventure" was unreeled for a number of Capitalites assembled last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot on Rhode Island Avenue. Down from New York for a brief stay, Martin Johnson's widow, who is an expert with the gun and camera herself, showed a film that records her far-flung activities for the last 27 years

Looking as if she had never been near an African jungle; had never shouldered a gun, or ground a motion picture camera, Mrs. Johnson was trimly turned out in a shoulderless bouffant frock of black tulle, sprinkled with tiny gold sequins, shaped like Spanish fans and outlined with narrow lace ruffles. In her hair was a matching Spanish fan, carrying out the color scheme of black and gold—a very fetching ensemble, and she wore two huge orchids on her shoulder.

Mrs. Pinchot was gowned in gold lame, fashioned with a gathered skirt and long, fitted bodice, and featuring a jeweled belt in shades of green and red.

Before the reception, which was climaxed with the showing of the film, Mr. and Mrs. Pinchot entertained at a dinner in honor of Mrs. Johnson. In the company were several guests from New York, including Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Whitehouse, Mrs. Harold R. Talbot, and Mr. and Mrs. Gifford B. Pinchot, son and daughter-in-law of the hosts.

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas were ranking guests at the dinner, which was also attended by Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Gerald P. Nye, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, Harry Slattery, of the Rural Electrification Administration; Miss Alice Riggs, John Meloney, and Clark Getts, Mrs. Johnson's business manager.

A number of notables came in after dinner in time to see the film which was shown in the spacious drawing room on the second floor of the Pinchot home. You can always count on Mrs. Pinchot to collect an interesting group of guests, and last evening's company was nicely seasoned with well-known names from both official and residential society.

A ripple of interest ran through the crowd when the film was delayed over an hour, due to some labor trouble not explained. A camera operator arrived on schedule time, and then abruptly departed, making it necessary for the hosts to secure another one. A gay rumor made the rounds that the operator must have been an A. F. of L. man who noticed John L. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis in the audience. Anyway, the new operator did get there and the show and movie reel went on without a hitch.

Meanwhile, Senator Pinchot presented Mrs. Johnson to the audience. She filled the interim pleasantly with a speech including bloodcurdling tales of being captured by cannibals, bitten by lions and gorillas and learning to shoot lions, both with gun and camera.

Chatting informally with the guest of honor, a few of us had a chance to ask her something about her plans for the future. We discovered that she is now in the throes of completing a sequel to her best-selling autobiography, "I Married Adventure."

"You see, in writing the first book I dug up enough material to fill three volumes, and so I'm now completing the second."

"It's title? Can't tell you that," she answered with a twinkle. "But I'll let you in on one angle—it's better than the first one; the title, I mean."

Mrs. Johnson's Washington sojourn is to be very brief. She'll return ot New York tomorrow and will devote most of her time the next few weeks to putting the finishing touches on her book. Around the middle of January she'll be off to Florida for a month's stay, and after that——

"Oh, after that," she said, "I've got a wonderful trip planned, but I can't give you the details yet. Can't even tell you where I'm going. Truth is," she added with a chuckle, "I may land up in Africa again!"

Climaxing the informal reception that followed the film, there was a buffet supper, and after that, guests lingered on as long as possible to talk with Mrs. Johnson and her hosts. Fact is, the honoree herself brought up the fact that she'd "better be going" before the final group got around to leaving. She is staying at the Mayflower Hotel.

Among those attending the reception, in addition to the dinner guests, were Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, wearing a brown lace frock; Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Alice Longworth, in green brocade; Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Harry S. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Senator-elect Ralph Brewster, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, in a bright red frock; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, who came in late; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, and many more.

Betrothal Made Known

MISS MARY EUGENIA COLEMAN,
whose engagement to Ensign Louis H. Roddis, jr., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gravatt Coleman. Ensign Roddis' parents are Commander Louis H. Roddis, U. S. N., and Mrs. Roddis, of San Diego, Calif. The wedding will take place early next summer

Miss Coleman Honored at Tea

Mrs. George Gravatt Coleman entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Mary Eugenia Coleman, who will become the bride of Ensign Louis H. Roddis, jr., early in the summer.

Mrs. Guy Evans Mauldin, the bride-elect's grandmother, assisted the hostess and her daughter in receiving. Miss Coleman wore a frock of white chiffon with a floor-length full skirt and a white wool jacket trimmed with gold.

Pale blue candles and a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums decorated the tea table. Presiding there were Miss Coleman's aunts, Mrs. Ernest Logan Hawkins and Mrs. Luke Gilbert. Among the guests were debutantes of the season, a number of postdebs and former classmates of Miss Coleman, and a few other friends.

Ensign Roddis is the son of Commander Louis H. Roddis, U. S. N., and Mrs. Roddis. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1939, honor man of his class.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the National Cathedral School and was made a bishop's scholar, an honor which only four other girls have attained in the history of the school. This year the N. C. S. Alumnae Association elected her editor of the magazine.

Miss Coleman made her debut in Washington early last summer at a tea given by her parents and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Evans Mauldin. She returned recently from a trip to Hawaii.

Kate Smith Attends Sister

Kate Smith, radio star, was maid of honor at her sister's wedding yesterday afternoon, and left the singing of the "Arve Maria" and "The Lord's Prayer" to a tenor, John Murphy.

The First Congregational Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Helena Mask Smith and Lee Joseph Steene at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson officiating. Southern smilax and white chrysanthemums were used on the altar. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Yernell Smith and the late William Herman Smith, of Golf Club Manor, Arlington, Va. Mr. Steene's parents are Mrs. Michael O'Grove and the late Halvar Steene, of Rochester, Minn.

Grandfather Gives Bride in Marriage

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Benjamin Franklin Hanby. She wore a slate-green crepe frock with an antique gold colored hat and bronze accessories. Her garnet jewelry was a family heirloom. She wore a corsage of green orchids.

Miss Kate Smith wore a Kelly-green ensemble trimmed in leopard with matching accesories, and a corsage of gardenias. Francis Walter Brandenburg, of Chevy Chase, Md., was best man. Ushers were Henry John Klingle, of Arlington, Va.; Richard Steven Padlar, Roy Plimpton, of Worcester, Mass., and Weems Lapp Franklin, of Chevy Chase.

Several Guests From Out of Town

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Gerald Jacobs, Miss Dagna Steene, of New York; Mrs. Blanche Baker, of Bar Harbor, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hamilton, Mrs. Artemis Bartlett and Mrs. Rose Reeves, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clarke Ditmars, of Philadelphia, and Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Altoona, Pa.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University and the bride also attended American University. Mrs. Steene is descended from Gen. John Burgoyne, an English general in the Revolutionary War; Lord John Keith, of Scotland, and Chief Justice John Marshall.

Senator Barbour's Family to Arrive Here on Dec. 19

Mrs. J. Warren Barbour, wife of Senator Barbour; their debutante daughter, Miss Elyzabeth Barbour, and their son, Warren, will arrive in Washington on December 19. Mrs. Barbour will be here the remainder of the season, and Miss Barbour will stay through the Christmas holidays, later resuming her studies at Sarah Lawrence College.

Miss Barbour was in the group of outstanding debutantes presented at New York's famous Junior Assembly at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel last week. Prior to the dance she entertained a dinner party of 18 at the same hotel.

Mrs. Dougherty Visits in New York

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty is in New York, where she will be the guest of Mrs. Fenton B. Turck for several days.

Before returning to Washington she may go on up to her summer home in Connecticut for a brief stay, and if so, she probably will stop over in Saugatuck, Conn., to see Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno.

A. B. Campbell, Misses Meuser To Visit Here

Arthur Bradley Campbell and his cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, who made their bow to society here last May, will return on December 22 and will be here for at least two weeks.

They are now at the Ambassador Hotel, New York, and will come to Washington directly from there. Widely feted here last winter and spring, the Misses Meuser went with Mr. Campbell to Newport for the summer and enjoyed a whirl of parties through the entire season.

Since the death of their great-aunt, the late Marchioness of Huntley, one-time Washington resident, the Misses Meuser have made their home with her son, Mr. Campbell.

White House Social Program Gets Under Way

Debut Dance Dec. 26 For Miss Morgenthau To Climax Schedule

The lagging White House social schedule is now definitely under way and will be climaxed with the debut dance to be given on December 26 for Miss Joan Morgenthau—the second bud to blossom in the East Room since President Roosevelt took office.

The lucky debutantes asked to dance at the White House that evening will not lack for partners, as three young men to every girl will be invited. Dashing the hopes of a good many ambitious mothers of Washington debutantes, Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday morning that only the buds acquainted with Miss Morgenthau will be invited. No protocol is to be followed. It is probable that the daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will be honored at a small dinner at the White House before the ball.

Cabinet Wives Luncheon Guests

Yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt entertained the Cabinet wives at luncheon. An informal party, it was arranged primarily to "get acquainted," for there have been many Cabinet changes of late. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at a musicale. Artists at the party were Mieczyslaw Munz, pianist, who rendered, among other selections, a bit of Chopin. Miss Virginia Lewis, famed soprano, sang several Negro spirituals. She was accompanied by William L. King.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain a box party at Constitution Hall, where the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra is giving a concert. The First Lady, who will be in New York on Wednesday and Thursday, plans to return here on Friday, when she will attend the National Theater, where "Out West It's Different" is being played.

Visit of Princess Is Discussed

Plans for the visit of Princess Juliana, the "off the record" Gridiron Widows party on Saturday and the White House Christmas were all touched lightly at the conference. The Dutch princess will arrive at the White House on December 18, accompanied by her lady in waiting and chamberlain. After a stay of two days she will leave, and yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt had no knowledge of the princess' future plans.

Such luminaries as Dorothy Thompson, Fannie Hurst and Mrs. "Daisy" Harriman have been invited to attend the supper party at the White House the night of the Gridiron dinner. Mrs. Roosevelt will also have as her guests that evening Mrs. Henry Goodard Leech, Mrs. William Howard Good, Mrs. Elliott Pratt and Mrs. Henry Van Loon, jr., all of New York.

Only a small portion of the Roosevelt clan will sit down to Christmas dinner in the Executive Mansion. The President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, will be on hand, as will Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt and Hall Roosevelt. The only youngsters in the house will be Franklin Delano Roosevelt 3d, and young Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins.

Pan American Ball Set Dec. 17

Diplomatic, governmental and residental Washington will join in the celebration of Pan American Aviation Day at a colorful Pan American ball, at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday evening, December 17. A recent proclamation by President Roosevelt set aside this day for observance of the part the airplane has played in establishing solidarity in the Western Hemisphere, and the committee in charge of the event in Washington decided on a ball as a proper celebration.

A Pan American motif will be carried out in the decorations, according to the committee. Lavish use of flags of all the Western Hemisphere nations will add color to the big ballroom of the Mayflower, and in addition the embassies and legations are being asked to supply any special decorations they would like displayed as typical of their countries.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD, the author and erstwhile publisher, is visiting his daughter, Miss Dorothea Villard, at her home in Georgetown. He will be here until Thursday. Last night Miss Villard had a few friends in for dinner in his honor.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mr. Villard, who this time last year was just returning from a trip through Germany, is now engaged in another interesting task. With his brother, Harold, he is editing the letters which his distinguished father, the late Henry Villard, wrote when he was "covering" Abraham Lincoln. The book will appear in February.

THE LATE Mr. Villard was only 24 when he was sent to Springfield, Ohio, by the Associated Press and the New York Herald to cover Lincoln during the period between his election and inauguration. After Lincoln delivered his moving farewell address to the Springfield folks from the platform of the train taking him to Washington, reporter Villard asked him for a copy. Lincoln wrote the speech out on a piece of paper and gave it to the newspaperman.

If the Villards still had that scrap of paper they could no doubt command $20,000 for it, in the opinion of experts. But somehow, somewhere, while he was covering the Civil War, Villard lost the precious document.

HENRY VILLARD served as correspondent from the front lines of the war for four years. In Charleston, S. C., he insisted on following the battle from the deck of the flagship Ironsides, the only correspondent with enough nerve for the feat. Occasionally, in a rush to meet his deadline, he would ride on horseback up to a train and leap on it, leaving horse and saddlebags behind on the platform. It was doubtless during such a hustle that Lincoln's document was lost.

After exciting years as a reporter, Mr. Villard went into business, and ended up by building the Northern Pacific Railway. His son expects to be in Washington until Friday. In January he and Mrs. Villard both hope to come down for a stay of several weeks.

PARTY NOTES: The Vom Rath twins, Marie and Cecelia, might just as well be coming out all over again, so many parties are being given for them this winter. Mme. Kasthoven was hostess at tea yesterday in their honor . . . Mrs. Arthur Fowler will give a luncheon tomorrow. . . . Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling will entertain at dinner December 17.

MOST TRAVELERS to Europe obliged to remain there for any length of time prefer to take a boat rather than the clipper. This is because by air their baggage is limited, and it is extremely difficult not only to ship trunks around Europe these days, but also to buy new stuff. Robert Buell, of the State Department, will go by boat when he leaves for Berlin early in January. He hopes to sublet his attractive house in Georgetown, which has an entrancing little garden with a mirrored pool at one end.

• • • •

HERE AND THERE: The other day this column inadvertently retired Commander James Hughes from the U. S. Navy. The hero of the Panay disaster is still very much on active duty, and will leave shortly to take an oil tanker to the West Coast . . . Prince Sapieha, who, with his wife, has just concluded a visit with the Wilbur Carrs, is a cousin of the American author of the much discussed "Polish Profile." The Sapiehas came to this country in August after a harried existence on the Riviera, followed by seven weeks in Portugal. Their estates in Poland have, of course, disappeared, according to Mrs. Carr. The mother of the Princess, Baroness Bornemisza, is an American who married a Hungarian and lived in that country for some 40 years without a return to the United States.

K. N. Watsons Give 2d Party

Gaily informal was the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Nicoll Watson at their home, 2220 Massachusetts Avenue. The fete was the second in a series that the Watsons have planned for this season.

The hostess received from 5 to 7 o'clock, wearing a street length frock of gold lame, cut on simple lines. Among those who dropped in for the party were Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Claphane, Dr. and Mrs. Edward C. Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, Dr. and Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Dr. and Mrs. Edward O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurd.

Still others there included Miss Meredith Howard and her twin sister, Mrs. Lou Werthelmer, who recently arrived in Washington from the West Coast; Mrs. Moran Drury, Mr. and Mrs. John MacCormac, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Tompkins, and Max Dunlap.

Junior League Fetes Newcomers

Several newcomers to Washington were welcomed by the Junior League at their monthly luncheon yesterday with Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., officiating and Mrs. Robert F. Wilson, first vice president assisting. The transfer members include Mrs. Craig Mucklé, of Philadelphia; Mrs. P. T. Hoffman, of Louisville, and Mrs. Carl W. Adams, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Also attending the luncheon were Mrs. James T. Karrick, Mrs. Dickinson Jewett, Mrs. W. C. Chelay, Mrs. Dallas Dort, Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes, Mrs. D. P. Gaillard, Mrs. Elmore Cropley, Mrs. Ann D. Flannery, Mrs. Samuel T. Ansell, jr., Mrs. Robert Plumb, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Edith Pearson, Mrs. Clifford Folger, Miss Anne Baer, Miss Marjorie Souby, Mrs. Thatcher Winslow, Miss Elizabeth Sladen, Miss Letitia Knox, Mrs. Bishop P. Hill and Mrs. Landon Banfield Carter.

Miss Hopper To Wed Friday

Friday, the thirteenth, holds no terrors for Miss Virginia Hopper and Taylor Rhoades, who will be married this Friday, December 13, in Walter Reed Chapel at 9 a. m.

The bride-elect will be attended by Miss Eleanor Story Fletcher, of Fairhaven, Mass., and W. Thad McDaniel, of Bainbridge, Ga., will be best man. Miss Hopper will be given in marriage by her brother-in-law, C. O. Spencer, of Washington.

Immediately after the ceremony, the couple will leave for Bermuda. After January, they will be at home at 2316 Fortieth Street.

Miss Hopper, who is the daughter of James T. Hopper, of Orville, Ala., is a member of the staff of the American Red Cross. She is a graduate of Birmingham Southern College and received her master's degree in social service at William and Mary College. Mr. Rhoades, the son of Col. and Mrs. Rex H. Rhoades, was graduated from Lehigh University in 1933. He is connected with the Federal Housing Administration.

Moroneys to Make Home in Arlington After Cuban Trip

Mr. and Mrs. James Callan Moroney are in Florida and, after a trip to Cuba, will reside in Arlington, Va. The marriage of the former Miss Catherine Louise Hutchins, daughter of Mrs. Walter Cleveland Hutchins, took place on December 5 at Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown. The Rev. Walter Cunningham officiated.

The bride wore a sapphire blue velvet dress with a sweetheart neckline and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. James H. Garrett, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a wine velvet gown and sweetheart roses. William Moroney, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The bridegroom, who is the son of Mrs. William Moroney, attended the University of Minnesota and Harvard Law School.

Mrs. Askew to Entertain For Gertrude Hopkins

Mrs. Laurin Bryan Askew, jr., of Castle Thorn, Brussels, Belgium, and Clarksville, Tenn., has issued invitations to a reception in honor of Gertrude Hopkins, harpist, on Thursday at 4 p. m. It will be a small party, as Mrs. Askew has rented a tiny Georgetown studio while her own home is being completed.

Miss Hopkins is a member of one of Tennessee's oldest families and prominent representatives here of that State have been asked to the party. She is a pupil of Grandjeanny, under whom she studied here and in Paris, and has performed in the great concert halls of Europe and on the radio in this country. On Wednesday she will give a recital at the Covenant First Presbyterian Church.

Preview of Counsel Water Colors Opens

A preview of water colors done by Frederick Allan Counsel opened with a reception on Sunday evening at Wesley Hall, sponsored by Mrs. Norman Kane. She was assisted at the reception by Mrs. James M. Farrar and William Barhard. The exhibition will remain open through the holidays.

Later in the evening Mr. Counsel was feted at an informal party given by S. Carlton Ayers. Mr. Ayers is currently appearing in "Winterset," which is being put on by the D'Artagnan Club.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal employes whose jobs are covered under civil service by the Ramspeck law will have to make a grade of only 56 on non-competitive mental tests to qualify for their jobs. Moreover, it is estimated that upwards of 25 per cent of the employes won't be given assembled mental tests but instead, they wil be graded on their past records.

These facts were disclosed yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. And these facts should dispel widespread fears that 28 per cent of the employes covered in under the Ramspeck Bill will lose their jobs through failure to pass non-competitive mental tests. Commission records fail to reveal where 28 per cent of any large group of employes flunked noncompetitive tests.

Each Federal employe whose job is brought under merit must make a grade of 70 on his noncompetitive mental test. However, the commission has decided to add 25 per cent for experience. An employe who actually gets a mark of 56 on his written test will get 25 per cent of that mark, or 14, added to his grade, which would bring his grade up to the required 70.

War veterans can make lower marks on mental tests and still be approved. Disabled war veterans are given 10 points and all other veterans are given 5 points on civil service tests.

As a general rule, only clerical workers and lower grade professional employes will be given assembled mental tests where speed and accuracy are the most important factor. These classes of employes are among those who will be given assembled examinations: typists, stenographers, messengers, apprentices, statistical clerks, editorial clerks, accounting and auditing clerks, watchmen and guards, and all the P-1 grades of all professional employes such as engineers, chemists, administrators, scientists and the like.

Employes in all the higher professional grades will be given nonassembled tests. Included in this group are lawyers, G-men, administrators, supervisors, doctors, scientists and all other professional and technical job-holders. These employes, for the most part, will be graded on their past records. However, oral tests most likely will be given employes in the higher-bracket group.

And now about these reports that 28 per cent of the employes whose jobs are brought under civil service by the Ramspeck bill will lose their jobs through failure to qualify. It's true, of course, that Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee and other experts on civil service used this figure while the bill was being debated in Congress.

But what hasn't been explained is that the 28 per cent figure was derived from the first 600 employes whose jobs were brought under civil service by the President June 24, 1938. Since that time a considerably smaller percentage of employes has been disqualified, and today the mortality rate stands at only 15 per cent, which is slightly less than average. The percentage of failures usually runs between 16 and 17 per cent.

Since July 1, 1938, President Roosevelt has ordered the jobs of 26,880 employes brought under civil service by noncompetitive tests. The number that has failed to qualify is 4,500, which is a 15 per cent casualty rate.

During the 1940 fiscal year that ended June 30, the jobs of 18,545 were brought under merit by noncompetitive tests. Of that number only 2,786 failed to qualify, or 15 per cent. But only 3 per cent, or 733, failed to make the necessary grade of 70 on mental tests.

Tallest hurdle to clear was physical examinations. The record showed that 1,332 were disqualified by the tests. Fact is that the 1939 fiscal year was one of the few years that a smaller number of employes taking noncompetitive tests were disqualified by physical tests rather than mental examinations. In that year 255 flunked mental tests and 232 failed physical examinations. Nevertheless, only 589 were disqualified by noncompetitive tests of 5,710 cases, or slightly more than 10 per cent.

The number of employes who will lose their jobs through the Ramspeck bill isn't expected to be more than 20 per cent. The percentage is bound to be as great as that because the commission will give only a single test to each employe, as the bill requires only one test. Whereas in the past the commission has given employes as many as three chances to pass noncompetitive mental tests if the employes were highly recommended by their departments.

Maj. Clay Named To Represent CAA On Airport Board

Maj. Lucian W. Clay, Army engineer and secretary of the Civil Aeronautics Administration's board of airport approval, yesterday was named to represent the administration on the interdepartmental commission in charge of construction of the National Airport at Gravelly Point.

Maj. Clay succeeds Lieut. Col. Sumpter Smith, who also was commission chairman and who resigned last week to go into active service with the Alabama National Guard.

Fred E. Schnepfe, representative of the Public Works Administration on the commission, was named acting chairman. The commission is expected soon to elect a permanent head.

Mrs. Thorpe Powell, hostess at the housewarming, plays Chinese checkers with Marines Harry Ferro, E. J. Murphy and Taylor G. Collom. The club has been opened in one of the oldest occupied houses in Washington. Built in 1797, it was used as a residence for members of Congress early in the history of the District. Men from the Army War College, Naval Receiving Station, and Marine Barracks, who were present last night, were introduced to the club's facilities for writing, reading, music and games, learned that the rooms would be open under the direction of the hostess Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings

Washington Housing Shortage Assailed by First Lady

'Almost Criminal' to Bring People Here to Work for Their Country, Mrs. Roosevelt Tells Association

their Navy Yard jobs "soon after reporting for work," Pettingill was quoted as saying.

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized the importance of good housing to defense, not only in Washington but all over the country. She insisted that "just now there is a particular urgency" in the housing problem, and explained:

"The defense of the Nation lies in having a way of life to defend, a way of life that each and every person feels is worth defending, and housing is a very important part of that way of life."

The First Lady pointed out that a decent home is the first thing that gives people a sense of having a real stake in the democratic way of life." She added that housing is part of defense just as much as guns, ammunition and selective service, and declared:

"You have to depend for the defense of the country upon many of the people who today have not very much to defend."

"I think," she said, "we should begin here in the Capital of the country."

The relation of national health and morale to total defense also was emphasized by Jacob Crane, assistant defense housing coordinator, who outlined a defense commission plan to cover the entire field of housing needs by coordinating all existing private and public agencies.

Crane said that provision of dwellings for families with incomes above $1,500 will be left to private enterprise, aided by the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Loan Bank Board.

Low income permanent housing, in places where responsible local authorities exist, has been assigned to the United States Housing Authority. Temporary defense housing and low income building where local authorities do not exist will be handled by the Army, Navy and the Federal Works Agency.

Defense needs in areas where thousands of new workers are swarming forced the completion of this coordinated plan, Crane pointed out. He urged its application to the country as a whole to solve the national housing problem and solidify American morale.

In the area reserved for private enterprise there will be no shortage of housing in Washington, despite the "substantial influx of defense workers from other cities," the meeting was told by Morris Cafritz, Washington builder and apartment house operator.

16,000 Housing Units in Year

Cafritz said private builders have constructed 16,000 housing units in the past year and 54,000 units in the last five years. These new homes, he said, house 200,000 persons.

Cafritz assured the audience that there will be no rent rise in Washington similar to that in other cities where the price of building materials has increased.

Other speakers included J. Bernard Wyckoff, president of the housing association, and John Ihlder, executive officer of the Ailley Dwelling Authority, who sketched the work of their respective agencies in ameliorating the Capital's housing difficulties.

News in Brief

Prisoner's Good Humor Wins Light Sentence

A colored man used his good humor yesterday to win himself a lighter sentence when haled before Police Court Judge George Neilson on a charge of playing "craps."

"Your honor, I admit I was going to play—but I hadn't started yet when the officer arrested me," the defendant said.

Policeman P. L. Vogel, of the Fourth Precinct, testified the alleged crapshooter had his fist clenched as though he had something in his hand when arrested.

"That was the half dollar I never got to shoot for," the defendant explained. "I didn't even get the pleasure of feeling the dice."

Judge Neilson reduced the fine to a dollar, which the defendant only too eagerly pulled out of his pocket and waved at the clerk.

Auto Lifted From Channel, But Troubles Remain

A Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. crane raised an auto from the bottom of Washington Channel yesterday, but there was no deliverance from trouble in sight for James Forsythe, 20, of 149 D Street Southeast, the car's owner.

Forsythe, a gas station attendant, has been saving money for the salvage operation since October 8 when the car rolled into the channel at Thirteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest where it had been parked by a friend.

The machine was towed to a garage which Forsythe preferred not to identify, he explained, for personal reasons having to do with a finance company. While he attempts to persuade his insurance adjuster to pay the salvage bill, Forsythe also must consider ways of raising money to get the auto in running condition again.

But first he is cheduled to appear in Police Court today to explain why, in the face of a police ultimatum, he permitted the car to remain so long as a channel obstruction.

Auto Hits Alarm, Firemen Get Ride

A hit-run driver yesterday caused four fire engines and two truck companies to race in vain to Two[illegible]1st and C Streets Northwest.

When firemen arrived they found the red globe shattered and the fire box pole itself bent into half moon shape.

All evidence indicated an automobile had smashed into the pole, automatically sounding the alarm when the mechanism was shaken by the heavy impact.

3 Rob Liquor Store; Cabbie Is Held Up

Three colored men held up a 68-year-old liquor store clerk and a freckle-faced bandit held up a cab driver here last night.

The colored men found Jacob Klibman, of 930 Sheppard Street Northwest, alone in the Brown Liquor Store, at 1432 New Jersey Avenue Northwest. One drew a revolver, the second looted the cash register of $180 and the third emptied Klibman's pockets of $12.

The cab driver, Harry J. Grossman, 28, of Hyattsville, Md., was hailed by a "good-looking, freckled-faced man" at Twentieth and Calvert Streets Northwest, who asked to be driven to Forty-third and Brandywine Streets Northwest.

At his destination the passenger pulled an automatic and forced Grossman to turn over $11.

Public Interest Group Fights Traffic Perils

Civic Association Has Served Northeast Section for 30 Years

This is the seventy-first article in a series about associations of citizens in the District of Columbia.

Improvement of traffic conditions in Northeast Washington has long been an objective of the Public Interest Civic Association of East Washington, according to President William A. Powell.

Organized 30 years ago, the association has been effective in having stop signs and traffic lights placed throughout the area, Powell added.

Other immediate aims include an auditorium for the Lovejoy School, at Thirteenth and D Streets Northeast, and a gymnasium for the Logan School, at Second and C Streets Northeast, the president said.

Boundaries of the area served by the association are East Capitol Street, on the south; Fifteenth Street Northeast, on the east; North Capitol Street, on the west, and Florida Avenue on the north.

Meetings are held on the third Monday of the month in the Lovejoy School, Thirteenth and D Street Northeast. The stated long-run objective is "to unify the citizens in their relation to each other and to the community, under the law, and protection in their rights."

Besides Powell, officers include Dr. George H. Richardson, president emeritis; Charles Williams, first vice president; Dr. Jesse A. Keene, second vice president; Kenneth H. Carter, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mirian McCottry, recording secretary; Edward Smith, treasurer; J. Lark, chaplain, and Otis Demouy, [illegible] at arms.

Members have gone on record as favoring suffrage for Washington and are "solidly behind the Federation of Civic Association's drive" to obtain voting rights for the city.

They stress "education for safety" for the colored children in their area. "From 48 to 52 per cent of the accidents during the past year in the District were those involving colored children," one officer said, quoting federation statistics. Better recreational facilities and improved traffic control are solutions for this situation, members feel.

$5,000 Judgment On B. & O. Upheld

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a $5,000 judgment against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. for the death of James R. Corbin, Internel Revenue Bureau auditor, at the Bates Road Northeast crossing February 26, 1937.

Mr. Corbin's automobile was struck by a train which was going 65 to 70 miles an hour. The police found that the crossing light and bells were not working at the time and a District Court jury ordered damages paid to the widow, Mrs. Beatrice R. Corbin, now a resident of New York.

Crosstown Bus Sought By Citizens

Two More Groups Back Movement For Western Ave., Bladensburg Line

Two more citizens' associations last night joined the movement to establish a crosstown bus line. The proposed route would be from Western Avenue eastward to Bladensburg Road.

Meetings last night were also the occasion for the inauguration of two association presidents.

National Gateway

The National Gateway Citizens Association last night joined the movement for a crosstown bus line. The organization will send a committee to sit with representatives of other associations that already have urged such facilities.

National Gateway citizens also moved to request added bus service for the New York Avenue-Bladensburg Road area.

Voting to join the community Christmas tree contest, members approved appointment of a committee to select the best tree in the National Gateway area. On the committee are Mrs. Marie C. Nold, association secretary; L. M. Green and Alvin Minetree. Minetree also was named chairman of the streets and sidewalks committee.

Park View

Members of the Park View Citizens Association last night voted full support of a proposed crosstown bus line to serve the Northern section of the District.

Election of officers scheduled for the meeting last night in Park View School was postponed until the January meeting by B. J. Kroger, president.

Piney Branch

Elwood Seal, former district corporation counsel, began his administration as president of the Piney Branch Citizens Association last night with a plea that the organization enter into all its activities "carefully and after full discussion."

He also reaffirmed his personal opposition to District self-government. His position coincides with that of the association which has long opposed the suffrage movement.

The association went on record in favor of the District Commissioners' action leading to reopening the District laboratory.

Southeast Businessmen

The Southeast Businessmen's Association last night urged the construction of a sewerage system in new Anacostia developments near the John Philip Sousa Bridge.

Meeting at the Donohue real estate office, at 304 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, the association adopted a resolution asking the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to acquire the Pope Creek Valley area for use as a natural ravine into which sewage can drain, "if that would solve the problem."

The resolution stated that residents of the areas adjacent to Pennsylvania Avenue in Anacostia must construct septic tanks at great cost, and added that they probably will be assessed later for the construction of an adequate sewerage system. Action now, it said, would prevent this double cost.

The Association asked the Commissioners to obtain a revision of taxi zones in Southeast Washington, charging that it cost twice as much to travel a given distance from the downtown area in a southeasterly direction as it does in a northwesterly direction.

Objection was voiced to the size and quality of the street car waiting station now under construction at Sousa Bridge. The station, which is being constructed on District ground by the Capital Traction Co., is in a design approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

A resolution was adopted charging that the design was "out of place" next to the new bridge, and declaring that the station was "wholly inadequate" in size.

Burleith Citizens

Charles C. Tatum, conducting his first meeting as president of the Burleith Citizens' Association, last night appointed six committee chairmen, and announced a community mass meeting for January 13. The association met in Gordon Junior High School.

Next month's meeting will take up the property settlement project in which the association has long been interested, Tatum said.

King Stone, one of the chairmen appointed last night, will head a new garden club to be organized as part of the organization. The club will plan activities beginning in February, it was announced.

Other committee chairmen are Carl Romberg, education; Warren Siemons, public utilities; Col. Ralph C. Bishop, municipal affairs; Shirley D. Mayers, public relations; Mrs. C. H. Parkinson, legislation; and Miss Wilhelmina Rhode, welfare and health.

Johns Hopkins Doctor Reveals New Sulfa Drug for Dysentery

A new sulfa drug to treat a form of dysentery which often strikes in army camps and particularly in the tropics, was announced at the pharmaceutical manufacturers' convention yesterday by Dr. Perrin H. Long, of Johns Hopkins University.

Known as "sulfaquatine," the drug is now undergoing final tests and will be made available to the Army within a few months, he added.

The association's annual scientific award was presented to Dr. Long in the afternoon session, for "fundamental and outstanding study in the use of chemotherapeutic agents." His work with sulpha drugs was called particularly valuable in preventing war-wound infections.

Technical discussions of drug manufacturing innovations were conducted by Dr. James S. McLester, professor of medicine at the University of Alabama and past president of the American Medical Association; Dr. George R. Cowgill, of the Yale University school of medicine, and Dr. J. J. Durett, acting commissioner of food and drugs in the Federal Security Agency.

D.C. Suffrage Unit Reelects Wilbur Finch

Association Chooses Board of Directors, Hears Report on Progress in Year

Wilbur S. Finch was elected to his fourth term as president of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association last night.

At a meeting in Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, the organization, which has led the fight for local self-government and national representation in the District, chose officers for 1941, elected a new board of directors, and heard a report on progress it has made in the last year toward its goal.

Also elected to a fourth term was Harry N. Stull, first vice president. Stull, a veteran civic leader, is also president of the D. C. Federation of Citizens Associations.

Other officers elected, or reelected, are Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, second vice president; William A. Maio, third vice president; Harry S. Wender, fourth vice president; C. Herbert Marshall, fifth vice president, and William J. Hartle, treasurer.

Reviewing the association's activities of the last year Finch highlighted opposition given the Seal plan for reorganization, and efforts of the organization to obtain Congressional action on the D. C. suffrage plank in the 1940 Democratic platform.

Finch cited the work of two members who were instrumental in having the plank written into the platform, Mrs. Arthur D. Condon and Melvin D. Hildreth. Mrs. Condon was reelected to the board of directors last night, while Hildreth was made a member for the first time.

Finch said the association's objectives in 1941 will be two-fold: securing of local self government and establishment of the primary law providing for election of D. C. delegates to the party conventions.

The association will at the same time, Finch assured, continue to give full cooperation to the Citizens Joint Committee working for District representation in Congress.

Pittsburgh Steelers Purchased for $150,000

Deal Closed At Pro Grid Meeting Here

Alex Thompson, Yale Graduate Is Buyer; Rooney Gets Half Interest in Eagles

By Al Hailey

The Pittsburgh Steelers became the property of a 26-year-old Yale graduate yesterday in a deal negotiated with Art Rooney as the National Professional Football League went through the preliminary rounds of its annual draft meeting at the Willard Hotel.

At the same time, Rooney—reported to have sold his Pittsburgh franchise at anywhere from $125,000 to $175,000—bought a half interest in the Philadelphia Eagles.

The new Pittsburgh owner is Alex Thompson, 1936 graduate of Yale University, who said he represented a group of prominent Easterners banded together under the name of the East-West Sporting Co.

May Move to Boston

Announcement of the transactions came last night after the ten National League Club owners and coaches had been locked all afternoon in a session of wrangling and haggling over rules affecting member clubs.

Thompson, vice president of a New York drug products manufacturing company and son of a former director of the Inland Steel Co., said early in the day he hoped to move the Pittsburgh franchise to Boston, but according to the terms of the sale he'll operate in Pittsburgh.

In purchasing the franchise from Rooney, Thompson did not get the Steeler club, lock, stock and barrel. Players of the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia clubs will be pooled and divided by mutual agreement between the Bell-Rooney partnership and the Eastern syndicate Thompson represents.

Buys Ratified

The purchases were ratified by the league last night in short order, thus qualifying the new owners for the right to participate in today's selective draft meeting at which the circuit's teams will bargain for exclusive rights to negotiate with graduating college stars.

The Pittsburgh club—which has to flip a coin with the Chicago Cardinals to see which gets second choice in the drafts—stands a chance of losing even this, however.

As the situation now stands, the Chicago Bears claim they have purchased both Pittsburgh's and Philadelphia's first choice in the draft. Bell vigorously denied this last night and said that the league's executive committee will have to rule on the matter. The Bears claim they have the Eagle and Steeler first shots because of player trades made before the 1940 season got under way.

Might Get Harmon

If the Bears get their demands, they'll have first choice of the two most sought-after college stars on the draft list of some 400—Michigan's Tom Harmon and the Texas Aggies' John Kimbrough.

Philadelphia, by virtue of its last-place position in the order of the 1940 finish, has first choice, and Pittsburgh and Chicago's Cardinals, the second lowest teams, are tied for second choice.

Thompson, however, appeared well satisfied with the deal, and President Carl L. Storck called the sales "very important and progressive steps for the National League."

Reports had it that Thompson's associates plan to install Earle (Greasy) Neale, now line coach at Yale, as the coach of the Pittsburgh club.

Thompson, born in Chicago, is heir to a Boston steel fortune. He attended Andover before going to Yale, where he became a great sports enthusiast.

He said that the Pittsburgh deal has been brewing for three months, during which time it repeatedly had been on and off.

Sutherland Calls Bears 'The Greatest'

Other League Coaches Give Opinions on Play-Off Debacle

Attention, Monday morning quarterbacks, lend an ear to the opinions of the other eight coaches in the 10-team National Professional Football League about the Redskins' 73-0 to the Chicago Bears Sunday.

Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, Brooklyn Dodgers: The Bears were just the greatest team I ever saw. The Redskins were below par.

Curley Lambeau, Green Bay Packers: Psychologically, the Bears had every advantage. The Redskins had beaten them previously, and naturally the Bears were a little more hungry Sunday. It's a terrific strain trying to extend a winning streak such as the Redskins had, and I think Chicago had the breaks.

Steve Owen, New York Giants: What do I think happened to the Redskins—well, I think that if they hadn't dropped that first pass near the goal line and so many more later it would have been a different tale. The Bears got the jump on them. You know there are days when nothing works. That score naturally is no true comparison of the caliber of the two teams. You can discount at least five of the Bear touchdowns.

Dutch Clark, Cleveland Rams: I wish I could say what did happen to the Redskins. They just had a bad day when the Bears were right to beat anything in the country.

Jimmy Conzelman, Chicago Cardinals: The Bears had too much power for the Redskin tacklers. They caught the Redskins cold, and the Redskins never recovered. One of the greatest factors it seems to me was lack of Redskin reserve strength because of injuries. You must remember that the Redskins lost Charley Malone, Max Krause and Dick Todd early in the game. And there was Bob McChesney out there with that broken hand. Do I make myself clear?

Gee Walker, Krakky Held Out as Bait

Rick Ferrell Also Figures in Deal With Browns; Laabs May Come to Nats

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Moving briskly from suite to suite in the hotel headquarters of American League clubowners, President Clark Griffith of the Nats today laid the groundwork for at least a pair of player trades.

Early in the day he had conversations with the bosses of the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians, and tonight he was closeted with General Manager George DeWitt and Manager Fred Haney, of the Browns.

These three deals are regarded as high among the possibilities:

1. A trade with the Browns that would involve as the chief figures Pitcher Joe Krakauskas and Catcher Rick Ferrell, of Washington, and Outfielder Chet Laabs and Shortstop Johnny Berardino, of St. Louis.
2. A deal with the Cleveland Indians that would put Outfielder Gerald Walker in a Cleveland uniform in exchange for Outfielder Ben Chapman and another player.
3. A swap with the White Sox, who are seeking Krakauskas and may be persuaded to give up a catcher or outfielder.

Rivals Seem Anxious

The Nats' 71-year-old owner, who is here in company with Manager Bucky Harris, found himself with easy entree into negotiations with rival owners. The Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis bosses showed haste to acquaint Griffith with the fact that they are deeply interested in a possible trade for Krakauskas.

The big Lithuanian left-hander, who has exhausted the patience of both Griffith and Harris by his failure to develop control and effectiveness that might dovetail with his speed, is known to be on the block by all parties here. The clubs who want him vision Krakky as an asset.

Last summer, the Browns turned down a straight offer of Krakauskas for Laabs, but today they are showing new interest and it may burgeon as a deal involving several players. The Browns need catching and the Nats are solidly in the market for infielders and outfielders.

General Manager Cyril Slapnicka, of the Indians, definitely made Griffith an offer for Gerald Walker, holding out Ben Chapman as the consideration.

Want Chapman Plus

"We'd have to have more than Chapman in any deal for Walker," said the Nats' bosses. The impression is that they will listen more intently if the Indians include in the deal Infielder Russ Peters, who last season subbed so capably for Shortstop Lou Boudreau when the latter was injured.

If the Nats and the Indians do complete a deal which would bring Chapman and Peters to Washington, Griffith would be regaining title to two players he formerly owned. Chapman was with the Nats for a year and a half after figuring in a deal that sent Jake Powell to the Yankees in 1936. Peters, when with the Albany club, was in the Washington farm system. He is the only bespectacled infielder in the league. Chapman failed to hit .300 last year, and the Indians are demanding more outfield strength.

The White Sox tried to buy Krakauskas for $10,000 cash early last summer, but at a later date when Griffith consented to the deal the Chicago club spurned it. Manager Jimmy Dykes, however, is still vitally interested in Krakky and is playing on the Nats' need of infielders by offering to include Second Baseman-Shortstop Eric McNair in a deal for Krakky.

Pro Football Owners Start Draft Today

Redskins Must Take Last Choice Because Of Superior Record

Washington will be the scene of its second draft day this fall today—this time it's the National Professional Football League instead of Uncle Sam.

Beginning at 10 a. m., owners and coaches of the 10 league clubs will lock themselves behind glass doors in the Willard Hotel and start the contest to line up the All-Americans of the Nation.

With the clubs choosing in the order of their finish in the regular 1940 season, the Redskins will have to be content to pick what's left when the other teams get through.

Skins at Top

The Skins' nine victories against two defeats left them at the top of the league and makes them the tail-enders in the selections.

To complicate an already confused situation, the Chicago Bears yesterday claimed they were entitled to the first choices of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh clubs because of preseason player deals.

Owner Bert Bell of the Eagles said no, but the report persisted. Bell said he might not even choose Tom Harmon, Michigan backfield star.

"There's that John Kimbrough, you know. And Penn has a fellow named Frank Reagan," Bell said. Reports had it that Bell is prepared to offer Harmon a $20,000 contract to join the professional ranks.

Cognizant of the complications caused by the most powerful club in the league—getting first choice at the Nation's best football talent, the league last night adopted a rule to guard against that in 1941.

The new rule prohibits the cellar-dwelling club from selling or trading its first or second choice in the league's draft for a period of one playing year after they are chosen without unanimous consent of all other members of the league.

The team that wins the champion-

Downcast 'Skins Hold Luncheon, Disband

City Still in Uproar Over Astounding 73-to-0 Defeat as Battered Gridders Call It Quits

The Redskins of 1940 disbanded yesterday.

They parted until next year, leaving Washington in the biggest uproar of football game post-mortems ever experienced in the Capital.

On every street corner, throughout the city's cafes, restaurants and cocktail lounges, the subject of the Redskins' 73-0 loss to the Chicago Bears Sunday in Griffith Stadium monopolized conversation.

The question was "what happened to the Redskins?" and everyone had an answer—that is, everyone but the Redskins.

As they gathered in the Willard Hotel for their farewell luncheon, they were an unspeaking, downcast lot. They couldn't explain why, after winning the National Pro League's Eastern Division race, they went so completely to pieces in a game for the world's championship with a tea mthey previously had defeated.

Refraining from mentioning his Sunday's threat to cut several of the players from the squad's pay roll, Owner George Marshall announced at the luncheon that the Redskin management had decided to see that every member of the 1940 squad received an "even break" financially.

Get Part Shares

The difference between what Andy Farkas, Don Irwin and Trainer Doc Mauro were voted and the full share of the players' cut of Sunday's gate will be made up by the club, Marshall said.

General Manager Jack Espey, who was voted nothing in the division of the player pool by the Redskin squad, also will be given a full share, he added.

Farkas and Irwin had been voted half shares, while Mauro was voted two-thirds of a share. Each player on the losing team received $606.25 as a full share.

Marshall congratulated the team on its record of nine victories and two defeats in the Eastern race preceding the championsip play-off. He expressed hopes for a much stronger club next year, but men-

Heisman Trophy Goes to Harmon As 'Most Valuable'

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 9.—Tommy Harmon, Michigan's All-America halfback, received the Heisman Trophy, given annually by the Downtown A. C. to the football player who is voted the most valuable in the country by a committee of sports writers.

The presentation was made by Walter B. Holcombe, president of the Downtown A. C., at a dinner attended by gridiron notables, of the past and present. Harmon was praised by his coach, Fritz Crisler, and by Fielding Yost, Michigan athletic director, who hailed him as "about the best all-around halfback who ever pulled on a cleated shoe," and other speakers.

In his reply Harmon said he was "about the luuckiest individual alive" and that he would "try to live up to the high standrads set by my predecessors."

Former winners of the trophy, first given in 1935 in honor of John W. Heisman, former Downtown A. C. athletic director and veteran football coach, were Jay Berwanger, Chicago; Larry Kelley, Yale; Clint Frank, Yale; Davey O'Brien, Texas

Players Voted $50 Apiece For Bowl Play

'Rosemen' Allowed Cash for Possible Holiday Employment

By the United Press

Del Monte, Calif., Dec. 9.—The Pacific Coast Conference tonight voted to pay Western Rose Bowl football players up to $50 each as compensation for wages they might have earned in private jobs over a two weeks' period preceding the Pasadena New Year's Day classic.

The new rule goes into effect immediately, and will apply for the first time to Stanford University players who will meet University of Nebraska football team in the Rose Bowl next January 1.

Asked if the "wage compensation" to Rose Bowl players might run afoul of a "professionalism" interpretation by the Amateur Athletic Union, Edwin N. Atherton, conference athletic commission, said:

"I don't think so."

The case of each player will be considered separately. The limit of payment to each player would be $50, and will be calculated on the basis of wages he would have earned on a job he already held or a job he had accepted before he knew he was to play in the Rose Bowl.

"It will not apply to 'potential' jobs which the player thinks he can get during the Christmas and New Year's holidays," Atherton said. "The pay the player will get will represent the actual financial loss he will sustain by playing in the Rose Bowl."

Each Rose Bowl compensation case must be approved by Atherton's office and a record of the payment will be filed with him, and each player eligible for compensation must prove he is entitled to it.

The rule was adopted in a resolution passed by the conference faculty representatives, whose word is law as far as conference codes are concerned. Other resolutions tended to decrease the number of football tickets given to players.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 10, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Dec. 9.—If they take a vote tomorrow in the gaudy downtown hotel suite where the eight American League clubowners are meeting, it will be 6 to 2 in favor of keeping on the books Clark Griffith's no-trade rule directed at the league champions.

POVICH

As a group, the owners are a bit ashamed of the rule, but they'll retain it. Rescinding it at this time would be an admission that it was designed with the sole purpose of ending the Yankees' domination of the league, which it did. To save their faces, they don't want to disturb the rule for at least another year.

When and if it comes to a vote, the clubs that will seek the rule's repeal are the Yankees and the Browns. The Yankees' opposition to the blockade against pennant winners is understandable enough (look what it did to them last year when they were desperate to trade), but the Browns stand on the question requires some explanation. This is it: The poverty-stricken Browns have always been able to turn to the Yankees in deals that have been mutually helpful. They'll go along with the Yankees, as usual, on league matters.

The paradox is that the Yanks are opposing the present rule at this time despite the fact that since losing the pennant they are not affected by Griffith's blockade. The Yanks are free to deal as they like this year. But the Yankees' bosses are taking a long-range view on the question. They anticipate more pennants and they don't want to be hamstrung when they regain the championship.

Normally the Detroit Tigers could be expected to cast their lot with any movement to repeal Griffith's rule. The Tigers as champions are the only team affected by it, and the Tigers need new and proven talent desperately. It is generally acknowledged that the Tigers cannot hope to repeat with the team they had last season.

But the Tigers are very sporting about it all. Young Spike Briggs, who is handling the team's affairs during the illness of his father, explained the Tigers' position to your agent today during a stand-up session against a lobby pillar.

"Dad says the rule has got to stay on the books at least one more year," said young Briggs. "He feels that the Tigers profited because the Yankees, as champions, couldn't make any trades last season, and that we have an obligation to take our own chances on the rule as champions this year. The rule will hurt us, but we're not going to run out on it. We won't vote against it."

There is another bit of legislation recently passed which also is apt to hurt the Tigers no little. It wasn't enacted in the American League's high councils, however. It was adopted in the halls of the United States Congress and it is called the Selective Service Law. It threatens to reach out and grab big Hank Greenberg right off the Detroit ball club.

Detroit officials confide that they expect to lose Greenberg to the Army in the selective draft. The number he drew, 520, is due to be called up before the 1941 season starts and they see no way for Greenberg to duck the call even if he tried. His fame as a ball player is seen as moving him closer to the Army, because he has no exemptions and calling him up would be viewed as a fine example of the impartiality of the working of the draft machinery.

What is worrying American League club owners is the possible plight of the Tigers if Greenberg is called into the Army and the team, with its veteran infield, stagnates for want of new material. They wish the Tigers no particular luck as a ball team, but they do recognize the Detroit club as the best attraction in the Western division of the league and the most profitable franchise as far as all clubs are concerned.

Night baseball is posing another problem for the club owners. The Browns have made a special request that they be permitted to play 14 games at night instead of the conventional seven. They received that concession last year and drew their largest crowds in 15 years as a result. For the first time in years, teams visiting St. Louis were able to take away a profit.

But there are club owners in the American League who are objecting to as many as 14 home games for the Browns when other clubs are limited to seven. And the National League is ready to introduce a resolution that the two leagues act at a joint meeting to limit the home night games of all clubs to seven each.

Clark Griffith is willing to give the Browns special permission to play more than seven night games, probably in the hope that he can schedule more than seven in his Washington park, where he is installing lights. In any event, the National League's proposition for joint action on night baseball has rekindled Griffith's long-time hate for the National League and he sees no need for joint action.

"Night ball is something for each league to decide," said Griffith. "When the National League started night ball in Cincinnati back in 1934, they didn't ask the American League's consent, and we don't need theirs on any action we want to take."

Cardinals Not Finished Selling And Trading Yet, Says Rickey

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 9.—Branch Rickey, who would swap you out of your pants if he thought the Cardinals could use them, has the boys on the corner guessing again.

While the baseball world debated his strategy in selling several of his most valuable players recently, the Old Master Mind threw them another floater today with the announcement he isn't through yet.

The selling wave that hit the St. Louis National League club at last week's minor league convention probably will be continued—if they will deal his way, Rickey indicated, as he left for the major league meeting at Chicago. Rickey is vice president and general manager of the far-flung Cardinal organization.

"If the opportunity presents we may get rid of more players," he declared, but at the same time insisted the Cardinals were not breaking faith with their St. Louis public.

It had been hinted in some outside quarters that the Cards, who finished strong in third place last season, might be "selling their chance for a pennant" this year.

Asserting money was not the objective, Rickey commented:

"I've been in St. Louis a good many years and I can say that the Cardinals never sold a man for cash that we didn't think we had as good or better men for replacement—with the exception of Joe Medwick. In his case (Medwick was traded to Brooklyn for players and cash last summer) there were several considerations that made that deal seem advisable."

Rickey explained the Cardinals have a reserve list of 40 players, including 21 pitchers, and "that is too many."

"We won't trade any catchers or outfielders, but we might dispose of a few more pitchers or infielders," he said.

The club is in the soundest condition today that it has been in the last five years, boasted the general manager.

But he declined to forecast where it would finish in the 1941 race.

The recent deal that brought Catcher Gus Mancuso from Brooklyn and sent Mickey Owen, former Cardinal prize rookie, to the Dodgers was done deliberately, Rickey said. He added that Pitcher Bob Bowman, whose sale to the Giants was a surprise to fans, was sold because the manager (Billy Southworth) asked that it be done. He declined to comment further on the latter deal.

Rickey said the addition of Mancuso, a veteran, together with Walker Cooper and Don Padgett, would make catching the Cards' strongest department.

The disposal of Infielders Joe Orengo and Stu Martin also puzzled Redbird followers, but Boss Rickey assured them he would come up with an infield that would do all right.

Hockey Eagles Try for 3rd Victory Over Sea Gulls Tonight

3,500 May See Battle At Riverside

Norm Burns' Feud With Former Mates Expected to Feature Eastern Ice Game

By Jack Munhall

Licking their chops in anticipation of slicing another sliver of sweet revenge from the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, the Washington Eagles tackle their 1939-40 nemesis tonight at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

Boasting two victories already this season over the team that knocked them out of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League championship last year, Coach Redvers Mackenzie's Eagles are prepared to make it three for three. As a matter of fact if the Sea Gulls don't beat the Eagles once all year, it will provoke not one bit of sympathy from the Washington players.

A crowd of 3,500 is expected to watch Washington bid for its twelfth victory in 14 starts against the "Seashore Sluggers" who mix unorthodox hockey with generous doses of fists and sticks.

Rivaling the general feud will be a centerpiece attraction between Norm Burns, Washington center, and any one of the Sea Gulls who desires to carry out the threat to "get Burns."

Played With Gulls

Burns started last season with the Sea Gulls and got along fine, so the story goes, until the powers that be decided his methods of chasing the skidding rubber disk were so gentle that Atlantic City was losing its reputation as bullies. "Play our way or scram," they are reported to have told our hero. Whereupon Burns soon got his release and finished out the season with the River Vale Skeeters.

But the bad blood between Burns and his former teammates is thicker than ever, and in the two matches between the two teams thus far, this has been very obvious.

Tonight's match will be important for Washington inasmuch as a victory over Atlantic City and another over the Baltimore Orioles here Friday will all but clinch the Hershey Cup series for the Eagles. At present the Eagles lead the second-place Orioles by two full games, with only nine more contests remaining in the Hershey competition.

Eagles Battered

Though Washington is in a somewhat battered condition with several key players suffering bothersome injuries, it will be heavily favored over the Sea Gulls, even though they have lately been showing marked improvement. The visitors' record shows six victories and five losses.

According to scoring statistics, Washington boasts a much better defensive club than Atlantic City, and also has a slight edge in offensive power. The Eagles have scored 58 goals, and surrendered only 34 for the league's best defensive mark, while the Sea Gulls have tallied 54 points and yielded the same number.

Les Colvin, 20-year-old Washington goalie, will make his second appearance of the season at the net, replacing Gordon Hemming, with whom he is scheduled to alternate at the goalie position for the remainder of the season. Hemming has turned in several sparkling performances, but so highly regarded is young Colvin that Coach Mackenzie has decided to use both of them. In this way Mackenzie believes neither will lose his eye, nor will he become rusty.

Mackenzie and Eagles Owner Severine G. Leoffler attended a general meeting of the league in New York yesterday and were reported to have criticized the brand of officiating the league has been getting.

Tom Farr Asks Leave For U. S. Fight Tour

London, Dec. 9 (INS).—The British board of boxing control tonight had under consideration an application for Tommy Farr, the ragged Welsh heavyweight, to leave bomb-battered England for a fighting tour in United States.

Because of poor eyesight, Farr, whose claim to fame is that he stayed 15 rounds with Joe Louis, has been rejected by nearly all departments of the British military service. He is, however, reported still in good condition for boxing battles.

Coach Cassell's Eagles Pose Question Mark

Looking for his best season in his four years as American U. basketball coach, Coach Staff Cassell is working hard with the boys to get off to a big start Thursday against Georgetown. Greenbelt Five Beaten, 33-19, By Central

Winners Come From Behind Twice to Register Victory

Though behind for a brief period in the first and second quarters, Central High's cage team was never seriously threatened yesterday as it opened its season with a 33-19 beating of an inexperienced Greenbelt High five on the losers' floor.

After one period the Grizzlies held a 6-5 edge, but the margin faded quickly as the scond stanza began and Central went to the dressing room at intermission with a 12-8 advantage. That was boosted steadily thereafter, the third-quarter count being 22-11.

Using his height to advantage under the basket, veteran Sam Di Blasi, of the Vikings, turned in the high scoring performance of the game with 9 points. Greenbelt's Egli was a close second with 8.

Diz Dean Served Papers on Charge Of Killing Doe

By the Associated Press

Dermott, Ark., Dec. 9.—State Game Warden Oscar Mays said Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, of Dallas, Tex., Chicago Cubs baseball pitcher, voluntarily accepted service today of a warrant charging him with killing a doe and was released under $500 bond to appear in circuit court at the March term.

The warrant charged Dean with killing the doe last month, during the first Arkansas deer-hunting season.

Mays declared he served the warrant on Dean at a plantation near Lake Village, where the baseball pitcher and a party of friends had gathered for the opening of the second deer-hunting season tomorrow.

Mays said that he and Golden "had a little talk with Dizzy" during which the Cubs twirler denied shooting a doe, a misdemeanor carrying a penalty of a fine ranging from a $50 minimum to $500.

One Day American U. Players Look Great And the Next Day—Well, Coach Awaits Basketball Opener With Georgetown

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Like a boy who gets a new sled for Christmas and can hardly wait for the first snow to try it out, Coach Staff Cassell is hopefully waiting until Thursday night when his 1940-41 American U. cagers trot out against Georgetown University.

Staff and four of the five members of the starting team were busy with football until late in November. Then a short vacation followed, so the Eagle coach has had a comparatively short time to work with the basketball team.

One day he thinks they'll be great—and the next he wonders whether they will win a game. The boys spent the week-end at State College, Pa., where they demonstrated at the Penn State court clinic, while they also worked last week for the local recreation department clinic. Staff had the boys over for a workout with Bill Reinhart's G. W. cagers, and they have been working overtime in the home gym.

A Pretentious Schedule

Cassell is anxious to make a good showing this season for several reasons. One—in his his role of athletic director he has arranged the most pretentious A. U. court schedule in years. Two—he wants to make an impressive debut in the newly formed Mason-Dixon Conference, of which the school is one of the two local members. Three—his records at the school during his three years as mentor have been 10 won and 5 lost, 11 and 6 and last year 9 and 7, and he wants to continue well above the .500 mark.

The football team spent most of the season away from home so the courtmen will be in the role of hosts in 11 of the 16 games. American U. students will have an opportunity to see Georgetown, Penn State, V. P. I. and the University of Mexico, among others, on the home court. The Eagles only play four games in the conference, Western Maryland twice, Delaware and Johns Hopkins, the Terrors and Hopkins here.

Outstanding Player

The Eagles will present for the fourth year the school's contribution to the outstadning local players' circle, Hugo (Dutch) Schulze, the 6-foot-1-inch 180-pound senior who has totaled 540 points in his previous court campaigns.

Schulze is the outstanding individual star on the club, offensively, defensively and as a team man.

Carl (Bing) Byham, the former Kane (Pa.) scholastic player in his tnird year on the team, gives the club height with his 6 feet 3 inches. Byham is a hook-shot artist. Archie Norford and Barty Reese, with one and two years' experience, respectively, are sure starters Thursday night. Reese, the only nongrid man on the first team, has been practic- asketball for several weeks and Staff looks to him to regain the form that earned league scoring ..nors for Hughesville, Pa., High.

Two Battle for Berth

The fifth berth will be between Bruce Etchison, 6-foot 3-inch letterman from this city and Gus Frizzell, freshman who made the All-Maryland high team last year at Lonaconing High.

Jim Hollis and Gil White are the only other non-freshmen on the squad at present. V. P. I. will be the only game in which the Eagles will have to keep the frosh on the bench, due to Southern Conference rules.

Bill Barnsley and Bob Whalen, of last year's Bethesda High team and Jack Payne, former Washington-Lee floorman may all see action against the Hoyas, particularly Barnsley.

Last year American U. led Georgetown at the half in the opener but faded out when Bingham left the game with his quota of fouls. In the second game at Tech, the Eagles led with five minutes to play but were beaten out.

Little Hoyas Rout Towson Five, 35 to 7

Georgetown Prep's cagemen came within a few seconds of beating Towson Catholic School without a single field goal as they took a 35-7 victory yesterday on the Garrett Park floor.

In the final moments of the game Towson's Forward Crogham hurled desperately in an effort to score a two-pointer, and was successful. Otherwise the visitors were forced to be satisfied with five charity points.

Johnny Showell, newcomer to the Little Hoya squad, led scoring of the winners with 13 points. Bob Barrett and Schneider turned in five apiece.

Towson registered two points in the first quarter while G. P. got 10, and in the second stanza went scoreless as the Little Hoyas got 7.

Joe Kilroy's First 407 Set Tops League

Wally Donaldson Leads Odd Fellows With 177-424 Totals

With 10 years of bowling behind him, Joe Kilroy, Engineering team of the Kilowatt League, came through last night with his first 400 set, ending his three-game try with a nice 407. Kilroy's big set was the spark that ignited his team to action, the boys taking highs for quintets of 615 and 1,767. Aubrey Belk, Kilroy's teammate, was content to allow his buddy a full spot in the limelight even though he had high game himself of 160.

NAVY LEAGUE

Tom Galleher, Hydrographic quintet of the Navy Department League at Arcadia, was high man last night, getting high game of 158 and top set with a 411 pinfall. The Coast Guard team took game with a 602 while Bill Doose's 134-391 electrified his last place Naval Air Station team into life and the high set of the night with a pinfall of 1,700 and three wins over the Paymasters as well.

ODD FELLOWS

It was Amity No. 1 all the way at the Odd Fellows' rolling at Brookland last night. Paced by two new season highs of Wally Donaldson, who had 177 for game and a splendid set of 424, the Amity No. 1 boys took a 619 count for game and 1,745 for set. Donaldson's game came within ten sticks of tying the league record while he missed Perce Ellett's all-time high set, chalked up in 1936, by 14 pins. The Golden Rule team came within one pin of equaling Amity No. 1's high game. Earl Steele, Mount Pleasant, had near highs of 145-383. Golden Rule still leads, followed by Friendship No 1 and Amity No. 1.

GEORGIA AVENUE

Norman Wootton, brother of Blanche Wootton, of Ladies' District League fame, was the standout in the Georgia Avenue meet at Silver Spring. He had a 162 high game for his Sherer's Men's Shop five that tied the season record and from there went on to capture the set as well with a 387 pinfall. The Sanford's boys took the team highs with 605—1,712.

TEMPLE

The Arrow Cab boys at Northeast Temple found that Al Day, Gas Line, and Joe Green, Mayfair, were the best on the drives last night, the former getting high game of 126 as the latter came through for a 335 top count set. The Gas Line five, paced by Day's game, took all the team highs with 516-1,494, and stayed in front of the loop with 25 wins against 8 losses. Drivers come next with 21-12.

PETROLEUM

In the Petroleum League at Columbia the high individual game and set glory went to Phipps, Esso Extra, who got 134-373 to lead the others and help his quintet stay in first position. The Wayne Oil Burner crew was best as a team, taking high counts of 572 and 1,668. Esso Extra leads followed by Wayne Burner, Ott's Service Station and Colonial Fuel.

CONVENTION HALL

Isabelle Riefenberg and Al Hunt, with a top count of 728, were the winners of a special Convention Hall Mixed Doubles Tournament and pocketed $20 for their efforts. Jim Thurby and Dixie Rees brought down second money with 687. Helen Wilson and Corinne Hauser had 115 and 316 for game and set, respectively, to lead the ladies, while Red Edmondston rolled high game for the men of 138 as Victor Hayrel got a 354 pinfall for top set.

Sims, Middie Center, Named '41 Captain

Georgia Stalwart Succeeds Foster; 7 Lettermen to Graduate

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 9.—The Navy Athletic Association today announced the selection of Midshipman W. Edward Sims, of Hapeville, Ga., as captain of the 1941 football team after the players who participated in the victory over the Army Cadets, November 30, held an election.

Sims, who has played a steady game at center for the last two years, is the holder of two "N-Stars" for victories over the rival Army lads. He will succeed Richard E. Foster, end, of Piedmont, Calif., who will graduate next February. Sims is a member of the class of 1942. Choice was made from a group of ten other eligibles, all members of that class, and it is understood was based upon his greater experience, coupled with popularity among his fellows. He is 22 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 195.

Sims learned his early football at Georgia Tech where he played two years before coming to Annapolis, but not in college competition. A report had been circulated that this was Sims' last year as a Middy player under the Naval Academy's 3-year rule, in view of a year of varsity play at Tech. However, W. A. Alexander, athletic director at the Georgia institution advised that Sims did not engage in intercollegiate athletic competition either in his freshman or sophomore years.

Sims played center on the Navy plebe team in 1938. In 1939 he alternated with Hal Harwood, Los Angeles, Calif., in that spot, and during the season just closed held down the pivot job on Navy's "first outfit" in the two-team unit system, which was employed so successfully. Harwood being on the "second" group.

Midshipman John A. Lindbeck, of Salem, Oreg., is the new team manager, succeeding D. P. Pollatty, Norfolk, Va., also slated for graduation.

Rams Resume Grid Practice

New York, Dec. 9.—Fordham's football team resumed practice today and at the same time the athletic department announced the itinerary for the squad of 33 which will go to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl game against Texas A. and M. January 1.

The Rams will leave Christmas night and go directly to Dallas by way of St. Louis. They will not stop over on the way and will reach the scene of the game the morning of December 27, allowing them five days for practice.

The return trip will begin late on the night of January 1 and will take the squad back to New York by way of New Orleans, Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Fla., and Washington, where brief stopovers will be made.

The Fordham squad was at full strength for today's practice with Jim Noble, quarterback who missed the final regular-season game because of injuries, back in the lineup.

Leto Decisions Chalky Wright

Baltimore, Dec. 9 (AP).—Jimmy Leto, of Hartford, Conn., aided by a 22¾-pound edge in weight, won a split decision tonight from Chalky Wright, Los Angeles Negro boxer, in ten rounds.

Mareus Pitte, 123½, Washington, decisioned Nat Litfin, 127½, of New York, in eight rounds.

Georgetown Five Host To Western Maryland

Terrors Meet Hoyas at Tech Gym Tonight; Five College Games Saturday Include Season's Debuts for Maryland and G.W.U.

Georgetown University will open its home basketball season in customary style tonight, meeting the Western Maryland College quintet in Tech gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock. The Hoya Frosh will meet the A. U. Jayvees in a 7 o'clock preliminary.

The game will give Coach Elmer Ripley's charges a chance to get an even break against the Mason-Dixon Conference teams, for the Hoyas lost the season's opener to Loyola of Baltimore last week. They will meet their third straight conference team Thursday when the Georgetowners help open American U.'s season in the latter's gym. The Hoyas are not a member of the newly formed conference.

The hosts may present a slightly altered line-up against the Green Terrors for Capt. Irving Rizzi wrenched his side in the opening game and he may be replaced by Russ Miller at guard. Buddy O'Grady will hold down the other defensive post.

Giebel to Forward

Bill Bornheimer, 6-foot, 4-inch sophomore, will start at center for Ripley's team, while the only local boy in the starting line-up, Jim Giebel, will move to forward. Giebel, former all-prep center at St. John's, was the 1939-40 center. George Pajak will be Giebel's running mate at forward.

The Hoyas, with a veteran team, were figured to start the season in winning style, but word from Baltimore is that Loyola is likely to upset several more "name" teams before the season is over. Western Maryland will bring an improved team over last season, but will rule slight underdogs.

Georgetown monopolizes the week's card until Friday, when Wilson and Gallaudet tangle in the first of two games between the intra-city rivals. They have each played, and lost two games but Wilson put up a good battle against the University of Baltimore five and they will be favored on that account.

5 Teams Play

Saturday's card is the first real big day of the season with five of the local clubs scheduled for action, two making their seasonal debuts.

George Washington opens at Lexington, Va., against Washington and Lee Saturday night while Maryland is opening at home with another Southern Conference power, the University of Richmond. In other games away from home Gallaudet will travel to Baltimore to meet Johns Hopkins while Wilson will hit the Virginia trail, against Randolph-Macon at Ashland.

American U. and Western Maryland met in a conference game on the Eagles court.

Sunday Catholic U. is booked for a warm-up tilt with the alumni in the Brookland gym. It will be Coach Cotton's first glance at the squad in action before the Duke game next week.

The first capacity basketball crowd of the season is expected next Wednesday in Riverside Stadium when G. W. entertains the powerful Oklahoma Aggies in a game that could put them in the national college spotlight before the season is well under way. It will also mark Riverside Stadium's debut as the home of college games.

Soldierette Smashes Track Mark Winning at Charles Town

Bond Flash Beats Field 3 Lengths

Turns 7 Furlongs, In 1.23 1-5; Red Wrack Takes Place Money; Here Goes 3d

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 9.—Breaking fast from No. 1 stall gate, Mrs. F. W. Bond's Soldierette ran around the inside rail to set a new track record for 7 furlongs here today. The 4-year-old daughter of Cohort and Conservancy clipped four-fifths of a second off the track mark for the route owned by Gay Amazon and one of two year's standing. Her time was 1.23 1-5.

Behind Soldierette there was a lot of shuffling and puffing but her rivals did not have a chance as the filly made it two victories in as many tries here in the mountains. Red Wrack, owned by Mrs. M Knieriem, was second and a neck in front of B. F. Christmas' Here Goes, but the gelding was three lengths behind the winner.

Victor Brings $7

Perfect racing weather prevailed. Some of the more hardy souls among the 6,000 present discarded overcoats. The track was fast after being termed good in the early stages of the program. Most of the betting was on Soldierette, Red Wrack and Here Goes. The winning filly paid a $7 mutuel.

Jockey George Napier did the riding and turned in a swell job. He took Soldierette away from the gate winging and kept her under urging until he found she needed no help in the stretch run. Red Wrack and Here Goes were hard driven from start to finish but they were not in the same class with the fleet filly in front of the pack.

Jockey W. L. Taylor failed to get anywhere in particular in the day's feature but he had his innings. He rode two winners. In the fourth race he brought Third Try from back in the field to defeat Martha's Queen and Alarming. In the fifth race, he got up in the final jump to make O Play down Kingdom.

$413 Daily Double

Today's daily double paid $413 and was the work of Tantrum, an $8.20 shot, and Sour Cherry, one that paid $82.20.

The program opened with one of the several close finishes. The favorite players took it on the chin when Princess Bull, a 6-year-old daughter of Bull Dog, stuck to her running guns to defeat the San Angelo Stable's Polycletus, an odds-on choice. The two staged a spirited battle and Princess Bull provided her backers with a $16.60 mutuel. Pomary was third in the field of eight.

The daily double, which paid $508 on Saturday, was a telephone number proposition again today, with $413 going to a chosen few. Mrs. H. Bowyer's Tantrum set the stage by winning the second race at an $8.20 pay-off. Jockey N. L. Pierson took the filly to the front and kept her there coming to the wire in front of Baby Mowlee and Relious.

Victory Over Tulane Earned B. C. Bowl Bid

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 9.—The mutual affection of the Sugar Bowl and Boston College, which has made the Eagles practically commuters to New Orleans, all dates back to a bright September afternoon when the New Englanders slapped Tulane, the local idol, all over the field.

Tulane, Sugar Bowl participant of last year, was supposed to be high again this year, and the 27-7 beating Boston administered sent the Green Wave on into an indifferent season.

New Orleans sports fans are quick to acclaim an enemy who wins clearly and fairly, and they turned to Boston after Tulane went under.

Typical of the attitude here is the editorial comment of Fred Digby, sports editor of the New Orleans Item and member of the Sugar Bowl executive committee:

"I said B. C. was great the afternoon the Eagles beat Tulane and called them my No. 1 bowl team."

The New England view is expressed by Jack Curley, Boston College's graduate manager of athletics, as reported by Dave Egan in the Boston Daily Record.

Egan points out that the Eagles needed a bowl bid to assure a financially successful season, or football might have been discontinued at the college.

He reviews how the Rose Bowl treated B. C. like just another name in the Sunday morning list of scores, while the Sugar Bowlers "slapped him (Curley) on the back after the Georgetown victory, drank a toast to B. C. after the Auburn triumph and that night assured him that Boston would get the Sugar Bowl bid if it defeated Holy Cross."

"Would you go along," asked Curley, "with men who had befriended you at a time when you sorely needed a friend?"

Rose Bowl Mail Order Ticket Supply Gone

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 9 (AP).—No use writing in for tickets to the Nebraska-Stanford Rose Bowl football game. They're all gone.

The Bowl management announced all of the tickets available for mail orders had been sold. Fifteen thousand remaining tickets will be on sale to cash customers—at 15 ticket windows at the Bowl—early next Wednesday. None of these tickets will be sold through the mail.

PRINCESS BULL ran head and head with POLYCLETUS after the opening furlong, saved ground and was up in the final jumps while under strong handling. POLYCLETUS was rushed to set to the leader, set and forced the pace and fought it out while under punishment. POMARY was hard ridden to gain a forward position and weakened at the close. CREAM CHEESE had early speed and tired.

SECOND RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:12. Winner, Mrs. H. Bowyer's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TANTRUM, $8.20, $4.20, $2.60; BABY MOWLEE, $4.60, $3.00; RELIOUS, $2.60.

TANTRUM, avoiding interference going to the first turn, stalled off SHOTAGUN in the early running. BABY MOWLEE was hurried stoutly to a forward position early, went up to join the winner midway of the backstretch, raced on even terms to the stretch and then tired in the stretch run. RELIOUS, timidly handled, was allowed to fall back going to the first turn. TILE PLATE began slowly and could not get into contention.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:42. Off at 2:24½. Winner, A. B. SOUR CHERRY, in the thick of contention from the start, raced WAR SCARE into defeat to take command, drew clear, but was weakening under punishment at the end and just lasted. DEODO was well placed from the start, responded to pressure to improve his position and just missed getting up. MIGHTY BUSY, off sluggishly, came to the inside in the final drive and closed resolutely. WAR SCARE was under hustling tactics early and weakened.

Daily Double, TANTRUM and SOUR CHERRY, Paid $413.00

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:14. Off at 3:14½. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47⅘.

THIRD TRY, steadied early and kept on the outside, responded gamely when placed to a drive on the backstretch, came around horses and wore down MARTHA'S QUEEN to win under a drive. MARTHA'S QUEEN was hard used while racing with ALARMING, got to the front, but was no match for the winner. ALARMING was rushed to the front, opened a good lead and weakened gradually in the final quarter. KAI MIN lacked early speed and closed willingly.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:42½. Off at 3:43. Winner, J. Brandner's b. f. (3), by Okapi—Play Well. Trained by J. C. Metz. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:15⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—O'PLAY, $3.00, $2.40, $2.20; KINGDOM, $4.80, $3.00; SHAILLEEN, $2.80.

O'PLAY, forced to lose ground at the first turn, went up stoutly on the backstretch to get near the pacemaker, drifted out on the final turn when rallying to strong urging, withstood a severe drive in the closing furlong and wore KINGDOM down in the last 50 yards. KINGDOM displayed much speed to set the early pace and raced SHAILLEEN into submission and continued to save ground when engaged and fought it out determinedly for the closing test. HAREBELL, lost ground at the first turn, was straightened away, but could not reach the leaders.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Jefferson. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:09½. Off at 4:10. Winner, Mrs. F. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOLDIERETTE, $7.00, $3.80, $2.40; RED WRACK, $4.80, $3.00; HERE GOES, $2.80.

SOLDIERETTE, first away, opened a good lead while saving ground and drew clear in the closing stages to win easily. RED WRACK was closest to the pace on the inside and held on while under punishment through the stretch run. HERE GOES raced on the outside of the leaders, made repeated bids, but was held safe. STAND IN worked evenly and showed a good effort. MAECLOUD was not a serious factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:43½. Winner, D. J. BREEZING ALONG, well placed from the start, worked his way to contention on the outside, bumped YANKEE LAD badly in the stretch run and held on gamely under a drive. ACCIDENTAL, steadied while closest to YANKEE LAD'S pace, took command when asked and barely failed to resist the winner. YANKEE LAD went to the front, set a good pace, was steadied when ACCIDENTAL went to the front and was moving again when impeded. Jockey Martinez' foul claim against the winner was not allowed. KISSIN KID was held safe.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al.

We were all shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Cromwell Bosley, the prominent woman trainer, in an auto accident outside Baltimore. Her husband, John, was saddling a horse for J. Bowes Bond here when he heard the news. Incidently, Bond is on the verge of pneumonia, it is said. Mrs. Bosley zoomed into prominence through the gelding, Chase Me. A saddle horse for the first few years of his life, Chase Me came to the races and proved a Horatio Alger horse. He won a maiden race and then kept right on winning as he was moved up the class ladder. Chase Me finally broke his leg while racing with the top flight stake horses in New York. The race, if memory serves, was the one in which Mr. Khayyam was disqualified. The race was the one made famous in the stage and screen play "Three Men on a Horse." Her son, Jack, 18, is a licensed steeplechase rider. Her two daughters, Sarah, 20, and Betty 13, also are much at home in the saddle. Among other horses, Mrs. Bosley developed Betty's Buddy. She recently had taken over the horses of Mrs. E. Graham Lewis to train for the second time in recent years. Jockey Eddie Smith reported ill yesterday and canceled his mounts. Apprentice Jockey Ricco Sisto, who gained some prominence during the Maryland season after riding his first winner here last May, reported at the local jockey's room and went into action. Followers of the smaller track are divided as to the better boy between Sisto and Herbert Claggett. Was I a bit hasty when I wrote that the meeting would not be extended? Art Brown can kid me if he wants to about my car, the Green Flash, but just ask him who won that race from Rockville to Charles Town yesterday. And don't let him tell you that I should have been disqualified. I gave him Man o'-War and I rode Clymene. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Buckle Up ran well around the milers and will be a standout in this company if able to get off the also eligible list. Wenuit has plenty of speed and comes from a good barn. Glitter Girl to take care of the others.

Second race—Bacon Queen should like the track and is at top form now. Gets in with only steadying weight and I'm going to string along. Golden Mayne finds the distance right and will be in the thick of contention. Westly for the minor award.

Third race—Navigation seems to have the best of this event. Breaks off the rail with the light weight of 104 pounds and I see no reason for mistakes. Steel King should have won that last in my book. Bromoria will go well over this track.

Fourth race—Curves showed a surprising effort in that recent try and is not to ambitiously placed with these. May get home at a fair price. Doctor's Nurse is going in good form and is a threat. Blox for the minor award.

Fifth race—Schley Goree is at tops and proved it in previous outings over this oval. Needs only the right ride to turn back this kind. Kamport probably needed that last when he weakened. Promises to be dangerous today. Dulie has the class but raced poorly after pulling up sore in his first outing here.

Sixth race—Blablah appears best of those gathered for this sprint over the Charles Town course. Needs only to run back to that last. Randle's Queen can better that last considerably and is a threat. Roidef for the show end.

Seventh race—Clapair won over this track and may make it two in a row. Carries top weight but I'm going to take my chances. Tyr raced well on the milers and should be prominent. Five-O-Four for the remainder.

Sub race—If this even is used, I'll take Sought After, Kenner and Irish Oak.

Challedon Is Given Top Weight for Race

Brann's Horse Handed 130-Pound Handicap For $100,000 Added Santa Anita 'Cap; Kayak Gets 129 and Heliopolis 125

By the United Press

Arcadia, Calif., Dec. 9.—W. L. Brann's Challedon, strongest claimant for Seabiscuit's money winning throne, today was handed top weight of 130 pounds for the $100,000-added Santa Anita Handicap March 1.

Racing Secretary Webb Everett assured a bitter battle for the stake since the Brann champion's sternest rival, Kayak II, came in but a pound less at 129 in the field of 9 entries.

Coldstream Stud's imported Heliopolis, third in last year's English Derby, was given third spot at 125 pounds. Charles S. Howard, gunning for another double in the world's richest horse race, will enter besides Kayak II the ranking 3-year-old, Mioland, packing fourth high weight of 124 pounds.

Challedon, who carried 133 pounds like a feather in capturing the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup this year, must win the Santa Anita classic, the San Juan Capistrano at $50,000 plus two $10,000 stakes to surpass the Seabiscuit mark of $437,730. However, turf followers felt that his liking for the mile and a quarter of the Santa Anita, his ability to carry heavy imposts, plus the fact that Everett failed to scale him over the near-traditional 130 weight ceiling, counted heavily in Challedon's favor. Lone horse to be assigned more weight was Seabiscuit at 134 in 1939. He carried 130 in capturing the race last season.

Four winners of outstanding 3-year-old races will go postward with weights between 110 and 120. Sweepida, which captured the Santa Anita Derby, was given 117 pounds; Gallahadion, Kentucky Derby winner, 116; Big Flash, Hollywood Derby victor, 114, and Woof Woof, Flamingo Stakes champion, 110.

Whichcee, strong contender in last year's stake, was boosted two pounds to 116, while Bing Crosby's Ra II was upped from 115 to 118. Wedding Call, a surprising fourth last season, came in at the same 106.

Other prominent thoroughbreds included Hysterical, 112; Specify, 115; St. Andrews, 118; Two Ton Tony, 110; Beautiful II, 109, Time Alone, 108; Aethelwold, 108; Sir Jeffrey, 107; Bolingsbroke, 106; Gallant Dream, 100, and Sir Blenheim, 100.

Georgetown Loses Mike Kopcik for Orange Bowl Game

Junior End To Undergo Operation

Knee Injury to Send Punter Under Knife; Defensive Talent To Be Missed Sorely

The booming punts and slashing defensive play of Mike Kopcik, Georgetown's great junior end, will not grace the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. For yesterday the Hilltop announced that Kopcik probably will not even make the trip to play Mississippi State, but will remain here for a knee operation.

Coach Jack Hagerty revealed that Kopcik, whose knee was injured midway of the season in the game with Waynesburg, will enter a hospital here durng the Chrstmas holdays to go under the knife.

The importance of Kopcik's loss cannot be gauged, but he has been Georgetown's lone dependable punter, and the team's best all-around end. The 195-pound star, who has for two seasons been prominently mentioned for All-America honors, did not play a single bad ball game, even against George Washington when the Hoyas suffered a general relapse after their heartbreaking defeat by Boston College.

In Kopcik's absence, it was announced by Coach Hagerty that the punting assignment for the regulars will be handled by Joe Daniels, and that Lou Falcone and Frank Dornfeld will continue to share the kicking duties for the second team.

Kopick's end job will be filled by either Art Lemke, Bill Wixted or Chris Pavich, with Wixted, a senior, likely to get the first call.

Kopick, after being injured against Waynesburg, played out the season with his knee heavily taped and in a brace, but despite that handicap turned in a grand performance in the important Boston College game.

With perfect football weather continuing, the Hoyas worked outdoors again yesterday, and Coach Hagerty plans to keep his boys out in the sunshine as long as is possible.

D. C. Officials Are Invited To Ring Bouts

Boxing Promoter Joe Turner will invite District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, David McCoach and John Russell Young to next Monday's fight between Joey Archibald and Billy Banks in his enlarged and modernized arena.

The temporary partition in the west wall of the arena was knocked down yesterday and workmen will begin the installation of seats today. The seating capacity will be 3,000, including nearly 1,200 ringside seats.

Turner has also made provisions for Congressmen and other officials to attend the first show in his renovated plant.

Archibald is expected here Friday for the first of several public workouts preceding the eight-round fight with Banks, the colored lad who as a sparmate floored Archibald when the latter was training for a 1939 bout with Harry Jeffra. Matchmaker Menendez has completed the supporting card, which includes a semi-windup between Carl Dell, Archibald's stablemate, and Joey Spangler, of Richmond. It will also be over eight rounds.

Cherokee Charlie To Meet Boesch On Rassle Card

In keeping with the news of the day, Promoter Joe Turner is offering one of the last of the Redskins on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Turner is featuring Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Blacksmith, and Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain, but yesterday he upped and corraled himself a full-blooded Indian, Cherokee Charlie by name, in the hope he will score a point or two—maybe!

Cherokee Charlie, hailing from a Redskin reservation in Oklahoma, will be matched against Paul Boesch, well known Pacific Coast grappler, in a special 30-minute bout.

Tom Harmon Says:

By Bob Considine

Ray Frick, Penn Captain and Star

Michigan's All-American Sensation Names 'All-Headache' Eleven in Last of Series Of Articles on His College Grid Career

This is the last of a series of unique interviews with Tommy Harmon, Michigan's great All-America, by Bob Considine. In this final article, Harmon picks his own "All-Star" team from among his major opponents during the 1940 season.

"Here's my idea of a team that would give any ball-carrier a long afternoon of headaches," Tommy Harmon told us at the end of a long session with him.

"This can't be called a Western Conference 'All America'," he added. "Because such a team would have to have a lot of Michigan players on it, for we were the best team out that way this season. Even if Minnesota did beat us. Let's call this an all-opponents team, or, better still, an all-headache squad. Boy! It makes me duck to think of them.

"On the end I'd put Butheris of Northwestern and Clair, of Ohio State. They can do everything an end should do. At the tackles you couldn't find any one better, or tougher, than Bauman of Northwestern and Jim Daniell of Ohio State. At the guards I found Lokanc of Northwestern awful hard hit, and, maybe this will surprise you, but I think that fellow Peabody, of Harvard, is as good as they come, for the other guard.

Frick At Center

"There's no doubt about the center. That's Ray Frick, captain of Penn. When he hits you, you rattle for a week, and you never saw a better ball-hawk or backer-up than that fellow.

"In the backfield I'd put Bruce Smith, of Minnesota, the best back I saw all year; Reagan, of Penn, who proved in the Cornell game that his showing against us was just an off-day; George Franck, of Minnesota and Ollie Hahnenstein, of Northwestern." I'd like to see a team like that run up against one of those pro clubs you read so much about. I think you'd be surprised at what happened."

Harmon continues to declare that he will not turn pro. He told us: "I'd rather take a $5,000 a year radio job—(he studied radio at Michigan)—than a $20,000 a year pro job." However, the annual draft meeting of the National Football League will be held tomorrow (Monday) in Washington and Harmon's name will receive the most consideration. Tommy told us that he had heard nothing of a report that he would be claimed by the Philadelphia Eagles, who have first crack at the college seniors because Philadelphia finished last in the pro league this season. The report is that the Eagles, in turn, will sell their so-called "rights" to Harmon to the rich Chicago Bears. George Halas, owner of the Bears, is ready to test Tommy's assertion. He will offer him the $20,000, according to feed-box gossip within the pro league.

Grid Dynamite

If the pro league gets Harmon it will be getting 195 pounds of the most potent football dynamite seen in years. In the toughest college league in the country, the Western Conference, where several teams each year are admittedly better than the Eagles and other trailing pro squads, Harmon set records which swept Red Grange off the pedestal of college football.

The good-looking, modest, self-effacing dynamo from Gary, Ind., scored 33 touchdowns in his 24 varsity games, breaking Grange's record of 31. Harmon was more versatile than Grange. He did Michigan's passing, punting, field-goal kicking and point-after-touchdown kicking. Thus he scored 237 points for Michigan, against Grange's 186. Grange played four fewer games than Tommy and outgained him in yardage, 4,280 yards to Harmon's 3,533. Harmon threw 16 touchdown passes during his career, averaged 5½ yards every time he carried the ball, and completed 101 out of 233 passes for 1,399 yards, to Grange's 42 completions for 634 yards.

Adulation that would have turned the heads of 99 kids out of a hundred, has rolled off Harmon's back. Speaking of the pro draft roll he'll tell you, very earnestly, "they'd be foolish to name me number one, aside from the fact that I don't intend to play. I honestly think there are several better backs in the country. I'd certainly pick John Kimbrough, of Texas A. and M., ahead of me."

'Skins Disband After Farewell Luncheon

James Albi, of Spokane, Wash., was a guest at the luncheon and unofficially invited the Redskins to return to Spokane in August for a month of training. The Redskins have trained there for the last two seasons under sponsorship of Spokane's Athletic Round Table.

Tickets Selling

As the first detachment of Redskins—14 strong—packed bags to leave last night, the management reported a brisk sale on 1941 season tickets. Espey said that 148 requests for tickets were received and that $280.50 was the actual amount of money taken in—all from fans who never have held season tickets before.

The 'Skins said their "so longs" and "goodbyes" in the lobby of the Willard, pausing only briefly after the luncheon, to answer questions about their defeat.

The luncheon itself has been hastily arranged to supplant a preplanned "victory banquet," and only Willie Wilkin, 208-pound guard, had much to say after it was all over:

"I don't know what happened—we were just cold and never could get warmed up to our old pitch, I guess," Wilkin said. "There were a lot of flukes and breaks that went against us, but those Bears were just 'right' for that game."

Table Tennis Stars Show Here Tonight

Pagliaro, U. S. Champ, To Meet High-Ranking Netters at Heurich

Big-time table tennis will make its season's debut here tonight when National Champion Lou Pagliaro heads a program of exhibition matches at the Heurich gym.

The show will begin at 8:30 o'clock with a match between two of the District's brightest young stars, 14-year-old Carolyn Wilson, the women's champion, and Bobby Bensinger.

Thereafter will follow matches between Pagliaro and three other visiting stars—former champion Sol Schiff, seventh-ranked Doug Cartland, of North Carolina, and ninth-ranked Bennie Grimes, of Massachusetts.

Feature of the program will be the match between Pagliaro and Schiff, whose four-year reign as national champion was ended by Pagliaro last year. Paggy has been undefeated in 10 tournaments since the championships.

A doubles match is scheduled among Pagliaro and Grimes, and Schiff and Cartland.

Reserved seats at $1.10 and general admission tickets at 65 cents will continue on sale today at Spalding's, the American Automobile Association and Columbia Bowling Alleys, and may be purchased at the doors tonight.

Pagliaro and Grimes are scheduled to be interviewed on Arch McDonald's sports program at 6:15 tonight over Station WJSV.

ship also will be the last in the order on the draft, hereafter. Any player drafted before finishing his college career—as was Georgetown's Al Matuza last year by Green Bay—will have his name placed on the board again, and all clubs will be privileged to get a chance at him.

The league's fourth new rule adopted by unanimous consent states that no college football player eligible for further college competition shall be signed by any club without consent of the athletic director of the institution and the National League president.

Coach Ray Flaherty had nothing to say about possible Redskin choices, but the cagey red-head has always been low in the draft list because of his high ranking in the league race.

400 Are Named

Throughout the year coaches in the league have been submitting names of graduating college stars who should be included in the draft list, which now contains about 400 names.

The drawing will be done in rounds, with every one of the ten clubs getting a choice in the first round.

Philadelphia gets the first choice. Pittsburgh and the Chicago Cardinals, who tied for second from lowest position, flip a coin to see who draws second, the loser drawing third. Cleveland draws fourth; Detroit, fifth; New York and Green Bay toss for sixth; Brooklyn and the Chicago Bears toss a coin for eighth, and the Redskins get last choice.

After the fourth round, all clubs continue drawing until each has drawn 20 players.

Then come the fireworks—the business of maneuvering the temperamental college grads into the play-for-pay ranks.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Those well-fed boys of the National Football League went into a room yesterday to decide how to divvy up the college football stars who want to turn pro.

In baseball, if a kid becomes a college or sandlot star, he can sit back and whittle, and wait for the best offer to come along. There was a local case in point. When Charley Keller began to get hot as a member of the University of Maryland baseball club, the big league scouts were thicker than lobbyists around these parts. Keller bided his time. To soften up his coach, who was supposed to be able to tell the boy where to go, the Boston Red Sox bought the coach a new car. But the Yanks outbid Boston by handing Charles a wad of dough and paying off the mortgage on the Keller farm, typical Yankee ingenuity.

CONSIDINE

The same happy condition is true of baseball free agents, as witness the cases of Tommy Henrich and Benny "the unreal" McCoy.

In pro football the team that has the worst record in games won and lost gets first crack at the country's outstanding collegians. Before they begin grabbing, a draft list is made up of the collegians most sought after.

Sometimes the pro boys are wrong in their ratings. George Cafego was adjudged the juiciest collegiate morsel a year ago. The Cardinals claimed him and worked a deal with him with Brooklyn, which claimed Niles Kinnick and then couldn't convince the Iowa ace to play pro ball. You see, of course, there is nothing to force a college boy to play pro ball. But if he does decide to go to the National League, he must go to the team that claims him.

Tommy Harmon, the player most discussed before today's draft meeting, has said he will not play pro ball. But the National Leaguers aren't taking him too seriously—for such pro league stars as Whizzer White, Davey O'Brien, George McAfee and Banks McFadden swore they'd never don professional livery. Dough speared all of them.

We happen to know that the struggling young American League regards the National League's draft system as a dirk in the gizzard of the Sherman antitrust law. It wants some of those top-flight pros, and thinks that it can convince them that the National League's draft rule is grossly unfair. The trouble is that the American League doesn't have the ready cash, or the rep, to do much persuading.

However, we know that the New York Yankees, of the American Pro League, are going to make a determined bid for Harmon. The reports now state that Harmon will be drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles of the National League which in turn will sell its dickering "rights" to the Chicago Bears.

The Chicago Bears needed Harmon Sunday about as much as Rockefeller needs a quart of gas, but that's the story. The American Leaguers will make Thomas a good offer, even if it means going in debt, for they see in him and in an outstanding colored star or two, the hopes of the new league in cutting itself a slice of the rich pro market.

In the meantime, Washington is recovering from the worst sports hangover in its history. The loss of the Senators to the baseball Giants in 1933, four games to one, aroused little or no woe here. The tragic loss of the 1925 Senators to the Pittsburgh Pirates, when Walter Johnson came to the end of his career, was softened by the fact that the final game was played in Pittsburgh. But the Bears' unbelievable 73-0 victory happened right under the township's collective nose, and some of the most rabid Redskin fans—who have been known to march up Broadway carolling the club's praises—were just as rabid the other way as the score mounted. An announcement concerning next year's Redskin tickets was hooted into incoherency, instead of laughed at as comically ill-advised.

A lot of fans in front of the press box seemed to blame George Marshall personally for the massacre. He was pelted with torn programs throughout the third and part of the fourth period, and he finally had to come up out of his box to challenge one persistent heckler. That's a fan's right, we guess, but it seemed slap-happy to us for a Redskin rooter to bite the hand of the man who has been feeding the city its best sports fare in years. Nobody suffered more than Marshall through that game. Even his new fur coat turned gray over night.

The game itself is still too hard to believe. We won't be able to give you a coherent account of just what happened for years. This much, however, can be said. Anyone who ever takes first downs seriously again automatically qualifies for a nut-hutch. For the Redskins, who lost by the wholly abysmal count of 73-0, made 18 first downs to the Bears' 17.

Tom Harmon Voted Outstanding Athlete

Michiga Star Tops Nation-Wide Poll of Stars in All Sports; Hank Greenberg Second; Al Blozis Honored

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 9.—Named to the All-America football team two years in succession and voted winner of the Heisman Trophy as this year's No. 1 football player, Tommy Harmon, of Michigan, reaped fresh honors today as he was chosen the outstanding male athlete of 1940 in the annual Associated Press poll.

Seventy-eight of the Nation's sports experts, asked to give first, second and third choices, named men from ten sports, with nine each from football and baseball.

But for top choice it was strictly no contest. Thirty-two of the 78 ballots put the Wolverine halfback at the head of the list, and there were enough supplementary nominations to give him a staggering total of 147 points, almost three times that polled by runner-up Hank Greenberg, of the American League Champion Detroit Tigers.

Harmon, who finished his collegiate grid career by breaking Red Grange's three-year Western Conference scoring record, kept football at the head of the list for the second straight year. Nile Kinnick, of Iowa, won in 1939, but by a mere eight-point margin over Joe DiMaggio, of the New York Yankees.

Besides Harmon and Greenberg, named first by 11 experts and given 57 points on a 3-2-1 basis, the only others who got more than a single first-place vote were Pitcher Bucky Walters of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, third with six and 40 points; Bobby Feller, of the Cleveland Indians, fourth with seven and 31; Veteran Jimmy Wilson, fifth on nine and 27, and Fullback John Kimbrough, of the Texas Aggies, sixth with four and 18.

Other Leading Sports.

Of the other sports represented, the leading candidates were:

GOLF—Open Champion Lawson Little, one first-place vote and 12 points.

TENNIS—National Singles Champion Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, 3 points.

AUTO RACING—Ab Jenkins, Salt Lake City, 1 point.

In a poll to choose the leading athlete, the leading oddity was the six points given Clark Shaughnessy, strictly a bench performer in coaching the Stanford Indians into the Rose Bowl. The only man to win a two-sport vote was Al Blozis, huge Georgetown youth who is a record-cracking shotputter in track and a bone-bruising tackle in football.

Miami Open To Start Thursday

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 9.—Entry list for the $10,000 Miami Open golf tournament closed tonight with 200 of America's leading professionals and amateurs ready to compete in the 72-hole event over the winding Miami Springs course, beginning Thursday.

The touring professionals, starting their winter circuit, will shoot for top prize of $2,500 and the Harry Vardon Memorial Trophy, one of the game's most coveted awards.

Sam Snead, Shawnee, Pa., who won last year's tournament with 271, had a practice round of 68. Frank Walsh, Rumson, N. J., shot a 31 on the back nine and posted a 67. Ben Hogan, leading money winner of the year and leading candidate for the Vardon Trophy, also carded a 67. Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., another favorite, had a par 70.

Pairings will be announced tomorrow. The field will be cut to 75 and ties among the pros, and 10 and ties among the amateurs during Saturday and Sunday rounds.

Greenkeepers Elect Hook

C. A. Hook, of the Mount Pleasant Club in Baltimore, was elected president of the Mid-Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers in the monthly meeting and election of officers for 1941 last night at John S. Connolly's, in Bethesda.

Carroll T. McMasters, pro greenkeeper at the Woodholme Club, in Pikesville, was elected vice president. Hook succeeds John Roche and McMasters succeeds Reginald Giddings.

The only Washingtonian elected to office was R. P. Hines, greens superintendent of S. G. Leoffler's public courses, who was elected secretary-treasurer, a position held by Hook this year.

Principal business was approval of the annual University of Maryland short course dates for January 27-28. The meeting, election and oyster roast was attended by 25 greenkeepers.

Nine Changes In Federal Tax Laws Urged

Head of Accountants Also Asks Airing of Union Statements

Nine changes in existing Federal tax laws and publication of financial statements by labor unions were advocated at a dinner meeting last night of the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants in the Mayflower Hotel.

C. Oliver Wellington, New York, president of the American Institute of Accountants, in whose honor the dinner was given, outlined the suggested revisions in United States tax laws as follows:

1. Creation by Congress of a nonpartisan commission to undertake a study into the whole tax problem and recommend a consistent and permanent policy of Federal taxation.
2. An understanding and agreement that no changes in tax laws or regulations will be retroactive, so that business transactions can be entered into with confidence as to the definite amounts of tax liabilities involved.
3. Broadening of the base of taxation so that all citizens will pay a tax, even if a very small amount, and thus realize that Government activities cost money and that every citizen must bear a part of the burden.
4. Elimination or further reduction of taxes on capital gains.
5. Reduction of rates of tax in higher surtax brackets.
6. Subjecting to tax interest on future issues of all State and local as well as Federal securities.
7. Provision in the Internal Revenue Code of a requirement for consolidated returns for all taxes based on income, in order to tax a true business unit as one unit.
8. Revision of the computation of taxes for periods of less than 12 months to eliminate unjust hardship and tax avoidance.
9. Elimination of the capital stock and related excess profits taxes.

Audits for Unions Urged

In discussing the need for independent audits and publication of financial statements of labor unions, Mr. Wellington said:

"We have heard a great deal in recent years about the 'forgotten man.' I wonder if the real forgotten man is not the average union member, who does not aspire to office in the union but merely does his day's work conscientiously and effectively. Such a man is entitled to protection from possibly dishonest or racketeering officers of his union.

"Stockholders have been protected by annual audits and by independent public accountants, and this protection has been extended by the activities of the Securities and Exchange Commission requiring greater disclosure of facts regarding the operation of the companies and especially of the relationship between these companies and their officers and directors. If such protection is deemed to be necessary for the average stockholder, is it not even more important to give similar protection to the average member of a union?

"All unions should be required, not only by their own by-laws, but by legislation if necessary, to have audits by independent public accountants and publication of such audits at least to all members."

Few Are Made Public

Mr. Wellington reported that in response to an inquiry addressed recently to 40 unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, 15 reported that their accounts are audited by independent certified public accountants. Two reported that their financial statements are published in the magazines of their unions. Two unions reported that their audits are made by members, not by certified public accountants. Of this group, one reported that its statements are made public.

In respect to the wage and hour law, Mr. Wellington said:

"Our wage and hour law was advocated to help increase employment, but there is already a shortage of trained and qualified men in some industries. The reduction of hours is much more dangerous than the requirements for increased wages. It seems obvious that the production needed for adequate defense in time to be of value will require many more hours and much harder work by all of us. France did not give up her 40-hour week until it was too late. England was very slow to change its business customs to make possible adequate preparations for defense. Are we willing to look the situation frankly in the face and do what we obviously should do for our own protection?"

Notables Are Guests

Guests at the dinner included: Ewin L. Davis, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission; Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Robert C. Tracy, secretary of the United States Board of Tax Appeals; William W. Werntz, chief accountant of the Securities and Exchange Commission; John L. Carey, of New York, secretary of the American Institute of Accountants; Oscar I. Koke, chief of the accounting and auditing branch of the Construction Division of the Office of the Quartermaster General.

McLachlen, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association; James B. Colliflower, president of the Washington Board of Trade; John A. Marshall, director of the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Board; Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District of Columbia Board of Tax Appeals; Arthur J. Sundlum, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; A. S. Fedde, of New York, president of the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Stam, chief of staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Legislation; Thomas Tarleau, legislative counsel of the United States Treasury Department; Edward Dent, Assessor of the District of Columbia; William W. Mackall, president of the Washington Stock Exchange, and J. R. Merrick, chief of the income tax unit, District of Columbia.

Steel Activity Easing Is First In 11 Weeks

Moderate Recession Laid to Repair Need, Drop in Exports

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 9.—Steel operations this week will decline to 96 per cent of capacity, first setback in 11 weeks, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

This represented a drop of .9 of 1 point from the preceding week and compared with 96.1 per cent a month ago and 91.2 per cent a year ago.

The moderate contraction in operation schedules this week was due in part to the closing of some facilities to make repairs after the long grind at almost capacity output, steel circles said. Also there has been some tapering off in new bookings from domestic consumers and a decline in exports to nations other than Great Britain.

The steady upturn in steel making over recent months prompted the institute to estimate that at near midnight tonight the tonnage turned out thus far in 1940 will top that of the previous best full year in history.

It was calculated that at 11:30 tonight tonnage produced thus far in 1940 will amount to approximately 60,835,000 tons, against the total 1929 output of 60,830,000 tons, the previous peak.

10-Week Rise In Bank Loans At 366 Million

Latest Credit Total Is Half Billion More Than a Year Ago

By the Associated Press

A ten-week rise in business loans of banks, apparently due to the defense program, amounting to $366,000,000 in 101 leading cities was reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board.

Completing the ten weeks of uninterrupted advances in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans, the board said, banks in the 101 cities boosted these loans $31,000,000 to a total of $4,942,000,000 in the week ended December 4. The rise brought loans in these cities to a figure $564,000,000 higher than it was a year ago.

New York banks led last week's rise with a gain of $17,000,000.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—The usual Monday quietness prevailed in the gray goods market today and prices remained unchanged. Occasional lots of spun rayon cloth and piament taffetas were sold and novelty numbers also attracted some attention. Silk piece goods were quiet with limited purchases for Christmas retail trade. Large orders were reported in the woolen section for men's spring and summer cloths.

Boston Wool

Boston, Dec. 9 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—The wool market in Boston was very quiet today. Few mills were inquiring for domestic or foreign wools. Graded combing three-eighths and quarter-blood bright fleece wools were offered at 45 cents, in the grease, but no interest in these offerings was shown by users.

Government Bonds Again Move Higher

Active Treasury Loans in Demand At Good Premiums

New York, Dec. 9.—U. S. Government obligations and a selected group of corporates rose easily in today's bond market but the general level of prices underwent little change.

Traders began nibbling at the Governments early and soon found sellers were in no hurry to dispose of sizable holdings except at good premiums over Saturday's quotations. At the close prices of the more active Treasury loans were up 4/32 to 24/32 of a point. Government bond circles remained on the lookout for a Washington announcement on the Government's next operation in the money market. Some brokers believed the action would throw more light on the drive to tax future issues.

In the corporate list changes were generally small. International telephone 4½s and 5s attracted a following early on prospects the company's outlook in South America would be improved by the financial interest this Government has recently displayed in that quarter. The 4½s ended up 1½ points at 29¼ and the 5s were 1¾ higher at 31½. Both issues were heavily traded.

Others ahead fractions to a point or so included Illinois Central 4¾s at 36, International Railways of Central America at 87½, Atlantic Coast Line 5s at 73, St. Paul 3½s at 30 and Delaware & Hudson 4s at 47¾.

Poland 7s, Copenhagen 5s and Sao Paulo 7s were among losers in the foreign group. French 7s moved up 2½ points to 60 on sale of a single bond.

Transfers of $8,916,800, par value, compared with $9,070,700 last Friday.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Last-minute selling nipped rising tendencies in cotton futures today and the market closed unchanged to 1 point lower.

Early gains of 4 to 6 points were dissipated by December liquidation and spot house selling.

The crop estimate of 12,686,000 bales as of December 1 was 161,000 bales below the November 1 figure.

Exports Saturday, 3,956 bales; season so far, 916,141. Port receipts, 18,017. Port stocks, 3,404,123.

2 p. m., WMAL—Remember Bess Erhardt who twirled so gracefully in the Ice Follies at the Riverside Stadium a few weeks back? The show is currently packing Madison Square Garden and Bess takes time from her figure eights to chat with another Superior, Wis., girl who made good, Alma Kitchell, on the latter's Streamline Journal.

8, WJSV—For the last nine years the aged parents of Lynn St. Clair Franks, 44-year-old farm worker of Crystal, Minn., have been seeking to notify him that they have set aside a trust fund of $3,000 in his name. Listen! with Glynn

A musical gentleman, name of Benny Goodman—whose name has got to be synonymous with that thing called swing—has become pretty tired of the condescending attitude adopted toward it by more formally minded lovers.

In fact, in Sunday's New York Times, Mr. Goodman took a good two columns in the staid musical section to come right out and say that "The intelligent swing audience seems to be in closer touch with the musician than its classical counterpart . . . If I've seemed a little overindulgent toward the people who patronize jazz, that's because I don't think either they or the music they love has gotten a fair break in the past. It's not because I deprecate the sincerity of conservative concertgoers. The classics and their followers are fixtures in the artistic landscape. No one has to fight their battles. 'Good music' needs no apologists. 'Good swing,' though, is still struggling for recognition and requires vigorous defense of whatever dignity it has attained."

Mr. Goodman, it seems, is a musician who knows both sides. For this Thursday and Friday he's to be soloist with the august New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, playing works of Mozart and Debussy.

Tonight he's going on the radio—the "We the People" program over WJSV at 9—to go into the thing further. With him will be Deems Taylor, the well-known musical critic, and together they'll try to thrash the thing out to get less snobbishness in music. Should be interesting, no mater which side you're on.
